CRETAN LARNAX USED AS A BATH TUB DURING LIFE AND A COFFIN AFTER DEATH

SMALL PITHOS FROM GOURNIA MARKED WITH SACRED SIGN OF THE DOUBLE AXE

THERE arrived in New York last Sunday a pleasant-faced, dark-haired young woman with a bright, cheery voice and a brisk, alert manner. She is unassuming in her ways, modest, direct, and businesslike, and altogether as little as possible like what the average reader would imagine an eminent explorer and discoverer to be.

Yet this young woman is one of the leading scientific investigators of the time. She is Miss Harriet Boyd of Haverford, Penn., the discoverer of the buried Cities of Gournia and Vasiliki, in Crete, and one of the most successful of those scouts of science who are at work reconstructing the past and bringing the ancient world into the present.

She calls her explorations "campaigns," and treats them as if they were battles by determined, scientific armies to wrest the secrets of ancient days from the earth. She is a General, too, for she is in command of a little army of her own.

It is an army not much over a hundred strong, but that is a reasonably large one for the quaint and little known country community in Crete where she has done her work. Her men are native Cretans, who work under the directions of their little General every day, as long as the "campaign" lasts. She supplies not only the directing genius, but the knowledge of the ground, for before she invaded the Isthmus of Hierapetra there was not even the remotest tradition of the existence of any buried city there.

Of these "campaigns" Miss Boyd has made three. The first one was made in 1901, the second in 1903, and she has just returned from the third. It was in her last campaign that the buried site at Vasiliki was excavated.

This last campaign is the most important of all in scientific results, although in popular interest it does not rank as high as the previous ones. The imagination is stirred more by the discovery of a lost and unknown city which once was perhaps the capital of a forgotten civilization than by less spectacular but more significant discoveries.

But to scientists Miss Boyd's last expedition, just ended, is of more value and interest than the discovery of the city, for she has brought home what may be the clue to the lost civilization. So completely lost is the civilization of ancient Crete, so unknown is its history, that the mere discovery of the city left the investigators still in the dark about it.

This year Miss Boyd has unearthed and brought back rich finds in the ancient pottery of the region. Discoveries in pottery do not sound very impressive to the uninitiated, but it is by the styles of pottery that explorers determine the date of a lost civilization.

Clue to Chronology.

Pottery is the clue to chronology. "People often ask, 'How do you know how old such a city is?'" said Miss Boyd. "We know it by comparing the styles of pottery."

This year Miss Boyd and her little army of Cretans discovered three entirely new styles of pottery. One of these styles shows connections with Libya and another with Troy, connections which were unknown before, and the third style is still absolutely unknown. No one yet knows who made it, and all that is known about it is its relative date. The work of constructing the ancient history of Crete is still far from complete.

Miss Boyd's discoveries fix the date as between the years 1800 and 1600 B. C. Who the Cretans of that period were is not yet definitely known. Crete's aboriginal history is legendary.

The recent archaeological discoveries have tended to establish the fact that the island was settled at some very remote period by the Phoenicians and Egyptians. Those who brought Egyptian civilization to Greece came by way of Crete and left traces there.

The first important historical reference to Crete is in the Odyssey, written perhaps 900 years after the period disclosed by Miss Boyd's discoveries. Here the island is said to have been well populated and the population to have consisted of aboriginal Cretans, Achaeans, Dorians, and others.

Cnosus was then the capital. Greek was the dominant strain in the population, but it is not known whether it was Dorian or of some other type. In Cnosus the fabled King Minos was said to reign, he who was the son and companion of Zeus.

Minos was the King Arthur and also the King Alfred of ancient Crete, and it was he who installed law and order in the island and made a Government.

Inasmuch as Homer lived between 900 and 1100 B. C., and Miss Boyd's discoveries relate to a period from sixteen to eighteen hundred years before the Christian era, it can be seen how far back into a blind and unknown past the little American explorer has gone. There is practically no guide. Whatever civilization reigned in this buried City of Gournia it was undoubtedly something very different from that of which Homer wrote so many centuries after.

Who composed that ancient race is not yet known. The writings found in the buried city by Miss Boyd cannot yet be read. But as the explorations go on they will be, and then an ancient and forgotten, even an unknown, age and history will be added to the world's knowledge.

Among these writings are a number of tablets inscribed with prehistoric characters. Though they cannot yet be read, they are legible, and will undoubtedly furnish in time the key to the lost civilization. Similar tablets have been found by the British and Italian explorers at Knossos and Phaestos.

When Miss Boyd, fresh from Smith College and deeply interested in archaeology, determined to begin her investigations, Crete was practically virgin ground for the explorer. It is yet to a great extent. As long as the Turks ruled there, anything like scientific research was impossible. They would not permit it.

In 1898 the Turkish rule was over, and the powers appointed Prince George of Greece Commissioner General. Immediately there was an incursion of eager explorers.

The British took up several sites for excavation, and so did the Italians. The French made a beginning, but did not succeed, and gave it up.

To Credit of Smith College.

Miss Boyd's was the American work, and it should be mentioned that the discoveries here are to the credit of Smith College. The work has been done entirely by persons connected with that institution, with the exception of Richard B. Seager, who volunteered to help Miss Boyd, and who was assigned to the work at Vasiliki. Miss Wheeler, a Smith girl, was Miss Boyd's lieutenant when the discovery of Gournia was made in 1901.

Miss Boyd was a Fellow of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens. She began her excavations on her own account in a small way in 1900. This resulted in her being made the representative of the American Exploration Society of Philadelphia, and her work since has been done for that organization.

She determined to go to the Isthmus of Hierapetra and study the region. She reasoned that here was the likeliest place to find traces of past civilizations.

It is the narrowest part of the island, being only ten miles across, and Miss Boyd reasoned that it would have been an easy avenue of trade from sea to sea. The ancient mariners used it as canoeists use a "carry."

In order to avoid the storms at the other end of the island, these seafaring traders landed their goods at the north end and carried them across the isthmus.

Miss Boyd saw that the isthmus must have been an important factor in trade, and it therefore followed that cities must have existed there. No plaec in Crete, it seemed to her, was so likely to produce results for an explorer.

She went to the isthmus and investigated. The population was in complete ignorance on the subject. She sought for traditions or legends, but there was none. No rumor of a buried city had ever existed among the Cretans, nor has any one in the modern world ever had a hint of the lost town of Hierapetra.

There was once, however, a story of a Greek city on the isthmus, which was called Minoa. It dates back to the time of Christ or earlier.

Miss Boyd believes that Minoa took its name because of the existence in the neighborhood at that time of prehistoric remains which were believed to date back to the time of King Minos.

"I think," she said, "that in Hellenic times they called such sites Minoan sites, just as we to-day refer to the remains of ancient Greek times as Hellenic sites."

It is considered possible that the Greeks were cognizant of these prehistoric remains, now uncovered, and believing them to be of King Minos's time, named the Greek city Minoa.

Her First Campaign.

In 1901 she began her first "campaign," on the north shore of the isthmus. She collected a force of about one hundred men and ten girls. The latter were kept busy washing the fragments of pottery that were unearthed.

The part played by the ten girls is not unimportant, for it requires a deft and delicate hand to deal with the fragments that are found. Some of the vessels found were broken into hundreds of pieces, and had to be carefully pieced together.

Eighteen of her men were armed with picks and eighteen more with shovels. The rest were employed carrying away earth and stones in baskets and making walls to prevent caving in.

"We work about ten weeks in the year," said Miss Boyd, "and we have to keep the wheelbarrows and baskets going all the time. We work from morning till dark, every day except holidays."

These men are all Cretans, that is, native islanders of Greek blood, who speak only Greek, and they are all Christians. In fact, there are hardly any Mohammedans at that end of the island; it is a Christian stronghold. Over this army of 110 the little General has two overseers, both of whom are Greeks.

One of her little army came to the United States with her when she returned the other day and is an object of much interest to the good people of Haverford. He is a Cretan named Demetrius Pappadakis.

When he landed here he attracted a good deal of attention because he wore the Cretan costume, which included a red sash, baggy trousers, high white boots, with his knees bare, and a high black hat. Demetrius lost his General in Philadelphia, and as he cannot speak English and didn't know anything about the United States except that he was in it, there was much consternation.

After a wild search a day long, Demetrius was found, and has since been attired in a garb less likely to excite remark. He is well dressed in the American fashion, and wears his unaccustomed clothes as if he had worn them all his life. He is a good-looking young fellow, with a bright, intelligent face, and anxious to learn all about the strange country to which he has come. He is Miss Boyd's servant.

The first campaign resulted in a victory, for it brought about the discovery of Gournia, to the vast astonishment of the local Cretans, who had been living there for centuries with no suspicion of the existence of the buried city under their feet. Gournia is a provincial town of the "proto-Mycenaean" period.

Ancient City Found.

The first intimation Miss Boyd had that her selection of a place for her work was made with good judgment was when the diggers exposed the low acropolis of the ancient city.

The explorer found in Gournia about forty houses lining narrow streets, and a small palace for the Governor, and this year she found about a dozen tombs. The houses were built in small city blocks. The narrow streets were paved.

The palace was a provincial copy of the large palaces discovered by British and Italian investigators at Knossos and Phaestos. The arrangement of the town shows no great gap between the local Governor and his townspeople.

The most interesting features are the strictly local character of the arts and industries. No foreign influence is discoverable, and Gournia is the most perfect town of the period yet discovered. Aside from its importance in other directions, Miss Boyd regards the discovery as an interesting contribution to the history of labor.

The prehistoric Cretans were not an uncivilized people. Some of the pottery found shows that they were highly proficient in art. Among them is a stirrup cup decorated with two cuttlefish, and a set of eight drinking horns with various interesting designs. "They will take high rank among prehistoric pottery," said Miss Boyd.

The last exploration in Gournia, made during the "campaign" just finished, resulted in the discovery of the old business and residential sections of the city. The houses are small, but well built, and it is interesting to note that so many centuries before the rise of Greece and Rome the prehistoric Cretans made houses much like those of to-day. They had cellars, ground floor, and one upper floor, and were built close together and flush with the road.

Miss Boyd believes that the city was besieged by an invading force, conquered and burned, after being deserted by the inhabitants.

The work at Gournia has now been brought to a point where it can be closed. While Miss Boyd has been working on the Isthmus of Hierapetra, the British have been at work at Melos and Knossos. The French work was at Thera. The Italian work has been done at Phaestos, and some important discoveries have been made at Phaestos and Knossos.

Miss Boyd has been able to bring back very little of what she has discovered, though her trophies, which will go to the Archaeological Museum of the University of Pennsylvania, will be of great significance and value. The society for which Miss Boyd is working is connected with the university.

Little Brought Away.

The reason why the university is not to have a more complete collection is that the Cretan Government does not allow the best things to leave the island. In fact, Miss Boyd has enjoyed a triumph in bringing away any of her trophies at all.

Those which she has brought to the University of Pennsylvania are the first antiquities that have ever left Crete for any foreign country with permission from the Cretan Government. The explorers at Knossos and Phaestos have been unable to break down this rigid rule.

The law in Crete says in so many words that only those things which are without any scientific or historic value whatever and could not be of any interest to Cretan museums can be taken away from the country. When Miss Boyd desired to bring some of these things to America she had to make out a list and send it to the Minister of Education, who appointed a commission to examine the articles.

Miss Boyd finally induced the commission to let her bring away several thousand fragments and several hundred unbroken objects, which will be important and valuable. "But," she says ruefully, "they wouldn't let me bring away the best things."

How great a victory she did win, however, in getting permission to bring any of them away may be seen from the fact that what she has brought forms the first Mycenaean and pre-Mycenaean collection ever seen in the United States. There is one vase in the Metropolitan Museum and a few fragments in the Boston Museum, but this is the first collection of that period in this country.

"They were kind enough," said Miss Boyd, "to let us have several whole pieces of this Vasiliki pottery, and there isn't a sample of it in the whole wide world outside of Crete, and there is no prospect of there being any. It will all come to Philadelphia," added Miss Boyd triumphantly, for she is a patriotic Pennsylvanian.

Curious Specimens.

When it is considered that by these specimens of pottery one arrives at the chronology and has the key to the history of ancient civilizations, they take on an interest apart from the pleasure they give antiquaries. Among the most curious of them is a specimen which was used by the ancient Cretans as a bathtub, and which they were buried in when they died.

Many of them are marked with the sacred sign of the double axe. The axe is the shape of a battle axe, with a head at each end of the handle.

This double axe corresponded to the holy cross in the ancient Cretan religion, whatever it was. No one yet knows what was the significance of the double axe or how it came to be a sacred symbol. But it was a sign of the ancient religion, and as the explorations progress its meaning will doubtless be found.

The explorer who has done this great work toward the uncovering of a lost civilization and the revelation of an unknown history is a little woman, dark haired and slim. She has a bright, attractive, pleasant face, and winning manner.

The masculine work she has been doing in the world has had the effect of giving her a businesslike briskness in conversation, but it does not destroy the charm of her manner, but rather adds piquancy to it. She is strictly feminine in every way.

In Haverford she lives in a beautiful house, surrounded by grounds that are refreshing to the eye. Her people are among the respected residents of that community, one of the prettiest in Pennsylvania—a country residence for Philadelphia merchants, corresponding somewhat to Montclair and other towns near New York.

She spent only two days in her home after arriving from her last campaign. Most of those two days were spent in the university work, and then she returned to Smith College.

The people round about her home are proud of her as one who has added new glories to the American name in science, and in that capacity she has a title to the pride of all Americans.

SAVAGE ISLAND OF FORMOSA TRANSFORMED BY JAPANESE

Wonders Worked in a Few Years With a People That Others Had Failed to Subdue—A Lesson for Other Colonizing Nations.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The Times to-day publishes the following article from a correspondent, dealing with Japan's transformation of Formosa: To achieve success in any art three things are necessary—native talent, close application, and experience.

The art of colonizing is no exception to the rule. Hence the Germans have failed in their attempts at colonization, notwithstanding their close application, either from want of native talent or from lack of experience; but most probably the fact that the first attempt in any art is usually a failure has been the cause of Germany's non-success.

For this reason Japan's first attempt at colonizing is particularly interesting, especially as the Island of Formosa, which is Japan's first colony, properly so-called, offers difficulties to a colonizing nation which in the past have appeared insurmountable to many other nations.

The Island of Formosa has ever been a favorite haunt of outlaws from China and from various other countries, and the savageness and unruliness of the population were so great that those parts of the country which were conquered several times were never colonized.

The Spanish and the Dutch made attempts at colonizing Formosa, but they gave it up in despair. The Chinese left the land virtually a wilderness, and the French and English, who might easily enough have acquired it, preferred not to put their foot into the interior of that savage island.

Taming the Wild Natives.

Therefore, when Japan demanded Formosa after the conclusion of the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894-5, China was willing, if not glad, to cede it, and Li Hung-Chang remarked sarcastically that Japan would find the island an exceedingly bad bargain.

When Japan entered Formosa she found the coast at the mercy of pirates. The interior was ruled partly by the savage aborigines, partly by organized bands of outlaws and robbers, who plundered ships wrecked on the coast and murdered the crews who approached the island. While murderous attacks on the crews of foreign ships. China was probably glad to get rid of the unruly island.

The conquest of the island took a year, and on the 31st of March, 1896, it was placed under civil administration. But the former Chinese officers and officials who used to be on duty in the island, and who feared to be deprived of their positions, joined hands with the unruly elements of Formosa, instigated them to revolt against their new rulers, and the country was constantly in a state of restlessness and turmoil up to the end of 1901, when a sweeping movement of the troops rid the island at last of its revolutionary elements.

Leniency in Enforcing Laws.

Though the country has hitherto enjoyed only a few years of complete peace under Japanese rule, the appearance of the country and the spirit of its formerly savage inhabitants have already completely changed, and the natives begin to understand the blessings of Japanese rule and to praise it.

The policy by which Japan has achieved this remarkable success has been the following: Japan has, so far as possible, respected the prejudices of the inhabitants, and has tried rather to gently guide than to coerce them on the path of civilization.

For instance, the ancient "Peace Corps," which was established by the Chinese and which protected the inhabitants against the raids of armed banditti, and against fire, floods, and other natural calamities, was maintained, but at the same time the enlightened laws of Japan were introduced. However, while these laws are in the main applied with their full force to the Japanese residing in the island, they are modified in the case of the aboriginal inhabitants whose lack of civilization makes them unable to appreciate at once civilized conditions and the necessity to respect those laws whereby civilization is upheld.

Curing the Opium Habit.

Even the opium habit has in so far been respected that the natives are not punished Formosa as well are punished with penal servitude of varying degrees. But in order to gradually diminish the amount of opium consumed, on the same principle on which a drunkard may gradually be weaned from his drink, the Japanese Government has made the opium trade a monopoly, which it judiciously uses for at the same time permitting and discouraging opium smoking.

Only confirmed smokers are able to obtain opium, and they can secure the drug only under the strictest serveillance. The Government controlling the supply of opium doles it out through licensed agents to licensed smokers, and the police watch with the greatest vigilance that the circle of opium smokers does not get enlarged.

At the same time moral pressure is brought to bear. All doctors have constantly to point out the evils of opium smoking to the grown-up, and all school teachers have to warn the children against the injurious and demoralizing effects of the opium habit.

The population of the island amounts at present roughly to 3,000,000 people, of whom in September, 1900, 169,064 were opium smokers. By the end of March, 1902, only 152,044 were registered and licensed as opium smokers, the decrease of 17,020 having been caused by death or by the discontinuance of the opium habit, and this number will no doubt rapidly be further reduced by the wise policy that is being pursued.

It is significant that the opium imported, which represented in 1900 a value of 3,392,602 yen, amounted in 1903 to the value of 1,121,455 yen only. From a revenue point of view the policy restricting the use of opium in Formosa is no doubt unfavorable, for it means to the State a serious loss of income on the one side, and increased expenses for administration and the surveillance of opium smokers on the other side.

While the Japanese Government has in no way tried to hurt the susceptibilities of the natives by meddling with their religion and their customs, it has given them tangi- law-abiding toilers are no longer terrorized and tyrannized over by robber bands, and enjoy freedom under a just Government. In the second place much has been done for their bodily welfare.

The country used to suffer much from epidemic diseases, which were largely caused by the wretchedly bad water which the natives obtained from stagnant pools and contaminated streams. Consequently the Japanese set about to provide a supply of pure water.

The total number of artesian wells that have been bored in Formosa is not available, but in the Taihoku district alone, where about one-tenth of the population is living, more than 800 wells have been sunk.

Fine System of Schools Started.

Education being the basis and starting point of all progress, Japan has introduced her splendid educational system in Formosa. There are schools for the Japanese, with 60 teachers and 2,000 pupils, and there are 130 elementary schools for the natives with a teaching staff of 521 teachers, who are educating 18,140 children and transforming them into civilized beings.

However, Japan is not satisfied with providing elementary education for the natives, for it is her ambition to give to Formosa the best she has to give. Consequently Japan has established for the use of the natives a medical school, a Japanese language school, and a school for training school teachers.

The medical school in Formosa has the grand distinction that it is the only school in the Far East which gives a regular course of the modern science and practice of medicine to students of Chinese origin. It is domiciled in Taihoku, and at the present moment about 150 students are studying medicine there under the guidance of competent Japanese professors.

The Japanese language school serves two objects. Its purpose is to spread the Japanese language among the natives, and at the same time to furnish opportunities to the Japanese to learn the native languages, and thus to prepare them to act as teach-not only on his security, his freedom from tyranny, and on his bodily wellbeing, but also on his prosperity. Consequently Japan has made it her aim to increase the prosperity of her new colony.

Making Network of Railways.

When Japan took over Formosa there were no roads in existence, but strange to say there was a short piece of railway which was almost useless, so badly was it built and so wretchedly was it managed. Railway fares and freights were changed almost daily, and trains were run "when convenient."

Understanding the fundamental requirements of Formosa, the Japanese started methodically upon road making in many parts of the island, and according to a recent report of the United States Consul more than 1,000 miles of road have already been built. At the same time the Japanese Government mapped out a comprehensive scheme of railways, on which it proposes to spend 28,800,000 yen, or almost £3,000,000, an amount which for a country like Japan sounds almost fabulous.

The piece of railway which the Japanese found in existence has already been thoroughly reconstructed, and a new line from Shinchiku to Takao was commenced simultaneously from both termini with the greatest energy. Between 1897 and 1903, 95 miles of railway were laid, 37 stations were built, and 210 freight cars and passenger wagons and 20 engines introduced.

During this period the number of passengers carried has grown fourfold and the quantity of goods transported tenfold. Besides, light railways were introduced, of which 125 miles were laid within a few months. A further 52 miles of light railroads are about to be built.

The post, telegraph, and telephones have also been introduced with the greatest success. Between 1896 and 1902 eighty-seven Post Offices were opened for the public throughout the island, which, in 1902, handled 13,285,195 letters and post cards and 114,779 parcels, and issued 336,207 domestic money orders. The length of telegraph phone wire have been laid, over which in 1902 3,690,228 messages were sent.

The native industries which were carried on in Formosa when the Japanese arrived were pursued in a very unsatisfactory fashion. Scientific cultivation, and even thorough cultivation, of the fruitful ground was unknown; the natives relied chiefly on the bounty of Nature unaided, and though the Formosa farmer did obtain two, and even three, crops of rice in a year, his harvest was not proportionate to his toil and his income was totally inadequate.

Through the improved methods which have been introduced by the Japanese, the production of rice has increased by 10 per cent. between 1896 and 1902. The production of tea has grown fivefold between the same years, and the other agricultural staple products, such as sugar, sweet potatoes, cane, ramie, jute, turmeric, &c., all show a very large increase.

The enormous forests also were insufficiently utilized, and the wastefulness of the natives was such that, for instance, camphor oil was treated as waste by the native refiners, who extracted camphor from the wood. The consequence of the reforms which have been introduced by the Japanese has been that the production of camphor has steadily increased from 1,534,596 kin in 1897 to 8,588,814 kin in 1903, and the output of camphor oil has risen from 638,603 kin in 1897 to 2,670,561 kin in 1903.

Mining likewise was carried on in the most superficial and improvident fashion, and consequently the maximum of labor yielded but a minimum of result.

By patient tuition and gentle insistence the Japanese have succeeded in introducing improved methods in all industries. The farms yield better harvests, the forests are scientifically exploited, and millions of young camphor trees have been planted in suitable places, and the mining industry has made an enormous progress in the last few years.

Banks and Currency System.

The improvement in trade and industries of Formosa naturally made apparent the the Formosan Bank was established as the central banking organ in the island, and private banking offices were opened in the more important centres.

Post Office savings banks have also been opened, and have had a highly gratifying success. The number of depositors has increased from 5,847 in 1896 to 41,145 in 1902, and the amount deposited from 228,487 yen in 1896 to 763,573 yen in 1902.

The currency of Formosa also had to be reformed. Formosa used to be a country where the medium of exchange was bullion, not coin, exactly as in China, and the bulky copper coinage used to make commercial transactions of any magnitude well-nigh an impossibility. This antediluvian monetary system has now been replaced by the up-to-date monetary system of Japan.

Japan has poured money like water into Formosa. She has established factories for making brown sugar, white sugar, glass, paper, &c.; she has sent out many of her ablest men as administrators, and she will no doubt in due time receive her reward for her enlightened policy.

Only a few years have elapsed since the island has been completely pacified. Nevertheless, the economic ordinary progress which has already been made is very striking. The increased prosperity of the inhabitants may be seen from the fact that the general revenue, which is principally derived from Government works and undertakings, the opium monopoly, customs, and various taxes has expanded from 2,711,822 yen in 1896 to 12,738,587 yen in 1903, having grown almost tenfold.

The ordinary local revenue, which is chiefly composed of taxes on land, houses, businesses, &c., has risen from 747,850 yen in 1898, to 1,952,220 yen in 1902, having almost been trebled in four years. In the collection of the general and local taxes, no undue hardship has been exercised in order to obtain these magnificent results.

It is, therefore, only natural that the population of Formosa has rapidly increased part passu with the development of its resources. In 1897 the population of For-

AFRICA'S LARGEST AMPHITHEATRE

KAIRONAN, HOLY CITY OF TUNIS

THOUGH the North Pole is undiscovered and the Antarctics are only superficially guessed at by even the explorers who have braved Winters there, the rest of the world has become so small with crossing the oceans more of less like ferryboat excursions that the chance of finding something new or old under the sun, not perfectly familiar to everybody else, lessens with the years and the improvements of transportation. The instinct of adventure continues and with the advent of the automobile has increased, so that men go speeding over the earth in search of the new or the forgotten old so that the chunk-chunk-honk-honk of the automobile with the smell of gasoline is familiar to the great majorities of peoples.

It took an American automobilist to discover that the French provinces of Algiers and the Protectorate of Tunis make the ideal tour. He recognized that the French Government has made the roads worth while in that they were built with military design. He found that though the highways of Northern Africa must be frequently used by the nation that made them and has been foremost in building the self-propelling touring cars, yet there the chances were large that because of their great extent there would be stretches unfamiliar to even the French autoist, and, above all, the novelty of a dash in the desert of Sahara. There was the charm of real adventure in a vehicle that might get into trouble. Its occupants might be left somewhere far from water in the caravan track with its sign marks of whitened bones and the further chance that even these might be covered by sand storms.

Automobile in Desert.

This venture into the desert in an automobile was first attempted by Courtney Field Bishop and Mrs. Bishop in a Panhard twenty horse power automobile. Every part had been thoroughly tested and was known to be perfect. There were duplicates of the mechanism aboard that in the light of automobile experience might give way, but most important were the supplies of gasoline and water. Of course there was plenty of canned foodstuff, some of which in an emergency might be cooked over a gasoline lamp, but the greater part of the cargo stored in the automobile was cans of water.

Some one may some time tow an ice wagon into the desert behind an automobile, one that must be of a pattern where the change from ice to water is saved by an enormous ice pan, but the experience of Mr. Bishop in his short jaunt would not warrant this sort of caravan. The original automobilist of the Desert Sahara was content with canned water, that might be worth its weight in gold in the event of an accident. Mr. Bishop was bound for Biskra, the largest oasis in the Sahara, but automobiles sometimes get out of order and abundance of water not far away might create the automobilist something like the agony of the sailor in an open boat with salt water on every side within a radius of some thousands of miles.

Mr. Bishop's trip into the desert was not the most interesting part of his journey, because his machine sped over the sands with ease. The gasoline did not give out, and there was an abundance of water in the machine after his return. He found the Oasis without trouble. Owing to heavy rains, bridges were swept away, so that it was necessary to ford a stream capable of supplying all the camels and the Arabs of the desert with water. Later he met a gentleman in France who, after their introduction, declared that he had seen him before. It was evident to Mr. Bishop that he was at a disadvantage and he asked where.

"Crossing a ford in North Africa," said the new acquaintance. "I took a snap shot of you. As this will interest you I will send you a proof."

Soon after this Mr. Bishop received the picture here reproduced. Speaking of this to a reporter of THE NEW YORK TIMES, he said:

"It may be trite, but it is true, that this is a very little world. There I was crossing the ford with the idea that I was far from civilization, with a white man close enough to snapshot me, and then, not long after I met the man by chance in France. He was sure of my identity and had the photographic record of how near we were to becoming acquainted far from home."

2,500 Miles in Six Weeks.

In the six weeks of his travels, from Feb. 14 to March 24, Mr. Bishop covered 2,500 miles. As grocery stores are not so near together as they are in America the traveler had to plan in advance for his supplies of gasoline. The fear of the automobile propelling power as an unsafe article of transportation reigns in Africa as it does at the ferry slips in New York, where the machines must extinguish their sparks and be pushed aboard. The fluid has to be forwarded by freight and often by coach, and to insure its proper delivery it is labeled as mineral oil.

In this the automobilist finds the greatest problem of his journeying. He has to carefully map out his campaign and see to it that he or his agents have provided for the future, like a general in charge of the commissary department in a military campaign. The planning takes almost as much time as the traveling, but has its compensation in the pleasure of anticipation.

The reckless automobilist, lacking foresight, would have about as much chance in North Africa, particularly on a Saharan journey to an oasis, as a butterfly bound for Hawaii from San Francisco. The camel has as much the best of it in a contest with a careless automobile as the contemplative turtle that raced with the stupid rabbit, but it is very possible that some energetic merchant accustomed to the caravan trade may in time have gasoline deposit stations on a direct line that shall not follow the old zig-zag line from oasis to oasis, but American like, disregard the old theory that the longest way round is apt to be the shortest way home. Incidentally he may have placed at desert stations duplicate parts of automobiles which are apt to get out of order.

Mr. Bishop had to wait ten days for the forwarding from France of a broken chain. The delay was not vital, as North Africa is so filled with historic places that with the good roads provided by the French Government the automobilist may turn into a pedestrian without discomfort.

North Africa was the battle ground of the Old World. Lands that were once fertile are barren, as if nature had decided that the blood of heroes should not fertilize fields where they fought and so used the sands of the desert as a shroud. Man has done more in the way of wiping out records of the past than nature. The monuments built by the conquered and enslaved to record forever the achievements of the victors are almost gone.

The races following the fall of Rome used the monuments of her glory for quarries, so that the splendid columns have been cut up into foundation stones, or intact are a part of crude structures—the palaces of degenerates.

A broken-down automobile in North Africa, away from the great desert, is not an unmixed evil. On every side there is something new and interesting. This is more true of one in working order.

There are the people sitting outside the cafés, indolent and self-satisfied; the second-hand markets where people forget the laziness of a land of sunshine and haggle over prices to their mutual excitement and entertainment. There are on every side the gentle-eyed people of savage instincts, who look upon automobilists with favor because the machine is evidence that they come from "some strange land where streets are paved with gold." It is true that they wonder at the charity of these visitors, confined to giving them copper or small silver change.

When the automobile is at its best along the splendid roads of the north shore, over the highways, blasted from the rock cliffs there are peeps at the sea through the luxuriant cork forests, sparkling and exhilarating; not like foreign scenes where the product of the country brings faraway peoples temporary joy when it pops from the neck of champagne bottles.

Camel Training an Industry.

Of very real interest to the automobilist in North Africa, accustomed to the care necessary in lands where the horse is the beast of burden, is the fact that the camel is more alarmed at the sight of a red, white, blue, yellow, or other colored self-propelling machine than a colt driven for the first time to harness. The big beasts, even the best trained, are apt to be suddenly stricken with the wildest sort of fear. Even the most docile, who have so often seen automobiles that they ought to look at them with sleepy eyes, are prone to suddenly jump into the air, whirl about in mad circles, and then run with the grace of a calf at the first sight of a reaper.

One little, inoffensive automobile has been known to disorganize a caravan, so that the ships of the desert were sent scurrying to the various points of the compass, jettisoning their cargoes of the wealth of the Orient along with their Arab pilots, like a fleet of merchantmen contraband laden at the sight of a whaleboat bearing the flag of a belligerent nation.

Of the many places of particular interest to the Bishop's party the amphitheatre at El Djem holds first place. It is second in size only to the Coliseum of Rome. More martyrs to the Christian faith suffered there in the triumph of their belief. Its preservation from total annihilation is the more remarkable, because it was a quarry for centuries after the Roman edifice was carefully guarded.

According to the best authorities it was built by the first of the Gordion Emperors. Its sands have not only been bathed with the blood of the Martyrs, but before them beasts and gladiators died there for the entertainment of not less than 80,000 spectators. It has also been a central site and fort in the wars of the Vandals, the Byzantines, and of Barbarossa.

Its greatest axis is 480 feet and its smallest 407. The arena is 295 feet long and 197 wide. The walls are 66 feet thick. It still shows a part of its fourth story. The galleries had 64 Corinthian columns each, but many of them are missing through the Arab custom of using the ruins as a quarry.

There is a subterranean cavity with which there are more legends than there is debris choking it, and it may remain for some automobiling American to excavate it in the hope of finding something of interest in its dark channel.

CHIEF JOSEPH, THE NOBLEST INDIAN OF THEM ALL, THE WASHINGTON OF HIS PEOPLE

HE was the noblest Indian of them all. This Caesarian paraphrase was the simple at the same time eloquent tribute paid the memory of Chief Joseph of the Nez Perces by Gen. Nelson A. Miles when the ex-Commander in Chief of the United States Army and captor as well as subsequent friend of Chief Joseph, was informed of his sudden death a few days ago. Perhaps no Indian since the days of Sitting Bull and Red Cloud had had such a kaleidoscopic career as the famous Nez Perces chieftain—the Washington of his people. With his passing another concluding chapter in the romantic and picturesque, no less than tragic, history of the red man in America has been written and sent to the doomsday printer. For, take him all in all, as was said of the mediaeval chieftain in the play, the world will hardly see his like again.

Greatness, even aboriginally speaking, may be measured by the shadow, or reputation, which it casts. Taking this as a criterion, Chief Joseph has for nearly thirty years, or since the famous campaign of 1877, with himself and some 500 of his tribesmen on one side and General, then Colonel, Miles and Gen. O. O. Howard, with a goodly army of troopers and cavalrymen on the other, cast a shadow into nearly every cranny and corner of the country.

Only a few months ago, while the famous old warrior was in this city with an Indian congress, the writer, in company with Col. Lovell Jerome, who was captured by the Nez Perces in the skirmishing around Bear Paw Mountain, and Capt. Hardy, former chief of scouts in the 1877 campaign, secured the last interview which Chief Joseph granted. His decision not to be either photographed or interviewed was prompted by a misunderstanding in which he was besieged and sorely annoyed by a small army of camera men. As the interview was characteristic of the remarkable Nez Perces leader, and revealed attributes seldom possessed and more seldom disclosed by the American Indian, it may be summarized here.

Chief Joseph, in mastering the better qualities of his conquerors, was never able to acquire their language, so that it was only by means of an interpreter that the parley was conducted. Capt. Hardy, had never before met Chief Joseph in person, but he had had several conferences with Chief Platote since the subjugation of the Nez Perces, and between them there existed a cordial friendship.

As the visitors were conducted into his quarters in Madison Square Garden the venerable Nez Perces warrior arose from a blanket on the floor, near a bed. He had been resting, as the bed evidently had worn out his patience as well as his strength. As he gradually arose he appeared to grow more and more dignified, like the fabled Indian warrior who grew in the estimation of his enemies till they declared he was seventeen feet tall. Chief Joseph, when he had reached an erect posture, straightened out his arm and gave each of his visitors a hand clasp that bore irrefutable testimony to his powerful physique. His face and eyes were stern, but his lips smiled as though he were anxious to appear hospitable even to strangers in a strange land.

A Last Interview.

Taking a seat in an uncomfortable chair, he spoke a few words intended to be in English, but which were unintelligible jargon. Fortunately, in casting about, Capt. Hardy discovered that the old warrior spoke Chinook. As the interview progressed the only part which Chief Joseph contributed was an occasional guttural sound like the rolling of barrels on planking. Occasionally, by way of variation, his lips, with considerable effort, gave a ghostly imitation of a smile, but his brow was clouded. He was plainly wishing his visitors to be gone.

If one were interviewing a President such things as the strenuous versus the simple life might elicit something from the interviewed. But to Chief Joseph the strenuous life meant nothing, because he had been nothing but strenuous since he was old enough to sit in a saddle. If one were to interview a theatrical star, some mention of having seen him or her in a recent success would extract a flow of printable conversation. But these methods were of no avail with the Nez Perce (Pierced Nose) veteran—the result was as unprofitable as trying to extract sunbeams from cucumbers.

His gravity was not only the gravity of fourscore years, but the gravity of melancholy occasioned by the presence of skyscraping structures instead of skyscraping mountains around him. But presently Capt. Hardy remembered Chief Platote and mentioned his name to Chief Joseph. The effect was electrical. His whole being underwent a complete transformation in a twinkling.

"Platote, Platote," he reiterated over and over, as he stood up. "Platote," again in loud, deep tones. Then he demanded in Chinook if his visitor knew Platote. Receiving an affirmative reply, he sat down and shook with laughter. Other Indians in the room also laughed and repeated the name of Platote. From a young brave, swathed in a red blanket in a corner of the room came a muffled grunt: "Charley Platote, hi you quitan. Skookum, skookum, skookum, hi you potlach quitan."

Gayety held the Indians for many minutes. It was as though they were laughing for the first time since they had left their tepees in the far Northwest. On asking Chief Joseph at length if Platote were still living, Capt. Hardy was informed that he was still herding horses on and around the reservation.

At the conclusion of another pow-wow of merriment Chief Joseph turned to one of his tribesmen and said something which was interpreted as his inquiring what sort of world it was in which he had come away across the country from the Indian country, passing other Indian countries through mountains and days of great wheatfields, and then of corn, passing through some big cities, and arriving among towering buildings to find a man who knew Charley Platote, the Nez Perces ranchman.

Suddenly his browned and deeply furrowed face revealed glimpses of gathering melancholy. He was even more dejected than he had been jocund a few minutes previously. Chief Joseph raised himself to his full six foot four inches and trod back and forth with bowed head. He was a picture to be remembered—although one of profound dejection.

As he concluded the interview he gruffly remarked that being among so many thousands of white faces made him feel out of place; that the great tall buildings made him feel small, and that the mention of Charley Platote made him feel—homesick.

It was during his last visit here that Chief Joseph was given an opportunity to witness the extreme luxuries of modern civilization as depicted in the Fifth Avenue and Broadway cafés and hostelries. On one or two occasions he was entertained by representative society leaders, but, while he professed amazement at the sights and symbols of wealth, and though he expressed much admiration for the beautiful women he saw, he proved himself a keen critic of everything. Here are a few of his philosophical sayings as translated by an interpreter:

Some Wise Sayings.

Right may not fight first, but it is the last to run.

Even a fool may pass as wise when he is silent.

A rifle has a small mouth, but you remember what it says.

The council house is no place to exhibit your wounds.

To one who has gorged all things taste alike.

Beauty's eye can bind a brave's hands.

No animal envies a human beast.

Concerning the causes and effects of the campaign which ended in the annihilation of the Nez Perces as a nation in 1877, a veteran plainsman who is now living in this city, said: "Chief Joseph and his defensive campaign cannot be dismissed with a word. No man whose exploits are of record ever made a more glorious fight in defense of freedom, lands, homes, wives, and children than did this savage chieftain who led a United States army a chase of 1,500 miles. Defeat was his certain fate, and the annihilation of his tribe almost inevitable.

"That war, so remarkable in many respects as to occupy a unique place in American history, came about through the revocation of a treaty, followed by the slaying, at the hands of a white man, of a brother of Chief Joseph. The Nez Perces demanded that the murderer be tried. It was not done. Then an unfortunate border episode kindled into war. During a common brawl between the whites and reds in 1876 four of the former were killed, and their slayers were known to be Nez Perces. Unfortunately, at this juncture Gen. Howard sent Capt. David Perry, with me as one of the scouts, to the scene of trouble in Western Idaho, between the Salmon and Clearwater Rivers. A chief named White Bird stirred the braves to take the warpath, and Chief Joseph was dragged in by their enthusiasm.

A Great Strategist.

"His conduct of the brief campaign earned him a place as one of the greatest strategists of modern times—earned him the name of the Washington of his people. Completely outwitting the whites for several months, he defeated Gen. Gibbon, dodged around Gen. Howard several months, eluding him for weeks, but was finally cornered by Col. Miles, who, with overwhelming numbers, forced him to surrender. It was early on the morning of Jan. 4, 1878, that Chief Joseph handed his rifle to Col. Miles and voluntarily declared that he would never again fight against the white men. Many times since he could have caused the Government a deal of trouble, but he had steadfastly kept his word, for the good of his people."

"There is no question," said Col. Jerome in discussing his recollections of the Nez Perces campaign, "that Chief Joseph, following the massacre of the settlement near White Bird Creek, in Idaho, by his uncontrollable followers, gave the most remarkable exhibition of generalship in the annals of Indian warfare—a retreat which in my opinion is worthy to be remembered with that of the storied ten thousand. Chief Joseph had hardly 200 men, and was impeded by 350 women and children, besides his wounded, when he led his tribe up the Clearwater River into Montana, hoping to find safety on Canadian soil. Had he had three hours more time he would have accomplished his purpose, being surrounded by Col. Miles and a fresh army when within forty miles of his promised land. I do not think there are more than 300 or 400 members of the tribe living to-day, all told."

MUKDEN, THE MOST SACRED CITY IN THE CHINESE EMPIRE

THE CAPITAL OF MANCHURIA, WHERE THE RUSSIANS AND JAPANESE ARE PREPARING TO FIGHT THEIR NEXT GREAT BATTLE...

IF ONE looks at a map of the present zone of war operations in Manchuria one can hardly fail to be struck by certain remarkable circumstances. The Russian railway, which enters so many of the important cities of Manchuria, makes a wide detour when it approaches Mukden, the most important of all. The Chinese railway from Shan-hai-Kwan, instead of being continued to Mukden, has as its terminus Sing-min-Tung, a small and comparatively unimportant place thirty miles to the west of the capital.

Why, it is natural to ask, should the Russian surveyors who laid out the Central Chinese Railway and the British surveyors who planned the Imperial Chinese Railway have deliberately avoided the capital of this great territory, the wealthiest city in Manchuria, the most important market in the region, and the centre of an ever-growing trade?

They avoided it because they had to. The British capitalists who provided the money for the Chinese line wanted to continue it to Mukden, but China would not hear of it. Russia also found the Peking Government unexpectedly obstinate on this one point. Ten years ago, when China had been beaten by Japan and Russia had stepped in to save her from having to pay the price of her defeat, China was willing to give Russia about everything that was asked, but she insisted on making one reservation. Russia could have Port Arthur, she could build her railway through Manchuria, she could send troops to guard it, but she must promise not to go too near Mukden.

The veneration of the Chinese for this city can perhaps hardly be realized by Occidental peoples. The feeling of the English for Westminster Abbey, of the Italians for Rome, may serve to give an idea of it. But in the Far East the veneration for the past, as expressed in the worship of ancestors, is actually an important part of religious belief, and for this reason Mukden is the most sacred city in the whole great Chinese Empire.

The Manchus' Ancient Capital.

Mukden is the ancient capital of the present dynasty of China. It was there that in the year 1625 Nurhachu, the famous founder of that dynasty, established himself. It was there that the ancestors of the Manchu Emperors were buried.

Mukden stands in the middle of a great alluvial plain, about 320 feet above the level of the sea. All the soil around it is rich and highly cultivated. It is reputed to have a population of 260,000, chiefly Chinese. The houses, both those of the Chinese mandarins and merchants and those of new Russian construction, are built on a magnificent scale.

There is a "Forbidden City" in Mukden like the one in Peking, but while the Boxer outbreak of 1900 was followed by the entry of the allies into the hitherto mysterious palaces within the inner walls of Peking, so far as is known no European or American has ever penetrated into the Forbidden City of Mukden. It is believed to contain wonderful treasures of ancient art and buildings which surpass in beauty and elaborateness even those at Peking.

Judging from the portions of the city which foreigners are allowed to see, the place must be a very treasure house of the art of the old Chinese. Even the streets are full of carvings of a delicacy unattainable in modern work, while the tombs of the Emperors combine a purity of design with an elaboration of detail which show how far the art of China has deteriorated from the old standards.

Surrounded by Great Wall.

The city is surrounded by a great brick wall, with picturesque high towers at the eight gates and the angles. Outside are the suburbs, inclosed by a mud wall, while in the middle of the city are the ancient palaces of the Manchu Emperors inside a third wall. The streets of Mukden are broad and straight. Like Peking, the city possesses a drum tower and a huge bell. The administration buildings and the Hall of Examinations are within the precincts of the Forbidden City.

The early history of the warlike monarchs whose chief city was Mukden, and who in the seventeenth century became the rulers of the whole Chinese Empire, is veiled in legend. Three heaven-born maidens, so the story runs, were bathing one day in a lake near the Shan-a-Lin Mountains, when a passing magpie dropped a ripe red fruit into the lap of one of them. The maiden ate the fruit, and in due course a child was born to her, whom she named Aisin Gioro, or the Golden. When Aisin Gioro was a lad he was elected chief over three contending clans. His reign was not of long duration, for his subjects rose against him and murdered him, together with all his sons except the youngest, Fancha, who was miraculously saved from his pursuers.

It was Aisin Gioro who named his people Manchu, which means "pure." His descendants, through the rescued Fancha, fell into obscurity until the middle of the sixteenth century, when one of them, Nurhachi, born in 1559, the seventh in descent from Aisin Gioro, welded the Manchu tribes into one great kingdom. The Emperor Nurhachi, toward the close of his long and illustrious reign, transferred his capital to Mukden, and his tomb there is the most venerated of all the royal tombs of the city.

The Manchus' Conquest of China.

In 1617 Nurhachi drew up a list of "seven hates" against the Chinese, and declared war on them. The Chinese were defeated with great slaughter and seventy cities were captured. The war was followed by an alliance between the Manchus and the Chinese, who were then ruled over by the Ming Dynasty. The later Emperors of this dynasty were weak and cowardly, and China was continually invaded by the Tartars. In the end the Manchus were begged to save the country. They consented with great alacrity to send an army, and the result of it all was that in 1644 the grandson of Nurhachi ascended the Dragon Throne without serious opposition on the part of the Chinese. He was Sun-Chi, the first of the Manchu Dynasty, which has retained the throne of China ever since.

Mukden is identified with all that is glorious in the records of the Manchu Emperors and the Manchu people, who have become so intermingled with the Chinese that the veneration for the city is shared by all the inhabitants of Northern China. Under these circumstances the Peking Government's anxiety as to the fate of Mukden can be understood.

The Chinese are a long-suffering people. Foreigners can insult them, enslave them, massacre them, and they will bear it all meekly. There are few things for which they will fight. But they will fight for religious reasons, and it is better for a European or American to treat them with the utmost brutality than to do anything to offend their beliefs. The terrible Boxer outbreak was the result of a wave of religious fanaticism; the manner in which China had been deprived of one slice of territory after another had hardly anything to do with it.

This being so, it was hoped that the Russians and Japanese would do what they could to respect the sacred tombs and the other relics of the past in the Manchu capital. Both belligerents know the temper of the Chinese; both are aware that to desecrate the Mukden tombs would result in a wave of passionate indignation in China, and both are naturally anxious to keep on good terms with the Chinese.

Damage Seems Inevitable.

But whether damage to the tombs can now be avoided is questionable. The tomb of Nurhachi himself lies four miles east of the city, but the tombs of his descendants are within the walls, and it seems impossible that they could escape damage or destruction by artillery fire should Mukden be attacked.

The Japanese cannot be expected to allow the Russians to remain in Mukden without an effort to dislodge them, and it therefore remains with Gen. Kuropatkin to say whether the sacred city of the Manchus shall remain inviolate. Russia, as has been said, has no desire at the present time to offend the Chinese, but there is another factor in the question which may be regarded as overweighing this one.

In the eyes of the natives the possessor of Mukden is the possessor of Manchuria. The whole administrative machinery of the region centres in Mukden as completely as that of Korea does in Söul, and the moral and political effect of a withdrawal by the Russians would be incalculable.

This is the little problem that confronts Kuropatkin. If he quits Mukden the Chinese will lose what respect they still retain for the Russians; if he remains there and any harm happens to the sacred tombs, the Chinese will say it is the Russians' fault, and may become incensed against them to the extent of openly aiding the Japanese. It must be remembered that China not only obtained Russia's promise before the railway was built that it should not go near Mukden, but when the present war began and the question of the neutrality of China came up, the Peking Government made a special stipulation that Mukden should not be excluded, as was the rest of Manchuria, from the neutrality arrangement.

Russians Now Outside Town.

So far as is known, the Russians are not at present occupying any part of the Chinese city of Mukden. The Russian military station outside the town, however, completely commands the ancient walled city, and it is only too probable that if a battle at Mukden occurs the Chinese city will be in the position of the individual who finds himself between two cowboys exchanging shots across the street.

Even in these days the immense walls around the city may be found useful by a defending army, particularly as the Russians' defenses round their settlement are believed to be of a very imperfect character. It was only at Liao-Yang that millions of dollars and an incredible amount of labor were expended on the construction of defensive works. The defenses at Mukden are temporary field works, originally intended only to protect the Russians against the not very serious attacks of bands of Chunchuses, as the Manchurian bandits are called.

This being so, it is easy to imagine part of the Russian army being sent to hold the Chinese city, using the great walls as artillery mounts, and firing across the level plain which surrounds the town at the advancing Japanese. It is equally easy to imagine the terribly effective Japanese artillery being used to bombard Mukden and working havoc among the tombs and in the Forbidden City.

This is the nightmare which possesses the authorities at Peking, and during the last few days they have been begging both the Russians and Japanese not to fight at Mukden. The belligerents, according to one report, will do what they can to avoid a battle there, but as circumstances now stand it is difficult to see how they can help making the city a battleground.

Of course, if Gen. Kuropatkin had expected that the Japanese would have been able to drive the Russians from Liao-Yang, it is extremely probable that he would not have made Mukden a great storehouse of military supplies and would have concentrated his troops at Harbin early in the war. The evacuation of Mukden then would not have had the moral effect on the Chinese that it will have now, and the Russians would have been in a much better position to fight a defensive battle.

For while at Liao-Yang the advantages were all on the side of the defenders, at Mukden conditions are very different. While behind the Russian army there will be only the one communication of the Central Chinese Railway, there will lie behind the Japanese three excellent means of communication with the coast, first the railway to the Liao-Tung Peninsula and Niu-Chwang; second, the railway to Sing-min-Tung, and, last but not least, the Liao River, which is navigable all the way from Niu-Chwang to within a few miles of Mukden.

PEARLS FROM THE MISSISSIPPI.

How Precious Gems Are Taken from the Mollusks in Fresh Waters—Diving for Deep-Sea Riches.

By DR. T. BYARD COLLINS.

PEARLS as large and beautiful as any brought from distant parts are being fished for and found in the Mississippi River. As I write there lies before me one of these gems, pink, pear-shaped, translucent—all the qualities which stamp it with marks of value—and this is only a souvenir secured from among many of these precious formations and brought home as a memento of a delightful and profitable sojourn in one of the most attractive spots to be found along the thousand miles through which the Father of Waters wends his giant way.

Literally, the pearl may be called a by-product. Its inception is due to accident; its growth is an abnormality; the finding of it is a matter of chance, and in most localities the aggregate value of the shells in which the pearls are occasionaly found is far greater to the fishermen than the gems which are secured from them, so that in these regions, as in many others, the men engaged in the industry are known, not as pearl fishers, but as clam or oyster fishers, as dredgers, or clammers. Few of these men would continue their present employment if it were not for the steady demand and fair prices which they obtain for the shells of the mollusks, of which thousands of bushels are taken out in the course of a Summer's fishing. But every clammer goes to his task at the beginning of the season and renews it from day to day immensely stimulated by the hope of finding one or more pearls which will compensate him many times over for the labors of the entire year.

In this locality the fishing lasts from May till October, and the clammer usually takes up his abode at some spot along the shore which appeals to his fancy and within easy rowing distance of which he intends to fish. His abiding place for the Summer is a "shack" or a tent, and here, usually, his wife and children join him. Several families often locate near each other and thus a clammers' village is formed. The actual fishing is often alternated with opening the mollusks, removing the meat and looking for pearls. Often the father and perhaps an older boy continue the fishing while the mother and other children attend to the remainder of the process, but so great is the interest in the search for pearls that the opening of the shells is usually watched or participated in by the entire household.

A boat of mollusks being unloaded upon the shore, they are, in the course of the day, thrown into a rude trough which is partly filled with water and under which a slow fire is built. The water having become sufficiently warm, the shells are opened without difficulty. Careful inspection is then made for pearls, the meat is removed, and the shells are tossed upon a heap or placed in bins against the time of their sale and transportation.

Where Gems Are Found.

The pearls are usually found between the meat and the shell, though the fleshy portion is also carefully felt of, since valuable "finds" have occasionally, though rarely, been made upon the interior of this portion of the bivalve. The pearls, though of accidental formation, are really very numerous, and every fisherman is practically certain of finding several during each month of his fishing, but of these—either on account of want of size, of undesirable shape, of specks and flaws, or want of color and sheen—only a small number have any considerable worth, and only a very insignificant numerical proportion may be called really valuable.

The formation of a pearl is due to nature's intelligent effort at self-protection. It is a well-known fact that a bullet, a piece of needle, a fragment of metal, may enter living flesh, and after a while cease to irritate—a cartilaginous growth has formed over the foreign object, completely isolating it from the surrounding tissue and rendering the intruding substance harmless—it has become encysted, as they say. The decay of a tooth is frequently found to have gone on till the nerve should long since have been exposed, but upon the extraction of the now useless member the surgeon finds by dissection that as the decay went on the nerve receded from the position it normally occupied and nature built, in its stead, a wall of bone to protect the retreating nerve from the irritations of the advancing decay. So the pearl is the result of an accident. An irritating substance, formerly thought to be invariably a minute grain of sand, but now believed to be a living parasite, finds its way between the mantle of the mollusk and its shell, becomes a source of irritation and determines the deposition at that point of matter which is in every way similar to the interior lining of the shell—that is, to "mother of pearl." The substance is deposited in regular plates, the pearl is built up analogously to an onion, and its successive layers may be peeled away without destroying the symmetry or contour of the gem. But in the great majority of cases it is only the first or outer coat which presents the sheen and opalescence which is so pleasing to the eye, and hence so valuable, and to remove this would be to destroy its worth. When, however, the pearl is of good size, but on account of a lack of lustre, the presence of specks, flaws, or other defects it is valueless, it is peeled down in the hope of finding a brilliant layer, and once in a great while the operator is rewarded for his labor and his hope is realized—a shining surface is reached; a valuable gem is disclosed.

Buried Riches.

In the course of the mollusk's growth the pearl may become imbedded in the normal deposit of "nacreous matter," as the "mother of pearl" forming the interior of the bivalve is called, and ultimately be buried in the substance of the shell. In such cases some fine pearls have escaped the eye of the searcher and been unexpectedly brought to light by the workman who was cutting up the shell in the shop. In the great majority of cases the pearl is found attached to the shell and has to be pried off or cut away. The point of attachment has naturally interfered with the symmetry of its growth and the successive deposits ultimately form a pearl of hemispherical shape—flat on one side and symmetrically convex on the other—known among jewelers as a "perle button." A perfectly round pearl is one of the valuable forms, because most unusual, and is obviously the result of having remained loose in the soft tissues of the mollusk.

Three centuries ago it was a conceit of fashion to form ornamental objects of grotesque design by mounting curiously shaped pearls in enamel and gold. A valuable collection of such ornaments is at present preserved in the Green vaults at Dresden.

As carried on in the Mississippi and other rivers of this country the clammers pursue a very simple and primitive plan. Two rods are used, either of wood or iron—the latter, if obtainable, because in that case "sinkers" are not necessary. Pieces of gas pipe are usually selected, to the centre of which the fishing line is tied, and throughout the length of the rod the hooks are attached at intervals of a few inches by means of short pieces of suitable cord. The hooks are merely bent pieces of stiff wire and are provided with neither point, barb, nor bait. On either side of the boat or bateau a rack is reared upon which to hang these rods when the fisherman is rowing to and from his work. During the day one of the rods may always be seen in its rack, placed there after being drawn from the water, the better to facilitate the removal of the bivalves from the hooks, while the other rod is dragging from the stern of the boat, which is carried down stream by the current. As the rod passes slowly over the mollusks their open valves close dumbly upon the disturbing hooks, there to cling till every hook has its victim and rod. Hooks, clams, and all are pulled to the surface by the fisherman, who then lets down the other rod, lifts the loaded one to its place in the rack, and proceeds to pull loose his "catch," throwing each clam upon a heap of its foolish fellows in the boat.

Very prosaic is all this when compared with the method of obtaining pearls from the sea, for if these precious formations are found in the Mississippi and some other rivers of this and other countries, they are found also in oceans near and far—in the waters off the coast of Lower California, in the Gulf of Mexico, about the islands of the tropical Pacific, in the Bay of Panama, in the Persian Gulf, in the Indian Ocean, and in the Sulu seas. Here divers go down and gather the mollusks, which lie in from twenty to fifty feet of water, throughout which sharks, swordfish, and other fighting creatures of the sea abound, and as the diver wears neither diving dress nor bell, the perils of his calling may readily be realized.

Diving for Pearls.

The Indian fishing grounds are under the control of Government Inspectors, who regulate the fishing and permit it only when they consider the banks to be in a satisfactory condition. The fishing season begins about the middle of March and ends by the first of May. The banks lie several miles from the shore, and at midnight a considerable fleet of boats starts so as to be ready for business at daylight. The boats each carry several divers, who work in pairs. A gunshot from the shore indicates the moment for diving to begin. The diver is let down by a cord to which a "sinker"—a heavy stone—is attached to facilitate his descent. He carries with him a small basket for receiving the bivalves, and a short ironwood spear with which to defend himself.

Once down, he seeks to fill his basket as quickly as possible, using for this purpose both his fingers and toes and all with equal facility. On an average he remains under water from a minute to a minute and a half, though many can endure a much longer submergence, some men being able to remain below for as much as five minutes and more. In the meantime his fellow-workman at the surface watches the signal cord with keen interest—a human life is literally hanging by a thread, and its saving may at any moment depend upon his fidelity. Moreover, he will presently exchange places with his fellow, and it will then be his own life which will be in peril. Indication being given, he draws up first the sinkstone, then the basket, and lastly the diver himself. After resting at the surface for a few moments he descends again, and so on till exhausted, when he clambers into the boat and exchanges positions with his companion.

Not only is the diver exposed to the attack of sharks and to accidents peculiar to his occupation, but the strain on his nerves and his tremendous exertions in a tropical climate render his calling an exhausting one, and as a rule he is a short-lived man. The Polynesians do not employ sinkstones. They anoint their bodies with oil and are true "divers." The women are said to be more skillful than the men.

But fresh-water pearls are not to be despised because of the greater ease with which they are obtained. It is their size and beauty which make pearls valuable, and sound judgment and good taste will not hesitate because of the place in which a gem is found. A breastplate studded with fresh-water pearls was thought worthy of being dedicated to Venus Genetrix by Julius Caesar. How just, therefore, is the complaint of one John Spruel, who, writing in 1705, declared: "I have dealt in pearls these forty years and more, and yet to this day I could never sell a necklace of fine Scots pearls nor yet fine pendants, the generality seeking for Oriental pearls because further fetched. At this day I can show some of our Scots pearls as fine, more hard and transparent than any Oriental." But dealers to-day have no such charge to bring against the good taste and good sense of the purchasing public—least of all American dealers—as relating to the beautiful pearls of our native rivers.

From days of old pearls have been highly prized for purposes of decoration and personal adornment. They have been worn in the girdles of queens, in the armor of warriors, in the crowns of Kings. They have adorned the robes of priests, the tiaras of vestals, and the altars of gods. Their soft and modest beauty has held equal honor with the rosy glow of the ruby and the sparkling splendor of the diamond. Among some Eastern nations they have been more highly prized than any other gem. The religious books of the Hebrews use the pearl for purposes of highest comparison, and in its Oriental language eternal salvation is "the pearl of great price." During generations throughout the growth, the glory, and the decay of empires, the pearl fisheries of the Red Sea and of the Persian Gulf were steadily prosecuted, and pearls were purchased by people of wealth and worn by beautiful women at social functions in Jerusalem, Memphis, Athens, and Rome. Twenty-two centuries before our era pearls are enumerated as tribute or tax in China, and it is reasonable to suppose that in that distant past these charming products of nature were used to enhance the beauty, decorate the person, and adorn the garments of refinement and culture. So long as the modest, the pleasing, and the precious is esteemed of value, so long will these rare and charming gems maintain their place in the estimation of mankind.

It is not strange, then, that pearls have been counterfeited. Though they are found in white, cream, pink, black, and bronze, all of these colors are imitated in one way and another. An excellent semblance of a white pearl is formed of a glass globe or bulb, the interior surface of which is coated with a substance made of fish scales and other ingredients, the bulb being finally sealed with white wax.

But the Chinese produce real pearls which are at the same time artificial in that a minute particle of irritating substance is carefully inserted by means of bamboo tweezers upon the inner surface of the shell of the mollusk, after which the valves are closed and the oyster is deposited in a suitable bed and nourished by effective means for a period ranging from a few months to a few years, as the case requires, when it is found that a real pearl has been produced. This is a perfectly reasonable process, and is by no means as slow and tedious as may at first appear, though there is no certainty that the pearl produced will be either large or valuable. However, thousands of shells are thus treated in the course of a season, and from an industry which may be called the manufactory of artificial natural pearls certain Chinese firms are said to derive an immense profit. It is an industry which yet remains to be developed by the skill, intelligence, and ambition of Western science.

The shells of the pearl-producing mollusk are everywhere used in the manufacture of buttons, ornaments, &c., and this accounts for the steady market for this portion of the bivalve.

IN THE HEALTH BOARD'S MAIL BOX

Some Curious Missives and the Wrongs They Chronicle.

OF all the municipal departments, the Board of Health probably receives the heaviest daily mail. And 95 per cent. of this daily mail is complaints—the other 5 per cent. being made up from applications for positions, suggestions for running the department, and occasionally—the occasions being far apart—a word of commendation for the work of the various officers.

The complaints are all opened, read, and filed by one clerk. If they demand an investigation, an officer is at once sent out; but many of them are never investigated, either because the letter is illegible or no address is given, or because the complaint is in no way connected with the duties of the Health Department.

The complaint clerk must be able to read various languages, as over half the letters are written by foreigners. German script, Hebrew, and Arabic all reach his desk. These can be interpreted. Not so easy are many of the letters written by foreigners who are just mastering the English language and who mix the old patois with the new in a most exasperating manner.

Ninety per cent. of the complaints are anonymous, but this fact does not deter the officers from investigating. The anonymous complaint, which usually emanates from spite is pretty sure to reveal a real fracture of the health laws. Women send in the majority of the complaints in writing, and back of the complaint there usually lies a neighborhood quarrel.

Pet animals of every imaginable species lead up to many complaints, as some of these letters will show:

"To the Board of Health: Dear Sir—Please, I think you would attend to —— Street, as there is two dogs there, and there actions is disgraceful to the children and mothers of the tenement houses around there, and the men from the factories enjoys the fighting very much, but our halls and yards, they can't be kept clean for those dogs, and the people that owns the dogs, he is a policeman, and he doesn't stop there actions, and will you please come and invest his dogs before hot weather comes? Yours truly, ——."

This complaint, written on a postal, is more to the point:

"Mrs. G—, with the bad dog is 768 —— Street."

Another postal done in most careful printing, reads as follows:

"Are you going to let goats rule New York? Fifty of them from One Hundred and Sixth Street to One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, east of Second Avenue, make life a burden to the Irish—the Italians own them. Don't let your Inspectors fool you. Send an Irish cop!"

In one particular neighborhood they have been having no end of trouble over pigeons, and here are a few soulful letters called forth by complaints and pleadings:

"Dear Sir: I do not see why you find fourl [fault] with one person and not on the other. Two fellows have a pig in there home at —— St., and Mrs. G—, she has two pigeons in the room and her boy, he stays home from school to files [fly] them from the fire escape. And the other boy, he stays home with the pigs."

This letter evidently followed on the trail of investigation:

"Dear Sir: I have no more pigeons on the premises of —. I am working every day, also my wife goes out; there is no one home during the day. I go out with my wife Sundays, so I don't bother with them pigeons any more. Kindly pay no attention to complaints, as I have no pigeons. They are hard luck; I never had no luck with them. The first time I get time to come down to your office and find out who does this thing to me I will spend some money. I will fix them. Another thing, if I have pigeons I have to move. I would not move for the best pigeons living. Take this from me. It is from my heart, and kindly excuse lead pencil. "MR. S—."

That Dreadful Parrot.

"Gents: Is it sanitary to teach children to swear? Mrs. J—, next door, she has a parrot that swears at my children, and so they now swear to me, and this is not healthy for the neighborhood. If your officer, he goes to Mrs. J—'s house, the parrot will not swear, because she has him fixed to not swear before strangers. But if he comes to my house and sits by my window when the children are coming home from school he will hear such language as I cannot write. Do this soon."

The cleverness with which the average complainant works in the word "sanitary" when she addresses the Board of Health is truly amusing. Sometimes, however, the correspondents choose their words with a delicacy which is equally amusing. For instance, this wail from the heart of the east side:

"I notice on the walls and floors of the apartment of above house some peculiar kind of insect which may be cause of disease. A RESIDENT."

Neighborhood quarrels of all kinds are brought to the Health Board for arbitration and settlement.

"Mrs. —— has told me that some one said she is not a good mother to the baby—she is a good, sober, clean woman, and her house is always clean. I have had occasion to call there several times, and always found things all right. Mrs. G."

"To bord heidt—iff you will call at 100 E—— or watch itt you will find thar is a colored lady carying ded cats out and laying them on stret at nite. 15 to 20 a week—lady off house name is Miss —— she kills them."

Here is one that would stagger the most expert officer on the force:

"Dear Gentlemen: Mrs. B—— of —— Street is always rubbering in the hall of No. —— to hear every word that is said in our house and sometimes she go to your door to another in the hall just to hear other people's business. We cannot talk to our husbands for we are afraid that she is listening in the hall. some evening when are fighting and she say such bad words that I will not mention here for you can state yourself what kind of a word they use. Will you please make a stop to it for we are going mad for we do not know what to do and the words they say and all the people in the houses here it I reference you to Mrs. B—— and Mrs. J—— and see what they say. Yours—A TENANT."

Sometimes these quarrels bring to light cases which the officers are only too glad to investigate. Here is one:

"Dear Sir: On the top floor of this house lives a tenant named Mrs. ——, and with her a girl lives in her bedroom, and she is sick and she hasn't been down for a few days, and Mrs. C—— she don't care and gives her nothing to eat, and so she wants to ride away from this places and so as yous look after the affairs of the city I would like you to come and look it after. You will oblige every one."

The ambulance "obliged," and found a girl suffering with contagious disease.

A Refuge for Cranks.

All sorts of cranks address themselves to the Health Board.

"Dear sir—my health is being impaired by several people, keeping their X-rays upon my brain. I have pains in my head and eyes. I live top floor of 300 —— St. and Dr. B—— has one on me nearly always day and night."

"Gentlemen: It seems you haven't stopped Mr. C—— of —— Street from using bad language toward his wife. We here him. Kindly put a stop to him as requested before."

"Gentlemen: I have a son nineteen years old who constantly comes in from the street and brushes his clothes in the bath-tub instead of the open air on the roof. As quick as I clean it he makes a stove-cleaning place out of it. Forbidding it is useless, so I have appealed to you. Can you do anything for me?"

"Will you kindly see to a drug store at S—— and W—— Street on account of not treating customers right? I bought some medicine for my mother's eyes, and it was all right when the man gave it to me, but the next time I bought it I told him it was not from the same bottle, and he said it was good. The eyes were pretty good already, and now they are spoiled on account of using the water. I went back and told him so, and he threw me out and obliged MISS B——."

"Kindly investiage the condition of the carpet in the halls of — Street. They are full of molecules which, as you must know, have been the direct cause of smallpox and diptheria. This certainly ought to be investigated for the sake of the tenants."

"Beloved Friends: I have found the rite kind of bred, (bread,) that I have been looking for—it is the D—C—, the holest hole wheet bred at 6— S— St. Brooklyn. This bred would be the rite sanged for the health department to adopt. Respectfully, A CHRISTIAN FRIEND."

Other letters disclose the fact that a man in Texas has lost his nose in an accident and wants the Board of Health to furnish him with a new one if he comes to New York; a boy who has been beaten by his teacher at a certain church school pleads for redress, stating that "already, you, that buckle on his belt has given me a welt on my neck and a welt my hed on," and "a citizen" who has "six years lived in this same house," and not once has his ash barrel been removed and cleaned properly, "will carry the matter to President Roosevelt if something is not done soon," as the barrel and the odor thereof are ruining his business.

Another correspondent writes that the night before he had entered his flat house at a late hour and stumbled over a drunken man. If the Health Department does not immediately stop men's sleeping off drink in hallways said writer will see that Dr. Darlington is removed from office, as he has a pull with Charley Murphy.

This is the way one communication was addressed:

NEED SEA LEGS HERE.

IF you want to see one of the curiosities of the town, said the man, "come in here," and they went into an innocent looking part drug store, part wine shop, in front of which was a more innocent looking sign, which read:

"A glass of claret for five cents."

He preceded her to the back, where they presently entered a small room, which was built after the fashion of a ship's cabin and furnished likewise. Small wooden tables were fastened securely to the floor, the seats ran around the wall and were also securely fastened, there were imitation portholes through which one caught glimpses of the sea, little marines, and fish preservers hung on the ceiling.

There were couples at every table but one. They took that.

This was not the only room evidently. Back of curtains there was the sound of revelry. Beyond this room stood the ship's sideboard, filled with the wherewithal to make cocktails and other things.

The couples were busy drinking. At first they behaved in a sedate way becoming to their dangerous position on the high seas, but soon the lurching of the ship appeared to affect them. They laughed hilariously over nothing apparently, some more hilariously than others, probably because of the fact that they had been aboard the ship's cabin longer.

A waiter alighting in the vicinity of one party proceeded to collect for the drinks. This very nearly resulted in a row, but was finally settled by the presence and suave explanation of the proprietor, more drinks were ordered and more laughter ensued.

Upon a sign hanging on the wall was this legend:

"Ladies out shopping would do well to visit the ship's cabin."

Wild laughter issued from the next cabin. The man and the woman had finished their drinks. They rose to go. As they passed the second cabin they peeped in. It was filled with a jolly crowd and more life preservers hung on the wall.

"You are right," observed the woman thoughtfully, as they emerged into the street, "it is a unique corner; but it's a mighty good thing, it seems to me, that they've got those life preservers."

Reliability.

Chubb—Well, I have a waiter I can depend upon never to talk, never to laugh at one of my stories, and never to listen to gossip.

Dubb—Lucky devil. Where d'ye get him?

Chubb—It's a dumb waiter.

THE WINDOW WASHERS

A MOUNTAINEER takes his life in his hand along with his alpenstock right willingly for love of the sport; but the window washer of the New York skyscraper takes his in his hand perforce, compelled by necessity.

A crash of glass, a topple of blue overalls out of clear skies, the clang of the ambulance, and the crowd moves on.

At the sixteenth-story window of a tall, attenuated building on lower Broadway a dark-blue figure crept carefully out on to the ledge. One hand reached slowly and clasped the hook of the strap to the ring, while the other hand held firmly to the window sash.

Then the second hook was secured to the other side, and, braced by the strap which swung between him and eternity, the window washer passed the damp cloth over the pane.

I walked in out of the street through the door of the tall building.

"May I see the window washer?" I asked of the janitor.

For answer he ushered me into the elevator.

On the sixteenth floor I opened the door of the room at the window of which stood the window washer. I approached, not noiselessly, but the noise from the street prevented his hearing my footsteps.

He started and paled at the sudden sight of my unexpected face.

"You frightened me," he panted.

He was a young boy with big brown eyes looking out of his smooth, unwrinkled face, into which the color soon came creeping back, spreading like a drop of rose-colored ink spilled on a blotter.

Without stopping his work he answered my questions.

"No, I don't get frightened now," he said. "Not any more, but I did for a long time. For nearly a year it scared me to death to wash the windows. I couldn't help thinking how far up I was, and how little held me. The man who helped me used to say, 'Let go the window sash, why don't you?' but I couldn't, not for the longest while. Sometimes now I find myself forgetting the strap and catching hold of the window, afraid of falling, but not so often."

He had finished washing that window and must pass over the ledge to the next from the outside.

He slowly unhooked the straps, held fast to the rings, and stepped from one window to the other—back of him the sky.

I got weak in the knees seeing him do it. Forced to wash a window at such height I would have dropped at once and been done with it, to get over the suspense, the worry of wondering exactly how far I would have to fall before I lost consciousness.

"The straps are strong," he assured me. "See," and he leaned heavily upon them, "but we have to be very careful not to forget and lean over too far forward or we will shoot out under them like a ball from a cannon. We don't let the straps get old. We ask for new ones."

"About how often?" I inquired.

"About once," replied the window washer, "in two months or three."

"If I were you," I advised him, "I would ask for a strap about once a week."

I made my way to the queen of skyscrapers, the Flatiron Building, trying to imagine how it would be to wash the top-story window of that. No net, no alpenstock, no nothing, and treading narrow ledges at uncountable flights from hard stone pavements, with the chance of landing on nothing softer than the head of a policeman or the top of a trolley car.

It seemed as if I should never be through with going up and up, but after a long time the elevator reached the top floor of all. I emerged from it and stood at the door of a room in which the windows were being washed.

I opened the door noiselessly.

Yes. There was the window washer, a great blue fly outlined against the pane, the sky for background, a sky whose clouds were such near neighbors that one had come and wrapped itself around him.

A neighboring bird, too, far from the madding crowd, circled about close by in its native ether.

Braced by his strong black strap, which held him firmly back from the other world, the window washer polished the pane.

The cloud moistened it.

He rubbed it bright again, and, suspended there between heaven and earth, as he polished and rubbed and cleaned and polished again, he hummed a little tune to keep up his courage and clear his mind and heart from the fear of falling.

As noiselessly as I had opened it I shut the door with myself on the outside in the hall, for, much as I wished to talk with the window washer, never in the world would I have added to his fright and fear by my sudden appearance as in the case of that other one. Z. A. N.

A BELATED DISCOVERY.

THERE is a certain woman in Ravenswood, L. I., who, if her son spoke truly, has recently become possessed of a startling piece of news. The olive branch in question accompanied his elder brother when the latter applied to the Principal of the local school for what he called his "working papers." Having duly ascertained that Tony (the elder boy) had accumulated the necessary fourteen years which would enable him to "enter commercial life" without "let or hindrance" from the Board of Education, the Principal proceeded to sign the application.

Suddenly the voice of the youthful Angelo was heard:

"Teacher, Missus, I want one er them papers, too," he exclaimed.

The dispenser of signatures looked at the youthful speaker and smiled, saying: "But, Angelo, you are only eight years of age, and you can't go to work until you are fourteen."

"But I am fourteen," announced Angelo firmly. "Yes'm, Teacher, Missus, I'm just so old as Tony."

"Then you must be twins," said the amused Principal.

"Teacher, Missus, yes'm, that's it," said Angelo, with a relieved sigh, "we're twins."

"But," said the Principal, struggling to maintain a serious air, "don't you think it strange that your mamma didn't say anything about your being twins when she brought you and Tony to school last term?"

Only for the briefest period did Angelo falter. Then he chanted triumphantly:

"Teacher, Missus, she couldn't. She only found it out last night."

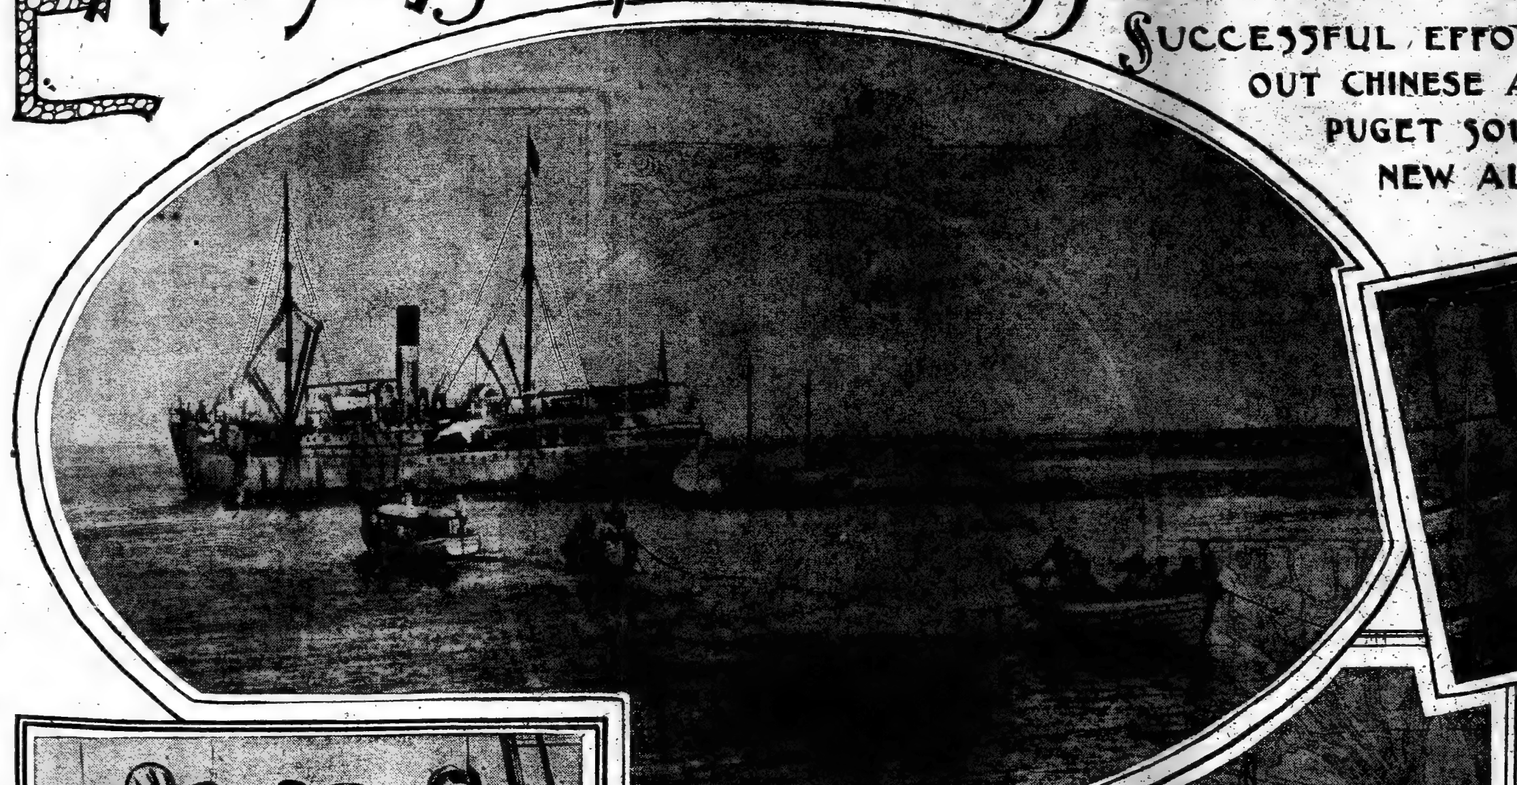
Employing the Wireless to Detect Smugglers

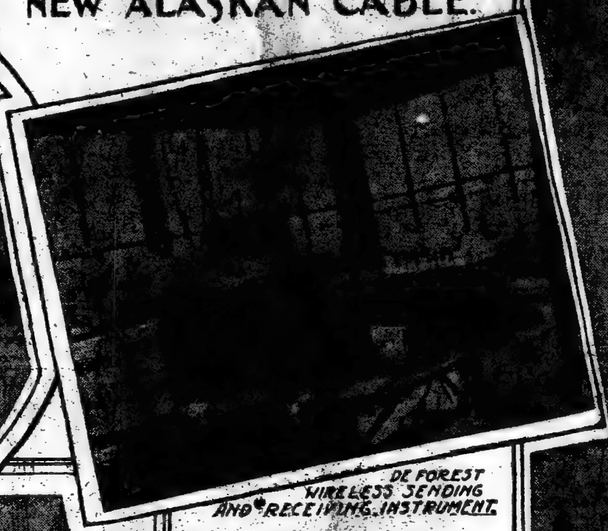
SUCCESSFUL EFFORTS AT BARRING OUT CHINESE AND OPIUM FROM PUGET SOUND PORTS — THE NEW ALASKAN CABLE.



U.S. CABLE SHIP BURNSIDE WHICH HAS JUST FINISHED LAYING GOVERNMENTAL CABLES IN ALASKAN WATERS.

A GROUP OF FILIPINO BUOY JUMPERS WHO CROSSED THE PACIFIC TO HELP LAY THE ALASKAN CABLE.

THE GOVERNMENTAL WIRELESS STATION AND CUSTOM HOUSE, PORT TOWNSEND, BEING USED AGAINST SMUGGLERS



DE FOREST WIRELESS SENDING AND RECEIVING INSTRUMENT.

WIRELESS STATION ON SANTA CATALINA ISLAND IN PACIFIC OCEAN.

THE completion a few days ago of the Government cable between Seattle and Sitka, Alaska, and the equipment of the Custom Houses and revenue cutters on Puget Sound with wireless telegraphy outfits for the detection of smugglers are pointed indications that the far-away Pacific Coast is rapidly getting into stride with the Atlantic in the matter of modern improvements. Indeed, so far as means of communication are concerned, the newer West Coast may be said to be already on an equal footing.

Laying the Cable.

The most interesting of the Government's wireless operations on the Pacific is in using this modern wonder in the detection of smugglers who endeavor to land Chinese and opium at Puget Sound ports from Vancouver and Victoria, in British Columbia. Stations have been placed at Fort Casey, at the United States Custom House at Port Townsend, and at Friday Harbor on the Island of San Juan. The revenue cutter Grant, which is constantly steaming about Puget Sound, is equipped with instruments for receiving and sending wireless messages. Her officers have found the wireless service of considerable use in capturing smugglers.

Although the Geary act requires Chinese residing in the United States to possess a certificate of residence prior to a certain date, a great many new-comers land at Victoria and Vancouver from every Oriental steamer and will pay good prices to be smuggled into Seattle or Tacoma, where there is a large Chinese population and a chance of escaping the sharp eyes of the revenue officers. This smuggling is largely carried on by the crafty skippers of small sailing craft and steamers. They know every nook and inlet along the Sound, and in case it is necessary to take several days on the trip they have innumerable hiding places where they can keep the Chinese under cover during the day. The vessels used by the smugglers are extremely light draught and easily elude the larger revenue cutters. They can only be run down and captured by the small customs launches which make their headquarters at Port Townsend and Friday Harbor.

It is at this point that the wireless comes into play as a smuggler catcher. The Grant, steaming along in the main channel, makes out a suspicious-looking craft skirting the shore. The chances are ten to one that she is a smuggler. A wireless message is ticked off to the customs officers at Port Townsend or Friday Harbor as the case may demand. They put out in launches and lie in wait for the oncoming craft, whose skipper has no reason to believe that he has even been sighted by the cutter.

In the old days the cutter would attempt the capture on her own account and almost invariably the smugglers would escape, having the advantage of shallow draught. If warning was to be sent to the customs tugs much valuable time was lost putting in at a port which had a telegraph office.

Equipped with Wireless.

The Grant is the first vessel on the Pacific Ocean to be equipped with wireless apparatus. She has been using the wireless for several months now without a single failure. When the equipment was first proposed there was a great deal of doubt in the minds of many as to whether the wireless would be a success on Puget Sound. It worked all right when it came to sending messages straight away across the water, but would it climb the mountainous, timber-covered hills which prevail on the shores of the Sound? The first attempt at communication between the Grant, lying in Tacoma Harbor, and the customs station at Port Townsend, seventy-five miles distant, proved that the hills and forest had no effect.

The officers at Fort Casey are greatly pleased with the service which they are receiving from the wireless. It is their only direct connection with the mainland, as no cables have been laid to the fort, which is one of the most important in the protection of Puget Sound.

They have some experiments in view which they believe will solve some of the inconveniences of long-range target practice. The target boat and the fort will be equipped with the necessary apparatus, and the exact result of each shot will be flashed from the boat to the fort, obviating the long delay and inexactness which result from the present method.

One of the novelties of the Puget Sound service is a record-breaking mast of a height of 220 feet, which brings the wireless flashes into the station at Friday Harbor. Such a mast would only be possible in a land of tall timbers. Yet experiments on the Sound show that the elevation of the receiving mast or the position of the station have no effect on wireless communication. It was lately believed that the higher the elevation the better the results. At Fort Casey, instead of erecting the mast on top of the high bluff, it has been dropped down until the end almost touches the beach. There is no observable difference in the messages.

The laying of the Alaskan cable has been a difficult and expensive operation, but fully justified by the importance from both a military and commercial point of view. In view of the tremendous natural difficulties to be overcome its laying has been accomplished in a remarkably short space of time.

In March, 1903, Congress authorized the extension of the military cable system to Alaska and appropriated $485,000 for the work. A few days ago the cable ship Burnside arrived in Puget Sound and anchored the lower end of the cable. As soon as connections can be made with a cable station on shore Sitka and other Alaskan points, even to the far-away military stations on Bering Sea, at the mouth of the Yukon, will be in communication with the outside world over an all-American wire, owned by the United States and controlled by the War Department.

On the fingers of his hand one of Gen. W. A. Greely's subordinates in the Signal Service the other day checked off a few of the principal obstacles and difficulties met and overcome in connection with the carrying out of this project. The amount of the appropriation, in the first place, made necessary the manufacture of the cable in the United States, which would have been impossible before the War Department took up the laying of military cables. The one factory where cables can be made in this country, that of the Safety Insulated Cable Company, on the shores of New York Harbor, had never before undertaken a cable of such extreme length—1,300 miles. The cable was made, however, and wound into the hold of a merchant steamer for transport around Cape Horn to Seattle. The long voyage was made in safety and the cable transferred to the War Department's vessel, the Burnside, which had been summoned from Chinese waters for the purpose. The cable route between Seattle and Sitka had not been surveyed, and there was a lack of detailed information regarding the depths to be encountered. Cable tackle could not be secured in this country and had to be made to order in Great Britain. And on top of all this was the danger of marine work of any kind off the Alaskan coast, with sudden storms, treacherous reefs, and the polar ice pack in Bering Sea.

Wrecks Delay Work.

Two wrecks delayed the completion of the cable system. The Orizaba, one of the old Klondike treasure fleet, a vessel chartered by the Government, was totally wrecked while laying a short cable from Nome to St. Michael, in Bering Sea. The Burnside struck a submerged iceberg while laying cable into Juneau and narrowly escaped going down.

The importance of the Alaskan cable is evident to every one who is familiar with the great territory which we secured from Russia. The cable is in direct connection with 1,700 miles of land wires which have been strung between the various military posts, no matter how wild the country. Only an expert can speak with authority as to its military value, but with the prospect of a Far Eastern problem even a layman can see that it must be great. Any Alaskan merchant in five minutes can convince the most skeptical of the new cable's commercial importance to the half dozen towns which are outgrowing the mining camp stage by great leaps and bounds.

FINANCING FAILURES A TWENTIETH CENTURY BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

Wily Capitalist Uses Small Merchants for His Own Gain—How the Dodge is Worked.

FINANCING failures is the latest development of twentieth century business enterprise, and, strangely enough, this beginning of the century undertaking for up-to-date capitalists has developed in slow, sleepy Philadelphia. It is a profitable business, too, if the statements of those who have been investigating it are to be believed.

This new form of business enterprise was first brought to the public attention, although it has been known to credit men for some time, at the meeting of the New York creditors a few weeks ago of a Philadelphia woolen firm which had failed, owing about $100,000 to nearly a hundred of the big woolen firms of New York. At that meeting three of the leading lawyers in Philadelphia got up and announced that they knew that this was one of a dozen failures in Philadelphia during six months that had been financed and engineered by one man, that they knew who that man was and exactly how he worked, but that he had been so careful to cover his tracks and eliminate all that might be used as evidence against him in a court of law that they did not dare to mention his name in an assemblage as large as that which they were addressing.

The record of this man and of one or two others who, it is said, have devoted their capital to the same strange and extremely profitable business, has been thoroughly investigated by Henry C. Quinby, counsel for the National Association of Credit Men, but even this investigation has failed to disclose any evidence that would justify a prosecution. There is a lot of testimony by accomplices, but so far no one has been able to discover the smallest scrap of writing to incriminate the head centre of the whole conspiracy. It is said that he never gives a receipt and is very chary about even signing his name to a personal letter. Checks are things that he does not deal in. They are dangerous.

Not only in Philadelphia has this new business enterprise been developed. A couple of years ago there was a series of very suspicious dry goods failures in Rochester and Buffalo, and Mr. Quinby believes that he has traced them to the same man, who, he is convinced, financed and engineered the Philadelphia failures last year.

Requires Patience and Capital.

The method pursued is one requiring a great deal of patience and some capital. If the game is to be undertaken on a large scale, with a number of "firms" operating at once, a great deal of capital is required. Strangely enough, the lawyers and merchants who have investigated the game unite in declaring that in the beginning, at least, the persons who actually become bankrupts are innocent victims of the commercial spider who weaves his web for both them and the wholesaler who is to be fleeced. As a rule all that they get out of it is enough to pay the lawyer, who sometimes succeeds, and sometimes fails, in keeping them out of jail. So carefully does the spider cover his tracks, however, that the actual bankrupts seldom know who has financed them, and are consequently not in a position to "squeal."

The method usually pursued is to fix upon a couple of young men who are doing what is known as a jobbing business in a small way. Usually the business is little more than peddling. They buy a few pieces of woolens at auction and job it around among the small manufacturers. Once the men are selected they are approached by an agent of the spider, who offers them a ban gain or two in woolen goods. He professes to be impressed by the rapidity with which they dispose of the goods, and remarks that it is a pity that men with such marked business ability should be restricted by the lack of capital. The next thing is to suggest that two such clever business men should form a partnership and open a store. The young men are willing enough, but the capital is lacking. A few days later the spider's agent sends in great haste for the young men and tells them that he has found just the thing for them. He has a friend, a capitalist, who has some idle money and is willing to lend it to any one whom he recommends, at a reasonable rate of interest. The agent has been so much impressed by the business capacity of his young friends that he ccannot think of a better investment for his friend's money than to finance them. The victims of course bite greedily at the bait, and a few days later they are established in business, with $3,000 or $4,000 to their credit in the bank and the spider's agent at their elbow as a "friendly adviser."

Establishing a Credit.

Then begins a long fight to establish a credit on which the final operation is to be based. The spider's agent advises in every step. He supervises the investment of the capital to the best advantage in a stock of goods and then advises his victims how to go about building up a credit.

First one of the partners visits one of the big mill agents in New York. He introduces himself, makes a statement of his assets and liabilities, and asks for $100 worth of goods on credit. The credit man of the concern inspects his statement, looks him over, and decides that he is honest, and to be trusted with $100 worth of goods for the usual thirty days. A week later he comes in enthusiastic and declares that the goods have sold like hot cakes, and that he must have $200 worth more. He pays $75 on the first bill and takes advantage of the usual discount. In another week he is in again with an order for $400 worth and a payment of about $100 on account.

So the game goes on until one morning, about two or three years after the firm has started business and after an excellent credit has been worked up with anywhere from fifty to a hundred houses, the agent of the spider appears. He is very sorry, but his principal has fallen upon hard times and must have all that money he has been advancing to extend the business for the last two years—at once. The partners are in despair. The "angel" seemed so willing to wait that no provision had been made. To pay off all his advances now would mean the utter ruin of the business that they had been working for two years to build up. At this juncture the agent appears again.

Working the Dodge.

He has a plan which will enable them to get out and start in business again with plenty of capital and a clean slate, and he whispers bankruptcy into their ears. At first the partners balk, but the agent is persuasive. He points out how easy it is and how, if they fail to accept his suggestion, they will be ruined. As a general rule they accept, and then the credit which has been so laboriously established is worked for all it is worth. Goods are ordered from every wholesale house with which the firm has been doing business to the limit of the credit, and are either sold at once below cost or shipped away and concealed. Then the failure comes and the creditors find that goods in the amount of $100,000 or more have disappeared in a month, leaving no trace.

The investigation which follows usually satisfies them that there has been fraud, but fraud of a kind very difficult to prove. Perhaps the partners go to Canada or Europe, and perhaps one of them is brought back for trial. If that happens he usually jumps his bail before the trial comes off. It is said that the spider usually gets about 50 per cent. of the proceeds of the failure, the agent gets 25 per cent., and the partners get 25 per cent. to pay the lawyers to keep them out of jail. As a rule they never see the principal or even know who he is.

ONE KIND OF "FAKE."

"I HAVE been busy all afternoon faking portraits," said the cartoonist, casually.

"Never heard of faking portraits? They are usually the best kind. At least I have most success with them.

"You have heard of fake interviews? Well, why shouldn't there be fake portraits?

"In the first place, when I commenced my cartoons, my idea was that only cheap common artists drew from the face before them. That was a thing anybody could do. My idea was to look at it awhile, then come away and draw it.

"I learned to do that, and do it well. Perhaps that is how I acquired my present faculty of drawing it now from nothing at all.

"Why, once my paper wanted me to go to see a celebrated criminal and sketch him.

"I hadn't time or something.

"'I will fake him for you,' I said, and I did.

"The next morning the picture came out as large as life. It made a hit. As a matter of fact, I have never been more complimented than upon that portrait. The newspapers all over the land copied it. The original was begged for. The man who got it thought himself fortunate indeed. Really, it made my reputation.

"Was it like the criminal? Oh, well, I don't know. I can't say. I never saw him, you see. Anyway, they killed him with electricity, so what did it matter?

"Now, yesterday they wanted me to stop some other work I had on hand and go to the Republican Headquarters to sketch some of the principal characters participating.

"I knew exactly how that would be.

"I would hang around there for about three hours, then they would skin up some back stairway, and I wouldn't see hair nor hide of them.

"So I said, 'I'll just fake 'em,' which I did.

"You look at them in the paper to-morrow—their pictures, I mean.

"They'll look every bit and grain as much like them as if I had seen them. You see if they don't. If they don't, I'll cash their names on, and you can tell them by that."

HAVE TO LEARN SOLDIERING ALL OVER AGAIN

New Infantry Drill Regulations Involve Many Changes

AN OFFICER of the National Guard was passing an up-town armory the other night when his attention was attracted to a group of young men who were gathered in an earnest and attentive circle around a tall comrade, who alternately read from a small book and gesticulated with his free hand.

The officer at first thought that such interest could only be aroused by something like the late reports of a baseball game. Then he saw the book and heard the tall man say something about "that new extended order." Then he saw that the centre of attraction was a copy of the new infantry drill regulations which will govern the work of every regular and State infantryman in the United States in a few months.

The regulations, the work of the General Staff of the army, will be found to-day in the pocket of nine out of ten officers in the National Guard, and it is safe to say that the most of them are thinking quite as much of the new regulations as they are of Roosevelt and Parker, or Higgins and Herrick.

"Why, I've simply got to learn soldiering all over again," said one of the best-known and oldest of the local Guardsmen the other day. "These regulations change the business as I got it into my head, and I'm mighty afraid that it will be harder to forget the old lessons than to learn the new. Some of the old movements have become second nature for me and many others, and if there aren't many mix-ups between the old and the new when the new are put into practice, put me down as a poor judge."

What the National Guard officers of this State are troubled about now is the fact that they ought to be well acquainted with the new school of the soldier before the Winter drill season sets in in earnest and the new recruits turn up for instruction. The copies of the regulations have just been put into public circulation, and the officers are trying to get them in the hands of every Guardsman. One company of a local regiment needed so little urging that they sent a special messenger to a downtown publisher the other afternoon to carry 100 copies back to the armory. Not a copy has been idle since.

"What are the striking differences between the old and new regulations?" a TIMES reporter asked an officer the other day.

Differences in Regulations.

"Well, generally speaking," he said, "it is that the sentiment of the old was 'get there and make as little fuss as possible.' The spirit of the new, it seems to me, is to put a little more show into those movements which are pre-eminently 'show' movements, and to put a little quicker action into those movements which are of the most use to the fighter.

"The extended order, the real fighting part of the work, is much improved, I think, in the new regulations. It is hard, however, to tell exactly how these new rules will work until they have been put into practice.

"One illustration that will be easily understood by any one who knows only a little of drill work is this: By the old rules the soldier had to execute the manual of arms before starting to obey the order to march. In plain English, he stood still while getting his gun at the position prescribed for marching. Now he does all of this in the first three steps—one movement with each step. That saves time, as any one can see.

"One of the most radical changes is in the consideration of the unit known as the set of fours. There will, under the new regulations, be no more 'fours right' or 'fours left.' Instead, it will be 'squad right' and 'squad left.' The turn will be made much in the style used by the British. For the new movement more rapidity and better appearance are claimed. The new way makes necessary the additional command 'full step, march, guide right' after the 'squad right' movement has been executed. Another change is the distance between men. In rank that will be four instead of six inches, as heretofore. The distance between ranks in line or column will also be shorter by four inches than in the past—forty inches.

"A good many points gleaned from the practices of the European armies have been put into the new regulations. I have reference to one taken from the British. Another is the 'mark time' movement. Heretofore, the soldier has swung his foot forward and then back. Now he pulls it up and puts it down, straight. That is the movement of the German soldier.

"Another new point that will catch some of us napping is the absence of the custom of 'counting fours,' which has, of course, become so drilled into the Guardsman's brain that he can go through it when three-quarters asleep. Now the command will be 'count off.' The old roll call by the Sergeant will be dispensed with, too. Squad leaders will answer for the men under them. The first Sergeant will say, 'Squad leaders, report,' and their answer will be, 'All are present or accounted for,' or give the names of the missing.

"A new wrinkle that will at once be noticed by those who have witnessed evening parade is that the Captains instead of the Sergeants will report. In future reviews the men will not file by at port arms. The command will be, 'Eyes right,' as in the Kaiser's army."

One of the features of drill work that appeals most to the usual crowd of spectators is the guard mount. Several changes have been made in this. Speaking on this subject, Major W. A. Turpin, who is known in this city as a close student of tactics, said the other day:

"The new regulations prescribe that the Sergeant Major step one pace to the right before drawing his sword; then he takes post two paces to the right and two paces to the front, the guard facing to the left. In moving from this position to the centre of the guard to report the result of the attendance, it is stipulated that he shall move parallel to the front rank until opposite the Adjutant. Then he takes post midway between the guard and Adjutant, making the turns at right angles. Heretofore he has marched to this point by the nearest and most convenient way.

"In returning to his position on the left of the guard he marches in a similar manner, instead of going directly to his post.

"The non-commissioned officers, in going to the front and centre at the call of the Adjutant, are also obliged to take this circuitous route instead of a direct march.

"In breaking the guard into platoons preparatory to passing in review, the Adjutant commands, 'At trail, platoons right,' which obviates the necessity of bringing the guard to trail arms before moving, as has been customary, but at the same time the Adjutant finds it necessary to give the command, 'Guard halt,' after the turn has been completed.

"The new marching salute is to be brought into play as the troops are brought to 'eyes right' at the proper time while passing in review of the officer of the day.

"The 'parade rest' for officers during ceremonies stipulates that the chosen shall be nearly at the height of the shoulder.

LADY CURZON ON THE VERANDA OF HER BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW AT GULMARG, CASHMERE

WHEN Mary Leiter, daughter of the multi-millionaire dry goods merchant of Chicago was married in 1895 to George Nathaniel Curzon, a young Englishman of small fortune but good social position and fair political prospects, it was not considered a brilliant match, as international marriages go. He was only a Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office. But when, on the retirement of Lord Elgin, young Curzon was appointed Viceroy of India, his wife became a big star in the British social firmament. The position is, perhaps, the most important under the English crown.

Lady Curzon's full name was Mary Victoria Leiter. She is a sister of the famous plunger "Joe" Leiter, at one time known as "King of the Wheat Pit." Lord Curzon was a traveler of note. He has written books about his journeyings the world over, but more particularly in Persia and Afghanistan, which have become standard works. The Leiters were spending the Winter in Washington when he met the young woman who won his heart. It was a genuine love match on both sides. Of all the marriages of American girls to English noblemen this has turned out to be one of the happiest. No other American woman has occupied abroad such a proud and distinctive position as "the American Queen of India," as the Vicereine has frequently been called.

While the Curzons were on their honeymoon the downfall of the Rosebery Cabinet made a new Parliamentary election necessary. Lord Curzon was selected to stand for a seat. His wife entered the canvass in a doubtful district with as much enthusiasm as her husband did. Following the tactics adopted by another American woman, Lady Randolph Churchill, a few years before, she electioneered for Lord Curzon's election. Not only did she sit on the platform beside him when he made important public speeches, but she drove through the towns and villages of Lancashire and made the acquaintance of the voters, their wives, and their children. Under the strict bribery laws in English electioneering this was a difficult task for an impulsive American girl. But Lady Curzon managed it successfully. Her husband's election was in no small degree due to her winning personality.

During the early days of their married life the Curzons lived in Carleton Gardens while in London. They had also a comfortable country seat at the Priory, Reigate. Spurred on by his American wife, Lord Curzon worked hard and progressed rapidly. In foreign affairs he was Lord Salisbury's right-hand man. There were three other men, all with powerful influence, mentioned for Viceroy of India when Lord Elgin's retirement became inevitable. But the preference was given to Lord Curzon. He was only thirty-nine years old at the time. Statesmen were, therefore, astonished. They had expected to see the Vicegal throne occupied by a much older man. It was a position styled only second to that of King Edward himself.

Lord Curzon is ruler of 300,000,000 people. He lives in surroundings of splendor unapproached by any other Minister of the Crown. The magnificence of his palace and its environments is but faintly understood b persons not familiar with East Indian life. Without question, the Vicegal Court in India is far more brilliant in its ceremonial functions than the Court of St. James's. This is necessary in order to conform to native ideas of splendor. To please the natives, everything must be carried out with truly Oriental ideas of lavishness. That gold and silver thrones are used at Durbars, or receptions of Rajahs, and other state functions of Court, is only a detail of the incomparable splendor which is part and parcel of Vicegal life. Lord Curzon's salary amounts to $125,000 a year. He has a beautiful residence at Calcutta that cost $500,000 to build, and another small palace at Barrackpore, which is a riverside residence about twelve miles from the city. This is used principally for week-end entertainments.

There is also a magnificent Summer palace at Simla, used during the six hottest months of the year. The natural surroundings of this place are unsurpassed. It is built on the summit of a hill, surrounded by stately pines, interspersed with a wealth of rhododendrons, chrysanthemums, and China asters. Every rock and tree is clothed in a mantle of green and gray moss. As far as the eye can reach there is nothing but a mass of sylvan grottoes and hanging gardens. Besides several suites of superb apartments, the palace has a ballroom and a theatre.

When Lord and Lady Curzon travel they must do so in great state. They are entitled to a salute of thirty-one guns. They have a very large staff and suite. Drawing rooms are held in the evening, and are largely attended. The fact that Lord Curzon has just been reappointed Viceroy of India attests satisfaction with his regime. All his actions have been characterized by an independence which some of the more conservative folk have attributed to the influence of his American wife.

Although he may not have been slow enough for official comfort in a hot climate, he has greatly increased his reputation among those who prefer efficiency to ease. He personally visited the cholera and famine districts, and was prompt with measures of relief. He revised the moss-covered civil service rules, established an Indian cadet corps, and did numberless other things that his successors had only talked of doing.

TAFT

THE MUSIC OF MANY LANDS

Songs and Their Singers as Represented in St. Louis Fair Exhibits.

THE most ancient civilization extant is that of China. Here the hands upon the clock of time have ceased to move. To look upon the life of that strange, stagnant nation is like gazing into one of China's own still pools, where the lilies are motionless. Or it is like looking backward down a long straight road whose lines narrow to the horizon where dips the setting sun.

Chinese music, like all else of Chinese culture, after centuries of development, now is crystallized.

A Chinese musician, replying to the question, "Is this that you have played a modern composition?" made answer, "New? Oh, no, no new tunes! This tune, him hundreds, maybe thousands, years old!"

The Chinese have a system of musical notation, but it is inadequate, and Chinese music, to be learned, must be heard. The Chinese student must have the music played to him by his master.

"Sometimes tunes heap long, heap hard," thus the Chinese musician again, "Must catch 'em tunes from teacher. No man catch 'em all the tunes. One man catch 'em thirty, forty tunes, maybe more; another man catch 'em thirty, forty other tunes, maybe more. Some man know some tunes. Some man know other tunes. No man know all the tunes."

So, it would seem, was musical production in China finished long ago. No one seems to add to the completed collection of tunes. "If man play tune different, he play tune wrong," declares the Chinese musician. Thus has Chinese music descended through the centuries.

In the Chinese village in St. Louis there is a representative Chinese theatre. Here the first thing that strikes the visitor is the importance of the orchestra. Indeed, the plays seem almost operatic in character, the orchestra constantly interposing its melodies and its noise, while the actors sing and intone, as well as speak, their parts. No one who has heard Chinese music will readily forget the fang and crash of the gong, the tick-tacking of wooden sticks, the flamingo flare of the clarinet, and the high, sweet scraping of the Chinese violins. The rhythmic accompaniment of Chinese tunes is elaborate, but the tunes themselves are simple and melodious. The Chinese commonly use the pentatonic scale, as do the Scotch—that is, a scale composed of five tones only, the black keys of our piano. Partly to the effect of this scale are due the peculiar sweetness and purity of Chinese melodies.

Music, say the Chinese, is the expression of perfect harmony between heaven, earth, and man. In the five planets exists the basis of the five-toned scale. Yet though the Chinese say that music proceeds from the heart of man, their music is wholly lacking in expression. It is like a picture on a fan, without light or shade.

In the gorgeous dressing of the actors on a Chinese stage there is no subtle blending of colors, but only flat washes, as it were, of yellow gold, keen light green, peacock blue and scarlet. And the Chinese orchestra seems but the counterpart in music of the shrill, pure colors of the actors' robes. The following very pretty tune is a good example of Chinese popular music. It is an old melody adapted to various purposes, and is sung in each play in the Chinese theatre at the fair. It is known as the "Lily Song," and is sung in praise of the Chinese lily, which is an emblem of good luck.

sings the song, clapping one hand upon the other with sweeping stroke, like the motion in sounding cymbals.

The Ainu seem to be without musical instruments. The rhythm of their songs is marked only by the clapping of hands. The music is extremely simple and lacks the complicated syncopation common to most primitive music.

Perhaps one of the most unique of the Ainu songs is that sung by the women while pounding rice. The mortar is made from the trunk of a tree and the pestles are some three feet long. The women, grouped about the mortar, swing to and fro in rhythmic labor as they lift the heavy pestles and let them fall in quick succession with reverberating thud.

Then, suddenly, above the rhythm of the pounding, there sounds such a strange cooing, twittering, and trilling as makes the startled listener to question "Is this the voice of women or of birds?" And the gentle Ainu say, with a pretty smile, "We make our milling song to imitate the birds."

In form the song is a free, extemporaneous round, one voice coming in after the other.

A full picture of native life cannot be got from a mere visit to a visiting group of a foreign people. It is said that the individual Ainu selected for the Exposition are far above the average of their race. However that may be, the inmates of the little hut of rushes, in their neatness, their gentleness and courtesy, offer a rare example of sweet and simple living.

The woven dress of sweet-smelling elm fibre and the embroidered gown clothe human beings whose ideals of conduct seem no lower than our own. The bearing of the men is full of quiet dignity; the tattooed lips of the women wear a smile of real and lovely womanhood. In the clear, full eyes of this simple folk shines the light of the spirit. Of all the people at the fair, none seem more truly God's own children than the Ainu of Japan.

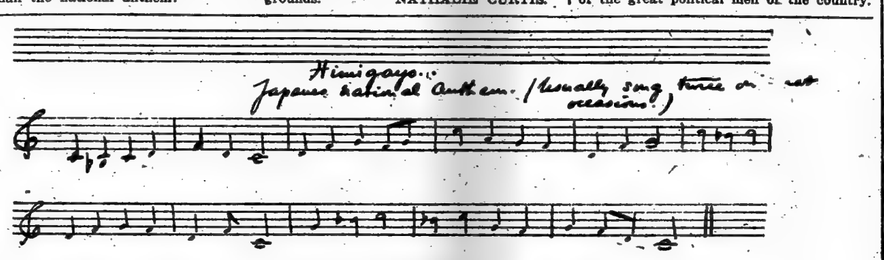
From the Philippines.

There is probably no people concerning whom Americans are more eager for knowledge than the Filipinos. All day long the broidered robes wielding boughs of cherry blossoms, or posing with outstretched fan and tilted head in grace all strange to us. The dresses are in harmony with the scenery, and the dancers seem a moving thread in a colored warp of bewildering beauty. Indeed, the gorgeous robes of the actors make this theatre in the "Pike" a resplendent picture of old Japan.

The music of Japan is not on a level with other forms of Japanese art. Its most interesting feature is the rhythm, which is elaborately syncopated. But the melodies are ungraceful and monotonous, and of tonal beauty, as we know it, there seems to be little conception. The drums are hard and crude, and the stringed instruments are played not by the sweep of a bow, but by the sharp stroke of a plectrum. Thus the instrumental music consists chiefly of percussion sounds, though now and then the clicking of strings and the woodeny thud and clatter of drums are relieved by the plaintive wail of a flute.

Yet this music has its fascination and the rhythm holds the careful listener enthralled with interest and wonder.

As an illustration of Japanese music no example could be more appropriate to the time than the national anthem:



Translation:

May the Emperor's dynasty endure eight times a thousand years, until the rocks are grown mossy.

This is the melody whose flame, bright-burning in the sons and daughters of Japan, has kindled the admiration of the civilized world.

The American Indian.

Across the river from these children of a distant archipelago are encamped the American Indians.

It may come as a surprise to many to learn that the Indian is a man of great possibilities in mind and character. He is also a poet. Indeed, it has been said that of all primitive people the American Indian is the most poetic. Of this fact the songs of the Omahas, collected by Miss Alice C. Fletcher, bear ample witness. Of the Sioux songs, Miss Natalie Curtis, who has made a study of Indian music, says:

"The Sioux love song is a wooing song, and the Sioux wooing song is a love song. Love is the theme of the Sioux song, and love is the motive power of the Sioux life. Love is the mainspring of the Sioux heart, and love is the mainspring of the Sioux song. Love is the Sioux song, and the Sioux song is love."

Chase one another
All day long.
Ah, rain,
This my song!
(Fragment of Hopi song.)

III.

Of all the many youths
I love but you alone;
I love you dearly.
Long may be the years
Ere we may meet again.
(Sioux love song.)

Most Hopi songs are of rain, for rain is the great need of this desert-dwelling agricultural folk.

Hopi maidens wear their hair in glistening black wheels at each side of the head, suggestive of butterfly's wings. Hence the poetic "butterfly maidens." The author acknowledges indebtedness to the Rev. H. R. Voth for assistance in the translation of Hopi songs.

Were there space, mention might be made of the music of India, of Turkey, of Ceylon, and of Arabia. The folk-songs of the Tyrol, of Ireland, of Spain, of Russia, and the melodies of our own negroes are too well known to need description. All this and more can be heard on the World's Fair grounds.

NATHALIE CURTIS.

THE CONJURE DOCTOR

Weird Dispenser of Spells and Prognostications in the South.

NOT long ago a gentleman from the North, while roaming through the burned district of Baltimore, was attracted by the grotesque appearance of an old colored man sitting on a blackened timber near the river front. The old man was bent with the burden of years until it seemed as if his small head was receding between his bowlike shoulders. Together with his small, reddish eyes and wrinkled skin, he reminded one of a turtle that might have crawled up out of the muddy dock to sun himself. The stranger watched the odd character for a while, and then approached a stevedore on the wharf opposite.

"Who is that old man?" queried the stranger.

"Dat?" replied the stevedore, with reverence in his voice. "Why, dat's de cunjuhe doctor."

The stranger was interested.

"Oh, I see," he rejoined; "the old chap cures the conjured."

"He doan' always cure yo', Sah," continued the stevedore. "Sometimes he cunjuhes yo' hisself. Ef Ah hes a fallin' out wid a man, Ah jes' go to de cunjuh doctor an' he cunjuhes dat man, an' he gits sick an' dies. Dat's de way he cures de cunjuhed."

Daniel Webster and Henry Clay held many conferences there with their friends during the years when each was prominently mentioned for the Presidency, and during the campaign when James K. Polk was elected over Clay the latter made the Astor House his headquarters when in New York.

During the great dinner at the Astor House on the night of Nov. 28, 1837, given to John Bell, who in 1860 was a candidate for the Presidency, Daniel Webster was the chief speaker, and Philip Hone relates in his diary how Webster did not begin to speak until 2 o'clock in the morning, and yet held the large number of diners almost spellbound for nearly two hours. One month later Webster gave a dinner at the Astor House to a number of Whigs for the purpose of discussing the political situation.

On Oct. 18, 1838, one of the most important political conferences of the Whig Party in this city was held at the Astor House. From sixty to eighty of the most prominent citizens gathered to discuss the best means to insure the election of William H. Seward for Governor. Seward had previously been defeated by William Marcy, yet notwithstanding that he was renominated in 1838, and after a warm campaign was elected by a trifle over 10,000 majority. At this meeting Seward was present and among others were Thurlow Weed, David B. Ogden, Philip Hone, Mayor of New York in 1826; J. P. Phoenix, Thomas Tileston, and R. M. Blatchford. It was resolved to raise $5,000 for election expenses,

"Take it away!" she screamed. "Oh, take the terrible thing out of the house!"

Quick investigation showed that she had found the conjure pouch in her husband's wardrobe, and, with true feminine curiosity, had opened it. Little wonder she should scream. This was the contents:

One mole foot.
One dried frog.
One spider.
Half of a snake skin.
Chip of cypress root.
Lizard's tail.
Horse hair.
Brass button.
Black sand.
Jamestown weed.
Dried locust.
Lump of insects, barks, grasses, &c., wrapped in eel skin.

He had been investigating the uncanny collection with the aid of a cane. His wife had fled from the room. Cautiously brushing the contents of the pouch on a newspaper, he tossed them out of the window. Perhaps there was a sensation in the street when the mixture reached the sidewalk. However, he never dared to glance out of the window; nor would he dare to bring home another charm sold by a Southern conjure doctor.

HOTELS AND POLITICS.

MEMORIES of the old Astor House as a political headquarters are recalled in the selection by Judge Alton B. Parker of the latest hotel to be opened in this city bearing the name of Astor. Whether future Presidential candidates will make the Astor Hotel their political home or not remains to be seen. In the present case, however, an additional example is presented of the steady expansion of the city northward, showing the tendency toward new hotel quarters and those further up town.

It is a long way from the Astor House to the Astor Hotel, but from a political standpoint Judge Parker is simply repeating history in using the latter hotel for the same purpose that was once employed by Presidential aspirants at the Astor House, that is, the seeing of political leaders and the holding of personal and formal conferences upon the outlook of the campaign.

The Astor House was opened early in 1836, and for years was practically the Waldorf-Astoria of New York. Within a year it became the favorite stopping place of the great political men of the country.

A DRAMATIST WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Pinero, the Exponent of the Woman of Nerves.

AS WE were pointing out last week, Pinero's shortcomings are such as are to be expected in a clever and adaptable dramatist writing for a public the prevailing mood of which he finds temperamentally and racially unsympathetic—the faults of a dramatist without a country. Expert technician, he is not above the use of all the threadbare tricks of the crude era that preceded him; keen and sympathetic observer of life, he resorts at need to the conventionally false views of character and comedy that had been approved by long use. With the sense of his race for the psychologic moment in merchandising, he broaches the stirring and vital subjects of the moment—only to abdicate the views of them that appeal to his truer instincts, and grow naturally out of the nature of the case, for fear of rapping the sensitive knuckles of national prejudice. In "The Weaker Sex," feminist that he is by temperament, he turned the woman question as it was agitated in the eighties to obvious British farce. In "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith" he faced the deeper and more penetrating question of the revolted woman of to-day only to find retreat in the melodramatic and sentimentally idealized tradition of evangelical womanhood. But what of the qualities that have made Pinero the leader of one of the few great periods of the English drama, and in fact one of the few great dramatists of the modern world?

Like many another playwright, Pinero's first qualities were the qualities of his defects. By the sheer force of his will and his cleverness, he made the alien stuff he worked in as deliciously amusing as anything can be which has not the glow and the conviction of sincere creation. "Sweet Lavender" was very sweet and redolent of all the much-washed and ancient and yellowing linen of the muse of the Dickensonian tradition. "The Magistrate" was a capital piece of the theatre, in which the characters and the environment were so studiously and elaborately English that one quite ignored the fact that the adventurous complication was of precisely the kind the English stage had been borrowing for decades from the French. "The Amazons" was so expert a projection of the athletic girl into the traditional environment of farceland that only the hardest-headed critics realized how unreal it was, and how utterly without basis of common sense and actual humanity, without which the wildest farce cannot be really admirable in its kind—to say nothing of the higher attribute—satire. It will not do, however, to attribute all the success of these pieces to the cleverness of the mere technician. They possessed one of the rarest qualities of the comic stage—and quite the most popularly acceptable—a sustained and unaffected gayety.

For many years an element had been at work in Pinero's consciousness, the full effect of which he could not at once realize, but which was destined to transform him as an artist by revealing to him his true self. "The Princess and the Butterfly" may be taken as marking the transition between the old artificial Pinero and the real, though chronologically it follows the greatest and the deepest of all the plays. The princess and the butterfly have both led rather futile existences, and, finding themselves across the threshold of middle age and the best of friends, are planning to get what comfort and love they can together for the rest of their lives. Nothing can be more real, more searching of the amiable tendernesses, more exquisitely real than the portrait of the two, and "She Stoops to Conquer," where will you find its equal, in fact, unless in Jones's "The Liars"? But it was a failure, in spite of the acclaims of all the leading English critics. What was its fault?—for failure in a work of theatric art is one of the gravest of faults, in that it relegates the play to a sphere for which it was not intended, and to which its best virtues are not adapted, the printed page. A technical defect of some moment there is in the fact that at the opening of the second act the clear and accelerating action runs into a slough of aimless incident, and one of the characters is of the conventionally "comic" order that has bored us all so long. But these deficiencies, if I am not mistaken, are not mainly to blame. The whole milieu of the comedy is what Mr. Bernard Shaw calls "unpleasant." That is to say, the story is of an attachment—innocent, to be sure—that has taken four rather slangy, undercultivated people into the divorce court, from which the accused woman emerges with the cold comfort of the benefit of the doubt—and a reputation toppling on the verge. Mr. Pinero handles his theme with consummate technical and a creative mastery—baring to us a wealth of human nature and suffering that shocks by its very keenness and veracity. But it is too painful for all who lack the rare power to delight in unflinching truth. "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "Iris" are too fresh in the popular memory to require to be here expounded.

The secret of the appeal of all these plays is a deeply sympathetic but unflinching and unillusioned knowledge of feminine sensibilities. Toward woman in her idyllic and wholesomely impassioned moments Pinero has never evinced the slightest interest. Nothing could be more diametrically opposed to the native English spirit—the true exponents of which are the poetic heroines of Shakespeare, embodied in the aura of Ellen Terry's personality. One or two portraits Pinero has given us of rough, downright sense and feeling, without, however, the least charm—Mrs. Cloys, the mothering aunt in "The Benefit of the Doubt," and Sophie Fulgarney, the chivalrously meddling manicure in "The Gay Lord Quex." But these are incidental characters. Still more significant is the fact that even in his great central figures, Pinero has little to tell us of the simple passion of the sexes. What fixes his attention is the passion of boredom, the passion of despair, the passion of jealousy. Listen to Theo, (the wife who has been given the benefit of the doubt,) as she talks to her husband, who has bored her by wearing kilts with a dinner jacket, and having bagpipers play, as is the custom of the Highlands: "If you had the smallest sense of humor, Alec! But one soon tires of laughing at you. No. There was never any fun in that kilt. It got on my nerves from the beginning—the solemn, stupid stateliness of it. At dinner the simple sound of my skirt rustling against that petticoat of yours made the chairs—everything—dance! At those moments old Hamish and his boy Huncan [the bagpipers] seemed to be blowing into the blood vessels of my head. And during dinner, even the table wouldn't help me. I declare to goodness, I could always see through the thickness of the board—see your two knees!" Here is what the jealous wife says in the same play: "When the wife is older than the husband, every fresh little line in her face becomes an acute pain to her, just as if it were cut into her face and renewed daily with a knife." In those two speeches one sees the Pinero woman as clearly as in the full-length portrait of Paula Tanqueray

DAVID WARFIELD'S appearance to-morrow night at the Belasco Theatre in "The Music Master" promises to be one of the most interesting events of the theatrical season. In this new play he will make a wide departure from his former characterizations. He will play the part of an old German musician, who at one time had been Director of the Opera in Dresden. His wife had proved faithless and fled to America with their only child.

It is years later that old Anton von Barwig is first seen in New York. He is tired, poor, gray, but always cheerful in his search for his lost wife and child. It was a long step downward from Director at Dresden to leader of an orchestra in an east side café. But he took it in order to find his daughter. It happens that she comes to him for music lessons, and he begins daily visits to the home of the man she thinks is her father, the man who stole Frau von Barwig. Thereafter interest centres in the characters of father and child.

He is a man of noble impulses, thoroughly unselfish. He recognizes that his daughter's happiness surely depends upon his own silence.

Mr. Belasco has staged "The Music Master" with great care, and has provided Mr. Warfield with a cast of excellent players. The author of the play is Charles Klein. The cast:

Herr Anton von Barwig	David Warfield
Signor Tagliarico, "Fico" of Milan, first violin	W. G. Ricardi
Mons. Louis Pinac of Paris, second violin	Louis P. Verande
Herr August Poons of Leipsic, 'cello	Leon Kohlmar
Musicians of the Liberty Cafe.
Henry A. Stanton	Campbell Gollan
Andrew Cruger	William Boag
Beverly Cruger, his son	Carrington Yates
Mr. Schwarz, Secretary Amalgamated Musical Association	Alfred Hudson
Mr. Ryan, Delegate Brickmakers' Union	Tony Bevan
Al Costello	Louis Hendricks
Joles	Harold Mead
Ditson, Mr. Stanton's secretary	H. G. Carlton
Danny	Master Richard Kessler
A Collector	Downing Clarke
Mrs. Andrew Cruger	Isabel Waldron
Helen Stanton	Minnie Dupree
Miss Houston of Houston Street	Marie Fates
Jenny	Antoinette Walker
Charlotte, Mrs. Cruger's nieces	Sybil Klein, Jane Cowl
Octavie, nieces	Jane Cowl

Della Fox has been absent from the stage four years. She will come back next Friday, appearing at the Princess Theatre in "The West Point Cadet." It was adapted from the French of Paul Billaud and Alfred Barre by M. Norden. Miss Fox's rôle is something like those which she essayed in "Wang," "The Little Trooper," "The Wedding Day," and "The Little Host."

"The West Point Cadet" tells the tale of Billie and Lillie, twin children of ex-Senator Ethan Allen Barnard. Billie is at a military school, preparing for West Point. The President of the Academy, one Scott, wants to marry his nephew to Lillie, and therefore represents this youth to the ex-Senator as a Captain in the United States Army, though in reality he is nought but a grocer's clerk. Lillie does not want to marry him.

Billie comes to her aid. He organizes a revolt of the cadets in the Academy for the meanwhile, has been locked in his room for insubordination and escapes by dressing in his sister's clothes. The third act occurs in a hotel near the Grand Central Station. The complications caused by a change of costume are said to be ridiculous. The cast:

Ethan Bernard	Scott Cooper
Billie, Lillie	Della Fox
Ernest Everett	Richie Ling
General Jackson Scott	Arthur Cunningham
Aurelia	Agnes Stone
Washington Grat	Joseph Herbert
Alonzo Sheridan Scott	Edward Abeles
Cesarine Allen	Clara Palmer
Tom	Madeline Hazlett
Harry	Mabel Carrier
Fred	Laura Butler
Ben	Viola Clayton
Drill Sergeant	Robert Ward
Pat, the porter	Edward Lehay
Fritz, the gardener	James Nichols
Pierre	Joseph Graham
Waiter	James Nichols
Policeman	Joseph Graham
Valet	Roy Cutter

"How He Lied to Her Husband" is the name of the play which Arnold Daly will produce at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre to-morrow night. It is by Bernard Shaw, who insists that it be called a "comedietina." "The Man of Destiny," played last season, will make up the double bill. Dorothy Donnelly is still Mr. Daly's leading lady. Others in the cast are Dodson Mitchell, Selina Johnson, John Findlay, Louise Closser, Thomas Thorne, and Herbert Carr.

A new star will come to Fourteenth Street to-morrow night, when Sydney Ayres appears in "A Texas Ranger." Mr. Ayres, the press agent says, has seen active service as a rough rider. The play tells of the arrival of Lord Angus Trevor, Lady Trevor, and Lady MacKensie at a Texas ranch. They intend to buy it. Jack Dallas (Ayres) is a cowboy in love with Texas West, (Florence Lester,) daughter of the ranch owner. Pascal, another cowboy, accuses Dallas of being a cattle thief. Later, after Dallas has become a ranger, he is shot at a dance by Pascal. Finally, though, he kills his enemy, becomes the owner of a ranch, "strikes oil," and marries Texas West. The cast:

Colonel Buck West	Alexander Kearney
Mrs. West	Hattie Foley
Texas West	Florence Lester
Lord Angus Trevor	Edward Emery
Lady Cecelia Trevor	Grace Cahill
Lady Frances MacKensie	Bessie Davis
Mrs. Peppercorn	Ida Gillette
Sam Sorrell	Howard Messimer
Pascal	Tod F. Griffin
Bowie	William J. Phinney
Chuggs	W. C. Tucker
Holmes Okie	Louis Thiel
Corpus Christi	Stephen Hoyt
Salty Joe	John Coleman
Tank	George Wessells
Dallas, called "Freshwater Jack," cowboy and Texas Ranger	Sydney Ayres

critics to sit up and wonder." The story is of Ralph Richmond, a dissolute actor, who tries to win the hand of Josie Randall. He makes her promise to wed him in return for getting her a position on the stage. Her father opposes the match; so does her lover, Richard Lawson. Richmond is already married. His wife is a newspaper reporter; she is also an "unscrupulous woman."

Richmond arranges for a mock marriage. Thinking his plans have been discovered by the father of the girl, he kills the old man in his office. Then he tells the people that the dead man was a defaulter and committed suicide. The mock marriage takes place. But Scrapple, a newsboy, saw it and took a photograph of it. He exposes the villain, who promptly commits suicide. The scenes show The Herald Building, the Grand Circle, and the Brooklyn Bridge. The cast:

Richard Lawson	Roland G. Edwards
Ralph Richmond	Carl Smith Searle
Joseph Randall	William Lee Hall
Beeman Moregis	Leon Mayo
Scrapple	Le Roy E. Summer
Limp	Walter Nelligan
Mugs	Arthur Sullivan
John Armstrong, a detective	William Lee Hall
Manager	Arnold Thompson
Josie Randall	Muriel Starr
Blanche Carrington	Florence Ashbrooke
Mrs. Kate McGinness	Mary McDonald
Rags	Ida Lawrence
Mrs. Randall	Mary McDonald

William Collier will come to the Harlem Opera House to-morrow night in "The Dictator." The cast is the same that presented the play at the Criterion a week ago.

Henri Gressit will present "Captain Barrington" at the Metropolis Theatre this week. The large cast will be headed by William Bramwell. He plays three rôles.

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home" will come to the West End Theatre to-morrow evening.

The press agent of the Third Avenue Theatre announces the startling fact that this week's play is not to be sensational. If this is true it is doubtful if Third Avenue will recognize it as a play. It is called "New York Day by Day."

"Wedded and Parted" is to be at the New Star to-morrow for a stay of one week.

Lew Dockstader's aggregation of blackface "artists" will come into New York a week from to-morrow and settle down for a three weeks' stay at the Herald Square Theatre.

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

Mrs. Fiske, assisted by John Mason and is acting "The Duke of Killicrankie." The play will be at the Empire until late in November.

"The County Chairman" has a couple of weeks more at Wallack's Theatre. Its prosperity does not seem to be on the wane.

George Ade's success, "The College Widow," has proved of sufficient interest to attract crowds to the Garden Theatre. It is packing the house.

William H. Crane, in his remarkable character part at the Criterion, is winning approval. "Business Is Business" seems destined to be as popular in America as it has been abroad.

"The Isle of Spice," rewritten and improved, continues at the Majestic. "How Can You Tell Till You Try?" is the latest song.

William Faversham and Carlotta Nillson continue to appear in "Letty" at the Hudson Theatre. Julie Opp's portrayal of the milliner's assistant is one of the interesting features of the show.

Cecilia Loftus in "The Serio-Comic Governess" is succeeding well at the Lyceum Theatre.

"Taps" at the Lyric Theatre has won a success never dreamed of by its managers. The Lyric is a large house, and there are but few empty seats these nights. Kelcey and Shannon, Robert Loraine, Charles Swickard, and the rest of the cast carry the play to its end without a hitch.

Clyde Fitch's "The Coronet of the Duchess" will be at the Garrick indefinitely. Its second week begins to-morrow night. Besides Mrs. Bloodgood, the cast contains Georgie Mendum, William Courtleigh, and Mrs. Hone.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will stay at the Savoy as long as the business continues to be as good as it has been during the last few weeks.

"Checkers" will begin its sixth week at the Academy of Music to-morrow night. Its drawing power is as strong as ever.

features are being continually added by Mr. Frohman.

Lulu Glaser will begin to-morrow night her fourth week in "The Madcap Princess" at the Victoria Theatre.

"Piff, Paff, Pouf" is at the Casino.

"The Rogers Brothers in Paris" will stay at the New Amsterdam Theatre until Oct. 8. On the following Monday the show will move to the new Liberty Theatre, giving way to Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

Denman Thompson will remain in "The Old Homestead" at the New York three more weeks.

"The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" will be at the Grand Opera House another week.

VAUDEVILLE.

May Robson will be the big attraction at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre this week. She will appear in a sketch entitled "Coming." It is condensed from one of the plays in which Miss Robson has appeared before. Theatregoers remember Miss Robson as a member of the Empire Theatre stock company and afterward as one of the Weber-Fields forces. At Proctor's this week she will be assisted by Sydney Lee and Bruce Brayton. Venelle's horses is the second number on the bill. Others are Ethel Robinson, May Evans, Kendall and Thompson, and De Renzo and Ladne.

"Captain Letterblair," an old play of E. H. Sothern's, will be presented by the stock company at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre this week. Edwin Arden will have the principal rôle. Mr. Arden has proved a great drawing card. This will be his third week with the stock company. Miss Isabelle Evesson will lead the supporting company. James Richmond Glenroy is at the top of the vaudeville list. Others are J. Francis Dooley, Kelly and Reno, the De Muths, Nettie Massey, and George E. Austin.

Miss Beatrice Morgan will take the leading part in "Soldiers of Fortune" at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre to-morrow. She was at the Fifth Avenue last season, and worked rapidly upward from insignificant rôles to a prominent place in the company. This Fall and Winter she will be at the head of the Harlem organization. George Henry Kohiker will support her in "Soldiers of Fortune." Loney Haskell is at the top of the vaudeville bill.

Miss Mabel McKinley will be at Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall this week. Miss Odette Tyler will appear in a one-act comedy, "The Man and the Maid." Others prominent on the bill this week are the Four Lukens, Stanley & Welch, Hines and Remington, the Latell Brothers, Herbert Brooks, and Kino.

McIntyre and Heath, the veteran minstrels, will be the feature of the show at the Circle Theatre this week. This engagement, it is announced, will be their last New York appearance in vaudeville. Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne will appear in "The New Depot." The rest of the bill will contain Spessardy's bears, Frank and Jen Latona, Clarice Vance, Jack North, Smiri and Kessner, and Maximillian.

Mr. Harcourt will be seen in "A Dakota series will be given in Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday evening, Nov. 15. The renewal of subscriptions for the entire season of six concerts will open next month. The sale will be in charge of George Becker, at Dobson's, 867 Broadway.

***

Jan Muncascy, violinist, will give a recital in Knabe Hall on Wednesday evening at 8:30 P. M.

***

Many of the works to be produced during the coming season by the Russian Symphony Society will be heard for the first time in America. Mr. Altschuler, the conductor, has secured the scores of numerous compositions by living composers. At the first concert will be produced in concert form the third act of Rimsky-Korsakoff's ballet "Mlada." Mr. Altschuler also promises works by Arensky, Glazunoff, Rachmaninoff, and Ippolitoff-Ivanoff. Tschaikowsky will be represented by works never produced here, including numbers for mixed voices and orchestra.

***

Eugen d'Albert will give a series of thirty-five concerts in this country during the months of January, February, and March.

NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

The Librarian of Congress has published a "Select List of Recent Purchases in Certain Departments of Literature," of which the musical department makes an interesting showing. The National Library contains a great collection of music and books about music, and the Librarian, Mr. Herbert Putnam, is working wisely, with the co-operation of O. G. Sonneck, Chief of the Division of Music, to enlarge it. The division is in a curious situation. It was made separate in 1897; the accumulations of more than a hundred years of entries under the copyright law had already made a vast and unique collection. But there was very little else. Of European publications prior to 1891 the Library possessed very few, and those chiefly the works of American composers. In 1891 many foreign works were entered for international copyright, and this fact has greatly increased the representation of contemporary music. But within the last three years there has been a systematic effort and a very considerable expenditure to enlarge the scope of the collection. How the gaps have been filled is shown in this list. The effort has been to obtain the works of the classical composers in complete editions so far as they have been published, those of the more notable modern masters, and the literature of music relating to history and theory. Special attention has been paid to early American psalmody, civil war music, and serial publications of a historical character. The collection now numbers about 400,000 items—books, pamphlets, and pieces of music—and it is the enlightened desire of the Librarian and his subordinate at the head of the division to increase its usefulness to every one interested.

"Musical Cameos" is the title of a modest collection of little essays by James Redfern Mason of The Rochester Post-Express and reprinted from the columns of that journal. Each one is about some special piece of music, which is reprinted with the text. The author's object he declares to be to "encourage catholicity in musical taste." The ground covered is very wide—as wide, practically, as the whole art of music. The text, descriptive and explanatory, is written with taste and thoughtfulness.

The Aeolian Company publishes a little series of booklets which it calls "The Music Lover's Library," intended as a help to the study of the works of great composers. Already issued are four devoted to Beethoven and two on Wagner. The purpose is to present an analysis and a suggestive discussion of the works chosen, which by repeated hearing, in whole or in part, in arrangements for mechanical instruments, may be so far mastered that an appreciation of their form, thematic development, and musical content may be gained, and the student prepared for an understanding of them. The student is expected to follow the performances with scores of the works, to read and study literature concerning them, or to listen to lectures and detailed criticism on them. Mr. Surette's lessons are a guide to this sort of study. He briefly gives a historical background, a sketch of the composer's position in the development of the art, something about his personality and artistic ideals, and then discusses and analyzes the works in question. The method is pursued in several universities and music schools with approval.

A series of finger exercises by Albert Ross Parsons, entitled "Mind and Fingers," is published by J. H. Schroeder. It gives a thousand contrapuntal combinations of pianoforte figures for both hands together, intended to promote ambidexterity, and devised to this end with great ingenuity.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

Charles Hawtrey, prior to resuming a tour in "The Message from Mars," will appear at the Orpheum Theatre, in Brooklyn, this week. "Time Is Money" will be his playlet. It is the same in which he appeared at Proctor's house and at Keith's, in Manhattan. Clayton White and Marie Stuart are second on the bill. Another feature will be Paul Spadoni, the juggler. On the bill are Press Eldridge, Louise Dresser, Mr. and Mrs. Allison, the Trio Napoli, and Reeches's Dogs and Ponies.

"The Prince of Pilsen" will be at the Manchuria's Queer Theatrical Performances

Fantastic Shows in Which Religion and Amusements Are Combined—The Strolling Players.

IN MUKDEN, Tsin-min-tsin, and other Chinese towns theatrical performances are common. They are regarded in two ways—they amuse and they celebrate. The celebrations are of some holy festival.

Before some pagodalike, ornate, six-sided temple, whose pale-yellow roof shines in the sun, the performance is held. A masquerade procession is the prelude to a performance. Strange dragons, serpents, and mummers in antique costume parade before the crowds.

These fantastic creatures are very like the miniature counterparts of green and yellow paper seen in shops all over the world. They are more grotesque than funny, more terrible in their grins and contortions than awesome. As the white races understand beauty, none is evident in a Chinese theatrical spectacle. Some queer laughing god, whose image or picture is on the walls of the temple, is the inspiration. They worship before his leering face with the laughable, laughing monster. Nothing is more solemn than the face of a Chinaman. But when he laughs all the deviltry of that which cannot be comprehended breaks out. He is the reverse of the divine mystic to a European imagination. It may be race prejudice, but he seems in his sacred rôles to be incarnate with the profane, the diabolical.

But every man to his own humor!

Confucius was certainly very wise and sane in most of his philosophy. And in his image there is a genial look. So before his temple, where slender columns are wreathed in lively, hybrid serpents, the spectacle of three days' duration may be celebrated.

The priests arrange these matters in China. They seem to believe in combining religion and amusement. Men are sent around with a subscription paper. Afterward the generosity of the subscribers is publicly shown. Quite as subscribers to a season of Grand Opera here these are published, with their names and the amounts contributed. But it is not in the journals or society papers that this is made public. On the very white or pale colored walls of the holy temple itself are pasted the red sheets. On these, made of the same paper that we know on the labels of firecracker packages, the names of the wealthy and prominent patrons are written in vertical, fantastic rows, black or gold.

They are as fond of glowing placards as the French, and even more artistic. Who can say that the poster is a new advertising fad?

Three days and even three weeks are the length of a performance. These also prove that Wagner was not original in that respect, for the spectators take short recesses for eating and sleeping. Moreover, our term "continuous performance" is put to shame by these ardent devotees to the sacred theatrical, for they do not repeat. They relate some long mythological tale, some religious fable, some narration where war and myth and adventure are woven into a continued story.

Perhaps they have no three-volume novels to read and no monthly magazines to publish them. Perhaps it is human to revel from time to time in a long-drawn-out tale, replacing the illusion of daily life by one of the imagination.

When the Players Come.

In the small villages where such amusements are rare the people neglect everything when a strolling party comes along. The brown, shiny, awe-struck crowds act as if bewitched. They give vent to their emotions by yells and shrill cries. Their faces are distorted, twisted into what is intended for an expression of feeling. It really is feeling, too, for the people are as if hypnotized. They throw themselves into it, and their strange signs of pleasure, reverence, and fear look like caricatures to the European eye.

Few permanent buildings exist for theatres. These are only in the very largest towns. The strolling actors, wandering from village to village, carry their trappings on camels. One day's time is ample to put up a theatre where 2,000 persons may view the spectacle. The stage is raised under a large shed, in front of which smaller ones surround the space meant for the spectators who have subscribed.

Painted matting is the material for scenery and furniture, with the very simplest of stools or tabourets to supplement it. These are easily carried on or off from the rude dressing places in the rear.

On one side sits the orchestra. Any one who has heard a Chinese orchestra with composure can listen to any other kind of din. It sounds at the great moments of climax as if fiends were loose. The harsh shrieks of the actors, the whistles, groans of the spectators, the wild wails of the instruments, with an ominous undertone of rhythm, strike a chill into the heart of a foreigner. He feels as if fate itself were gone mad. The harmony of sky and earth, peace and love is blasted in a terrible convulsion. If a person of sensitive nerves never has known extreme fear let him listen. His imagination will allow him to be hypnotized into a strange horror. No heaven remains for his soul.

The acting is chiefly pantomime. Here we must admit inferiority, for it shows fine training. Female parts are taken by boys, who paint and dress like women. Realism is demanded as well as fancy. These poor suffering boys must even squeeze their youthful feet into the small shoes worn by those patient, subjected creatures called women. But at the slightest excuse they rush to the rear and take them off with intense relief. It is probably not imitation only which causes these boys playing women's parts to walk with a mincing, wriggling gait, supposed to be feminine.

The gowns are made of gorgeous silk and satin, embroidered beautifully in fine silk or gold. A student of Chinese costume finds these to be the best examples of ancient Chinese clothing existing at the present time.

The stage traditions are crude. An actor plays he is mounting a horse by raising his leg and then prancing across the stage, where he plays he is dismounting, and announces that he has arrived at his journey's end.

If they wish to show a city wall and how it is battered down they do not use accessories made of sticks covered with canvas as we do. Men are piled in a heap to represent a wall and then the warriors rush upon this heap and demolish it.

It is a strong reminder of football.

When the spectators wish to applaud they sigh and groan. This shows emotion better than the clapping and the stamping employed by the white man.

In the cities where the wealthy families live they can hire actors and acrobats for private festivities. Women may not witness public performances, but sometimes see them in seclusion.

A company of actors has its name as ours have, but it is apt to be vari-colored and bizarre. "The Happy and Blessed Company," the "Glorious Looking Company" are samples of the titles by which they advertise their own particular state of well-being and good fortune and desirability.

They give their three-day or three-week drama, pack up the scenery, costumes, furniture, and minor accessories upon the back of a camel and proceed to the next town, quite in the fashion of an old-fashioned traveling circus.

SAY, I gave those parsnips to the wife yesterday, and she cooked them for supper last night, and they were fine! I was telling her about this garden of yours on the river, and she declared that the first spare time she had she would come up here and see it. Said the parsnips tasted as fresh as if they had just come from the farm where she lived as a girl."

"I'm glad you enjoyed the parsnips, Captain. Won't you take home a few beets to-day?"

And then the curiosity of the reporter came to the front and he broke into the conversation.

"What did you mean by the garden on the river?" he asked.

The two men were standing on the draw of the Madison Avenue bridge, which crosses the Harlem River at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street.

"Come here, my boy," said the first speaker, a tugboat Captain, and he led the way to the guardrail of the bridge. "See all that green stuff on the breakwater? Well, that's a full-fledged vegetable garden, and he (indicating his companion) is the gardener. Time I was going home. He will tell you about it." And the Captain departed.

"Yes," said the other man, one of the bridge engineers, whose name is Daly, "we have a flourishing vegetable garden yielding several varieties of truck.

"It's six years now since the first attempt to grow vegetables on the earth at the ends of the breakwater was made, and we have been very successful."

"What do you grow?" asked the reporter.

"Spinach, lettuce, onions, parsnips, carrots, and two kinds of beets," replied Daly. "One of the bridgetenders has rhubarb, beets, and radishes growing on the other breakwater."

Then Daly invited the reporter to take a look at his garden. He found a stretch of land measuring 80 by 30 feet with a depth of 18 inches. Underneath is a foundation of broken stone, and just below was the river.

A pleased look came across the engineer-gardener's face as he noted the expression of surprise on the countenance of the reporter. "Pretty novel place to grow vegetables, don't you think?" he asked. And the reporter admitted that it was.

"Look at the size of these onions," said Daly, proudly, pulling a few from the earth. They were large and had the fresh look of the country-grown product.

"It's queer about the onions," said Daly, "They are the only vegetable that the water rats, which infest the garden, won't eat. Seem to stick up their noses at them, just like human beings.

"The rodents make their way up through the stone, and by tearing away the earth get at the vegetables. This exposes the roots, and we have to constantly dump in earth to protect them. The rats are particularly fond of parsnips. There are the remains of last night's feast."

And Daly pointed out bits of parsnips scattered about the garden.

"Can't you get rid of the animals?"

"No," said the amateur gardener. "We tried to kill them with poisoned bread, but they ignored it after their first experience. Two or three of the rats died, and the others seemed to know that the bread had caused their deaths, and they never touched it again. Then we tried to catch them in traps, but they were too cunning to enter them.

"But, as it is, we get a plentiful supply of vegetables. The bridge force consists of sixteen men, and there is enough truck to supply all."

LONDON'S QUAINTEST SIGHTS AS DESCRIBED BY AMERICAN WOMEN

Opera Slippers Worn in Streets on Rainy Mornings—An Eruption of Fried Fish—The "Thank You" Habit in Shops.

Foreign Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.
LONDON, Aug. 31.

IN one of the countless boarding houses of the Bloomsbury district of London, so much frequented by visiting Americans, a lot of New York woman school teachers, kept in the house by a tremendous downpour of rain, organized a little experience meeting.

"While we are waiting for the clouds to dry," said one of the women, "why not have a little symposium? I suggest that each one of us tell what was the most impressive thing she saw this forenoon."

The suggestion was unanimously approved, whereupon the roll was called, and each woman as her name was spoken made her statement.

"The thing that impressed me most this morning," said Woman No. 1, "was the enormous amount of antique Sheffield plate on sale in London. In the course of my wanderings betwixt breakfast and lunch I must have seen with my own eyes not less than four tons of 'old Sheffield plate,' and of course what I saw was not a thousandth part of what there is for sale throughout London."

"All of it guaranteed, I suppose," suggested one of the listeners.

"Guaranteed! I should say so. 'Bring it back if you don't find it the real article' they all say, or words to that effect. Just as if, having carted a candlestick or a platter home to Brooklyn, I could come back to London with the thing and fight it out with the dealer, if I should find he'd swindled me.

"But surely only a very small percentage of this alleged antique stuff really is antique. There must be a lot of 'old Sheffield plate' factories somewhere, turning out this stuff in carload lots—working overtime.

"I judge we Americans get our share of the bogus article and mighty little of the genuine thing. I'd like to ask this little company to inform me how it stands with reference to 'old Sheffield plate.' I'll ask those who have purchased samples of it to take home to their loved ones to raise their right hands."

There were eight women in the room; seven hands were thrust up toward the ceiling.

"So bad as that!" quoth the Brooklyn woman with a sigh.

"This was my first day in London," said the next woman, "and I went to have a look at St. Paul's. But it wasn't St. Paul's that impressed me most. The thing that opened my eyes widest was the footgear I saw the Englishwomen wearing.

"Why, all the traditions of my life with respect to the Englishwoman were completely upset. Her one great merit, I had been taught, was that she wore sensible shoes and could walk six miles an hour without turning a hair.

"When I saw her to-day in her opera slippers, painfully making her way in the slime of the sidewalks and pavements, I was shocked. It was as pitiful as it was ridiculous.

"I remember especially well a stocky woman of about thirty-five who reminded me of Henry VIII.'s 'Flemish Mare.' Her number nines were inclosed in a pair of yellow opera slippers, with heels two inches high and soles like thin pasteboard. Her feet must have been soaking wet, for her slippers certainly were wet through ridiculousness of her slippers as she found them in the shop by the application of rubber lifts to the two-inch heels. She evidently considered she was most beautifully 'foot-geared,' for she carried her petticoats well up from the ground as if inviting the world to view her wonderful understanding.

"At least half the women I met were in opera slippers. Is it a new fashion in London, I wonder?"

"Been doing it a long time, I'm told," one of the party remarked. "Did it all last Winter."

"Really!" exclaimed the astonished women.

"Yes, really and truly."

"Well I'll be switched," exclaimed a little black-eyed woman from Harlem, at which all the others laughed, and then came the story of another impression.

"The London flower hag gave me my impression," said Woman No. 3. "In all my life I never saw anything so disgusting.

"Of course this town is full of women who are perfect drabs. There are hundreds and hundreds of repulsive women to be seen every time one makes a short cut from one of the main streets of London to another. They seem to be the products of poverty, shiftlessness, and debasement of one sort and another. It makes me shudder to see these poor slatterns, and though no doubt many of them are as full of want as human beings can be and live, the feeling they arouse in me is abhorrence rather than pity.

"I caught myself wondering the other day how it is possible for refined people with eyes and noses to go among the classes to which these women belong and do missionary work. I'm sure there is no match for these women in New York.

"Just think of such creatures selling flowers on the streets! The last flowers I bought outside a shop I got in Milan from a beautiful flower girl. Oh! she was so handsome, so clean, so absolutely fit for the business she was engaged in.

"So different from the flower hags I saw to-day. My flesh crawled when they rubbed against me and offered me their little bunches of blossoms. It seemed like profanation for such dirty, disgusting wretches to be handling those lovely flowers."

"Did you buy of them?"

"Buy of them! I should think not. Could I take a bunch of roses their touch had defiled and pin it to my dress or put it in my hair, or place it in my tooth mug on my centre table? I'd want it thoroughly sterilized before I would consent to make friends with it."

"Boiled and sprinkled with carbolic acid, I suppose," suggested one of the women, and then they had another laugh.

"How much is two shillings?" inquired the next woman.

"Forty-eight cents," chorused all the other women in the room.

"That's what I thought. Well, I'll tell you why I asked. You know our minister and his wife sail for home to-morrow."

"Didn't know ministers ever took their wives to Europe with them; thought they invariably left 'em at home for economy's sake," somebody interrupted.

"That's not the way with our minister; his wife is here with him. And, as I said before, they sail to-morrow. So I went to-day to the place just at noon, when the working people were lunching. Never saw a busier place in my life. Six men were behind the counter serving customers, and each was working as fast as he knew how.

"Every minute or two a man would come rushing in from the back shop with a waiter piled high with fish just out of the frying kettle, and I judged from the frequency with which he appeared and the quantities of fish he brought with him there must be some enormous vats of hot fat in that rear room.

"Nobody ate his fish in the shop, but each customer, as he was served, made a dash for the street and took his fish to the place where he had stowed the bread and butter brought from home in the morning.

"I must have seen two hundred persons come out of that shop in the time I stood watching it. The serving was wonderfully rapid. The servers worked with both hands, not bothering to use forks.

"Customers would approach the counter and say something to one of the servers. Quicker than you could say 'Jack Robinson' he'd have what he had called for wrapped in a piece of newspaper, and off he'd go.

"I saw some boys eating out of their papers as they moved along the street. Really the stuff looked fairly appetizing. I could easily see how a person with a normal appetite could eat it with a relish.

"But my! I'll never forget the outpouring from that restaurant. I must have seen whole schools of fish come through that doorway.

"They tell me they have those restaurants all over London. They must be a great boon to the poor working people. We ought to have something of the kind at home, don't you think so?"

They all thought so and said so.

"My impression," said the next woman, "isn't altogether the result of what I saw this morning; it's a cumulation affair. The impression, however, took a more decided form in my mind to-day than it had assumed before.

"I went into a shop to buy a pair of gloves. The chief floor walker halted me and asked me what I was looking for.

"'Gloves,' I snapped out. I detest floor walkers and always treat them shabby.

"'Thank you,' said the floor walker, 'third room to the right.'

"When I reached the third room to the right another floor walker accosted me.

"'Gloves,' I snapped out again.

"'Thank you,' said the floor walker and he passed me along to a salesman.

"'What would you like to see, Madam?' asked the salesman.

"'Gloves,' I answered, thankful that was the last time I'd have to tell anybody in that store what I was there for.

"'Any particular sort of gloves, Madam?'

"'Black undressed kid.'

"'Thank you.'

"He fitted me expeditiously, and I said 'I'll take this pair.'

"'Thank you.'

"I handed him the money and again he said 'Thank you,' and when after a minute or two the gloves had been wrapped up and my change had come back, he handed parcel and money to me and once more said 'Thank you.'

"I wondered if both the floor walkers would thank me as I passed out. They did.

"Well, it came into my mind as I walked away from that store that London had the 'Thank yous' very bad, and that I'd been thank you'd from morning till bedtime every day since I came here. Do you know it's got on my nerves. I want to go somewhere where there are no 'thank yous' and stay there half a day.

"Try Hempstead Heath," suggested the Brooklyn woman who had been there the day before.

"Thank you," said the anti-thank you schoolmarm, and the "merry ha ha" once more burst forth.

"Cheap intra-urban transportation is the impression that came to me this morning," said the black-eyed woman from Harlem whose turn to speak had now come around.

"What's that?" demanded half the roomful.

"Well, cheap 'bus rides then, if you must have it in monosyllables. New York is far ahead of London, I think, in the matter of long-distance transportation, but it lacks the London scheme of cheap fares for short rides. When one gets aboard a street car in New York one pays a nickel whether one rides one block or five miles. Here it is quite different. On the London 'buses, as in the London hotels, one pays for what one gets.

"In other words the 'buses are conducted à la carte. If one rides a mile, one pays for a mile ride, and so on.

"Now it happened this morning I had business at the Buckingham Palace."

"Ahem!" remarked the listeners in perfect unison.

"Thank you," said the Harlem woman, and then went on: "From the place where I took the 'bus to the place where I got off was about as far as from Fourteenth Street to the Grand Central Depot. Cost me a penny.

"Later in the forenoon I rode a good mile on another 'bus, and paid just one ha'penny.

"At the end of the ride I sat down on the curbstone and made a little poem, in which I undertook to record my sentiments with respect to this cheap scheme of transportation. If you will allow me I will read the poem."

"Move she be not allowed to read it," shouted one of the women.

"Oh, very well," said the Harlem woman, "I'll tell you in plain matter-of-fact prose. What I think is that the scheme is a grand one and that we ought to have it in New York. It costs a lot to go about in New York.

"For example, I want to match some silk. Look at the stores I have to go to—all the way from Broadway and Tenth Street to Eighth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. Shall I walk and go home a fagged-out woman or shall I pay a lot of five-cent fares?"

"Depends on how far off pay-day is," somebody suggested.

"That's just it. There are lots of times when one can't really afford to use the street cars. I think when I get home I shall agitate for the adoption of the à la carte system on the surface roads."

"I suppose some of you have seen at home the sort of thing I saw this morning," said Woman No. 8, the last of the lot.

"What was it?"

"Two well-dressed women in a street fight. It was grand. Maybe I should be ashamed to say so, but I enjoyed it immensely.

"Don't know what it was about—a man, I suppose—but I didn't have to know the raison d'être, as we say over on the east side, where my school is; it was lovely just as a spectacle.

"They were young women, and good-lookers, and they were dressed as well as any of us. Suddenly one sprang at the other and hit her over the head with an umbrella. The woman thus attacked shot out—not her fist, but her paw, and made a neat little criss-cross with her nails on the side of the umbrella woman's face. She then turned her back on the fray and tried to run away.

"But the umbrella woman wouldn't have it that way. She started in pursuit, and once more brought her weapon kersmash on the other one's bonnet. She got paid for it with a nasty little tap on her nose, and then there was another flight, another pursuit, and another whack at the bonnet.

"The grand finale swiftly followed. In less than half a minute every comb in the umbrella woman's head was in fragments, her golden hair—or what was left of it—was hanging down her back, and she was in a word a thoroughly licked woman. The other one went down a side street, with what the novelists call a glint of triumph spread all over her undamaged features. For the injury to her bonnet she didn't seem to care a rap.

"But it wouldn't have come out that way if the umbrella woman hadn't been a fool. Say, let me give you a bit of advice. It is this: If ever you get into a fight and decide

AROUND THE WORLD IN A CANOE.

CAPT. JOHN C. VOSS, a native of British Columbia, and for many years master of Nova Scotian ships, has just accomplished a remarkable and unprecedented voyage in a two-and-a-half-ton canoe. By covering 40,000 miles in three years three months and twelve days he has broken the American record.

Capt. Voss began his journey from Victoria, B. C., on May 21, 1901. He had as his sole companion Mr. Luxon, a son of the former proprietor of The Winnipeg Free Press.

Those who witnessed the start naturally expressed fears for the safety of a craft which draws but twenty-four inches of water. Her skipper did his best to make her seaworthy by adding a leaden keel of three hundredweight and constructing a cabin as a protection from adverse winds.

Gruesome Talisman.

The Tilikum (or "Friend") is fore-and-aft rigged, possessing three masts and a canvas area of thirty-eight yards. She was built by a North American Indian, long deceased, and the skull of the dead builder was carried aboard throughout the voyage. Whether regarded as a talisman or not, it could not have acted as a charm against disaster, seeing that a gruesome experience befel Capt. Voss while his romantic voyage was yet uncompleted.

Mr. Luxon had been taken off the canoe at one of the intermediate calling places, and Capt. Voss engaged another mate. Unmanifested no hostile feeling during his stay of seventeen days.

Lost His Mate.

From the capital of Fiji to Sydney was a run of 1,800 miles, and it was on this part of the trip that the fatality to the canoe's mate occurred. The voyage round the Australian coast was attended by an unexpected incident at Melbourne. Here the frail craft was damaged by the negligent use of a crane, and Capt. Voss brought an action for damages, which he won.

From Melbourne he went up to Ballarat, where he took part in a regatta, conveying the canoe for this purpose to an altitude of 1,400 feet above sea level. From Melbourne the course was to Adelaide, thence to Hobart, and to the most southerly point of New Zealand. While coasting here the Captain was all but deprived of his new mate, who was washed overboard, but was picked up.

An Ingenious "Anchor."

It must not be supposed that hitherto the Tilikum had experienced nothing but smooth seas. She had encountered at times very rough weather, and when the canoe put in at Christchurch her skipper was able to give before an assemblage of 7,000 people a demonstration of the value of his patent sea anchor, by the use of which the boat had lived through heavy seas.

He had put the anchor to a practical test off the Australian coast, for it had enabled him to weather a four days' gale. He gave a second exhibition at Wellington.

From Auckland he went on an eighteen days' trip to the New Hebrides, and his health having failed somewhat the adventurous voyager made for Thursday Island, in the Torres Straits, hoping to obtain some form, at least, of medical aid. The island was, however, found to be uninhabited.

Homeward Bound.

A run of 2,000 miles across the Indian Ocean brought the Tilikum to Rodrigues Island, which is a cable station, and here the canoe was reprovisioned. Subsequently Capt. Voss landed at Durban, South Africa, and went out to Ladysmith, Colenso, Pretoria, and East London.

From Cape Town he voyaged to St. Helena, and reached Pernambuco on May 21—exactly three years from the date of his first sailing.

The arrival at the Azores was delayed owing to the indisposition of Capt. Voss, who naturally was suffering from long confinement on so restricted an area as the deck of his canoe, and from want of exercise.

Making his course, after thirty days' sickness, to the English coast, Capt. Voss bespoke two British vessels, one of which he boarded. The second of these was the Colonial Empire, outward bound to San Francisco. Her commander, Capt. Simpson, asked Capt. Voss to report him as having passed the Lizard.

THE CRANBERRY PICKERS.

CAPE COD folks are gathering their cranberries. In a little while the New Jersey and Long Island marshes will swarm with pickers. Then the full red and white tide that annually sweeps into New York from the cranberry districts will make itself felt, and the forerunner of the Thanksgiving turkey become a commodity of present importance with both wholesaler and grocer.

There will not be so many cranberries this year as last. The vines seem to have been impressed by that conservatism which hedges about a Presidential year and to have decided to keep well within a defined yield limit. Last year United States growers raised 1,250,000 bushels. The crop of 1904 will be from 15 to 20 per cent. less, New Jersey showing the greatest decrease, where it is believed the crop will be 60 per cent. Still, prices are not expected to go any higher, for good old-fashioned apple sauce has of late years become a formidable competitor of cranberry sauce, and this keeps the figures at normal. Still, even with the reduced yield, there will be enough berries to make sufficient sauce for every turkey that survives the perils of getting wet and eating too much.

The first cranberries come from the Cape Cod bogs or marshes. There the harvest begins the last week in August. That attractive dark-red berry whose blush is on view in stores early in September is from Cape Cod.

Standard of Value.

Color is the cranberry standard of value, and so the New Jersey growers wait until the early Cape Cods are well out of the market before they make shipments in quantity. The Jersey grower is a most careful husbandman, always with an eye to the main chance. Some years ago the New Jersey Legislature made what is known as a bushel-crate standard; that is, it formally declared the crate in question contained, when filled, a bushel of berries.

For a time all went smoothly, but presently the men who handle cranberries in New York City discovered that the so-called bushel crate only contained thirty quarts instead of the regulation thirty-two. The thrifty Jerseymen had been receiving pay for two quarts in every crate that they never furnished. This was some years ago, so now in New Jersey a bushel is not a bushel when it is a crate of cranberries.

The cranberry harvest may be said to continue from the last week in August to the middle of September, or until severe frosts put an end to the season. Long Island's harvest is coincident with that of New Jersey, but its limited yield averages higher in quality than New Jersey's and generally brings top-notch prices. October is the cranberry month in the Middle States and west thereof. Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota are all cranberry States, the former leading in the size of its crop. Wisconsin used to be a large producer of cranberries, but forest fires ruined the majority of the bogs a few years ago, and since then the yield has been a fraction of what it formerly was. The Western berry, nowever, rarely finds its way into the markets of the East. Chicago buyers capture it and wholesale it to Western points.

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New England consume about one-fourth of the Nation's cranberry yield. The remainder goes West and South, to Canada, and a little to Europe.

Handled in New York.

New York is the leading shipping point, with Chicago and Kansas City second and third. New York dealers handle 250,000 bushels of a one-million bushel crop. Of this amount 100,000 to 150,000 bushels go to local consumers. The balance is shipped to many points. Texas is becoming a notable patron of the cranberry, and California is as fond of the berry as it is of its own luscious productions. All the cranberries sent abroad go to London and Liverpool, but the total is small. Liking for cranberries seems to be an acquired taste across the water, and though shipments have increased somewhat in the last twenty or twenty-five years, the gain is exceedingly small.

The cranberry grower will this year receive from $5.50 to $6 a 100-quart barrel for his crop. That is, he will average that for what the cotton buyer calls good ordinary. The retail price promises to be about 10 cents a quart, but the factor in this is the abundance of the yield. Sifting these figures, it will be seen that a large amount of money goes to some one between the producer and consumer, but it must be borne in mind that cranberries, like apples, must pay the price of long storage. Sometimes, when the producer can afford it, he puts away a large portion of his crop and lets it remain in storage until the last of December or the middle of January, when, as a rule, the price advances. In the Spring of 1902 a consignment of cranberries sold at from $18 to $20 a barrel. Those figures are rarely reached, but $12 to $15 a barrel is not uncommon at out-of-season times.

Even at present prices this will be a prosperous season for cranberry growers outside of New Jersey, from Cape Cod, where American cranberries were first grown, to the remote island of Kodiak, Alaska, the northern and westernmost point where the fruit is grown.

Of all familiar fruits it is safe to say that there is none of which so little is generally known as the cranberry. Originally it grew wild, as, in fact, it does today in several of the States bordering on the Canada line, in the salt marshes of the coast States, in the glades of the Alleghanies, and as far South as Virginia and the Carolinas. Unlike the strawberry, the wild cranberry is distinctly inferior to its cultivated relative. Both grow on a small, hardy shrub about six inches in height.

Origin of Name.

The fruit takes its name from the appearance of the flower, which, just before expanding into perfection, bears a marked resemblance to the neck, head, and bill of a crane. Hence the name "cranberry," which usage has made into "cranberry."

Sand and peaty ground form the proper soil for a cranberry marsh or bog. Instead of fertilizing, the grower is obliged to give the vines or bushes liberal coatings of sand. The ground must be low, as it is kept under water most of the time. The marsh or bog, as it is variously termed, is so arranged that any section of it may be flooded at the discretion of the grower, the system of ditches and sluices being the same as those used in irrigating the arid lands of the West. The making of the bog is an expensive process, involving an expenditure of from $300 to $500 an acre, and an interim of five years elapses before the yield is really profitable. After that, each year should give a larger return on the investment. No rotation of crops is necessary, and the shrubs live and bear and increase endlessly.

Planting a new section of bog is a simple process. A small handful of twigs is twisted together and thrust deep into the sand. They take root immediately, and within a year put forth new uprights and begin to send out runners. The planting is eight or ten inches apart in rows. Gradually the space between fills up, and in an old bog the shrubs grow as thickly as buffalo grass. All they then require is weeding, sanding, and flooding.

Flooding is necessary not only for the growth of the plant, but to protect it from the early frosts of Autumn. It is no unusual sight to see a half hundred pickers at work in one section of a bog, while the adjoining section is eighteen inches under water. Beneath the transparent covering the berries are seen, the water only intensifying their brilliant coloring and the deep green of the surrounding leaves.

Nimble Fingers Needed.

Picking cranberries is a task for nimble fingers. The picker, sitting or kneeling on the damp sand, plunges both hands, with fingers slightly spread, among the vines, and with a quick movement strips the berries from the stems and tosses them into a waiting pan. When the pan is filled it is emptied into a pail holding one-third of a bushel. The size is uniform, and the pickers are paid by the pail. The berries are finally put into crates and barrels. Before they are ready for market, however, they are winnowed, with the aid of a winnowing machine, of leaves and weeds, and are then ready for the consumer.

Cranberry scoops are largely used on Cape Cod and in New Jersey. A scoop is a box-like contrivance fifteen inches long, with wooden fingers. It is used to strip the vines of berries, and by its aid the task of gathering the berries is greatly expedited.

Cranberry growing is called a "young man's work." This means that a young man who chooses cranberry farming as a road to affluence must be willing to wait and work steadily and with perseverance while he waits. A few years ago a wealthy resident of Detroit, Mich., stirred by glorified accounts of cranberry-raising profits, invested $250,000 in an attempt to raise the berries on a large scale. He abandoned the enterprise at the end of the second year, losing almost the entire investment.

NEW YORK IS NOW THE NEWS CENTRE OF THE WORLD

How Europe Gets Its War News from America—The Importance of Washington—Some Remarkable News Beats.

WITHIN the past few years, and particularly since the laying of the Pacific cable, a great change has been observable in the news distribution of the world. New York is rapidly becoming, and in many ways has already become, the world's news centre, taking London's place.

Europe actually gets most of its news about the Russo-Japanese war from America, for example. Such a state of things would have seemed incredible even so short a time back as a year ago. As long as news collecting has been a business Europe has supplied America with news. Now the relations are rapidly being reversed.

The great news gathering association of the Old World is Reuter's Agency. In former times—in fact, in times so recent that the word "former" hardly seems the proper word to use—news from the Far East was sent from Asia to Europe by Reuter's Agency. Reuter supplied it to The Associated Press, which cabled it across the water for American use.

Now all that is reversed. The Eastern news is sent across the Pacific to The Associated Press, which furnishes it to Reuter's over the Atlantic cable for European use. The centre of Far Eastern news, for the supply of the world, has shifted from London to New York.

Not only is this so, but Europe actually gets its news of Eastern things quicker by way of America than it formerly did direct from Asia. It takes less time for one part of the Old World to find out by way of the New World what is happening in another part of the Old World than it did when the two parts of the Old World sent their news directly to each other.

There were twelve relay stations between Hongkong and London, and under the old system the Asiatic news was relayed from one point to another. It was subject to all kinds of delay at the various overland stations. Now there is practically no delay whatever from Shanghai or Hongkong to San Francisco and New York.

Whatever delay there is in war news comes from the land lines in North China, before it gets on the cable. There are really no relays for news dispatches on the Pacific. There are repeater stations at Guam, the Midway Islands, and Honolulu, but they are not relay stations.

In some cases news dispatches have come to New York from Chefoo in less than three hours. The Associated Press has received dispatches direct from Tokio in less than three hours since the outbreak of the present war. It has sent messages to Tokio and received replies in one forenoon.

Thus Europe gets its Asiatic news immediately from the Pacific cable, and hence it is that it has a quicker source of supply when Reuter gets the news from New York than it did when the European news agencies got the news themselves from Asia.

How remarkably the news centre of the world has shifted is shown to newspaper men in the receipt of dispatches concerning the progress of affairs in the Far East from the Southern Division of the Associated Press in the United States, instead of from the cable division.

Effect of Political Growth.

Aside from the radical changes wrought by the Pacific cable, there has been another change, not so striking or sensational, but destined to increase in significance and importance in coming years. It is a change resulting from a political growth, from an alteration in American political interests.

It dates from the appearance of the United States as a power interested and concerned in European and Asiatic affairs, from the end of the century-old policy of international isolation. It was first prominently noted, however, during the invasion of China by the allied army four years ago.

The effect on news distribution is simply this. Washington is added to the list of world capitals from which information is to be obtained regarding international and especially Asiatic affairs. In important matters all the world capitals of consequence are almost simultaneously acquainted with what is going on.

Now, Washington, in thus becoming a centre for international news, had one great point of superiority over most of the other capitals. The communication of public men with newspaper representatives is more direct and also more candid in Washington than in any other capital where international news is to be obtained.

In European capitals the heads of the Government do not hold daily receptions for newspaper men, nor are correspondents, as a rule, on terms of such easiness and familiarity with them as is the case in Washington. In some capitals there is not the same desire to keep the newspapers from going astray as is the case in Washington.

Washington News Correct.

It thus follows, and this is another thing that would have seemed incredible six years ago, that, as the United States has become a power interested in international issues and consulted concerning them, Washington and hence New York have become centres for news of Eastern situations, and more reliable centres than any in Europe.

It is practically almost an invariable rule that when news of an international matter comes from the United States and also from Europe, and there is any contradiction or difference in the dispatches, the Washington news is correct.

The invasion of China was a striking case in point. The world learned the details of that invasion from New York. All the misinformation and all the errors came from the other side. Europe believed the story of the massacre of the legations long after America knew that it was not true. Europe had the correct news from America, but the idea of getting Eastern news by way of the Atlantic was so novel that Europe hesitated to believe it.

THE NEW YORK TIMES that year exclusively announced the attack of the allied army upon Peking. This news was obtained in Washington, and nothing could be more significant of America's entry into the field of international politics than this announcement of an event that had occurred in Asia.

Europe was continually misinformed about Russia's policy, but New York furnished her with the truth. The failure of the allied army to move, and its movements after it started, were the subject of continual errors in European capitals. In every instance New York had the facts, and as early as possible.

Nor is it solely with regard to Asiatic news that this condition prevails. A while ago, when there were riots in Madrid, and Gen. Weyler was put in command to suppress the disturbances, the censorship prevented for some time a full account from coming out of Madrid. It came from Washington.

Revealed by The Times.

As another instance of this new state of affairs may be mentioned the fact that last Spring THE NEW YORK TIMES was able to announce the demands made by Turkey upon Bulgaria. Not a hint of them had come out in any European capital.

This change has come about by reason of the fact that with the growth of American interests the Government is kept fully and instantly advised by its agents of every happening anywhere in the world that can be of any interest. The foreign Ministers at Washington, too, receive information from their Governments regarding all happenings of importance. Of course these things were always true, in a measure, but in former times the subjects about which it was necessary to inform the Government at Washington and the foreign Ministers were not so numerous. In former times, for example, Washington would have been the last place in the world at which to learn that Russia had induced the powers to ascertain China's intentions regarding the Japanese war—another piece of news which first appeared on this side of the water and in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There is another respect in which the influence of New York as a news centre is made manifest in Europe. It relates to financial news, and is traceable to the difference in time between New York and London.

Distributing Financial News.

The interest felt in American financial news is such that it actually, to some extent, rearranges the hours of business in London and affects the daily lives of many men. The London Stock Exchange closes early, but most of the trading in American shares is done on the curb, and the curb market keeps open till 5 o'clock so as to get the news.

In busy times this curb market keeps open till 7 or 8 o'clock at night. The interest in American securities is very great, and London gets complete reports of our markets.

The London Times has a long detailed account every day, and this is copied in almost all the small papers. There is not a paper which does not give a great deal of space to the subject, and such papers as The Scotsman and The Yorkshire Post devote as much space to it as do the American papers.

The firms receive their news from New York constantly, and from private correspondents. The cable office is right on the curb market, so that those interested are in complete and constant touch with the situation here. The relations between the London curb market and New York are as close as between the London and Paris Exchanges. The getting of news from New York is therefore of as much importance as is the getting of news from Paris.

THE HUMMING-BIRD'S QUEST

By Stephen Chalmers

HOME came the humming bird, home to his mate,
Who sat by her nest in a croton tree,
Patiently tending a little babe
That was only the size of a bumble bee.

Said the little mother: "Behold my dower,
Fly to the woods and bring to my bower
The sweetest heart of the whitest flower
From the fairest vale in the jungle."

OFF went the humming bird, off to the woods,
His wings a-whirring a joyous song,
But he found no flower that was fair enough,
Though his wings grew tired as his flight was long.

Yet he sought for many a weary hour
To bring to the babe in the croton bower
The sweetest heart of the whitest flower
From the fairest vale in the jungle.

IN a shady vale where wild orchids grew,
Tired and sad and all forlorn,
The humming bird hid when the darkness fell,
To continue his quest with the break of morn.

Ashamed to go home to the croton bower—
Ashamed to gaze at its little dower
Without the heart of the sweetest flower
From the fairest vale in the jungle.

BUT an orchid heard his midnight sighs
And pitied the poor little humming bird;
Opened her petals of snowy white,
Wide awake ere the little one stirred.

With joy he whirred to the croton bower,
Having filled his mouth with the orchid's dower,
So the babe was fed with the sweetest flower
From the fairest vale in the jungle.

ORIGIN OF FREE LUNCH.

A SCOTCH investigator has discovered the origin of the American free lunch in the old Scotch custom of serving a "Spelding," or dried salt haddock, with each drink of ale or whisky, which still is practiced at the inns and public houses of Caledonia. The purpose, of course, is to create a thirst for more of the beverage, and it must be admitted that the purpose is usually achieved. Even in America there is more than a suspicion that the ingredients of the free lunch are often selected with the same end in view.

HOUSES NOW ON ROTARY PLATFORMS

A Novel Invention by Which Sunshine May Be Enjoyed All Day Long.

DR. PELLEGRIN and Architect Petit of Paris have designed, according to recent cable dispatches, a method by which houses, erected on specially constructed, rotating platforms, can be made to face any desired direction.

The platform, as planned, is supported by two concentric walls, and the axis of rotation is occupied by a shaft through which pass the supply and waste pipes. A gas engine moves the platform, which may be harnessed to clockwork. The clockwork may be so arranged as to enable the house front to follow the sun during the day.

The plan has attracted the attention of scientists throughout the civilized world. The curative power of the sun's rays has been long admitted. Their potentiality as a disease preventive is beyond dispute.

That New York is the one city able to construct a whole street of houses on rotating platforms, or any other kind of platforms which may prove a fad, is beyond peradventure.

"Until the engineering possibilities of the proposition are demonstrated beyond a doubt," said Commissioner Thomas Darlington of the Department of Health yesterday, "I question its feasibility. But if the rotating houses are possible there can be no discussion as to their desirability.

"The sun kills disease germs. Its rays constitute the best disinfectant known. They are the principal factors in increasing the red blood corpuscles. Iron is of very little value in providing red blood unless combined with the sun. The Romans and the ancient peoples knew the value of the sun, for they constructed their houses so that they might take sun baths upon their roofs. The Aztecs and the dwellers in the southwestern portion of this continent were formerly sun worshippers, for they knew its munificent effects.

"The chief benefits to accrue to people going to the Far West are due to the comparative absence of cloudy days. There are parts of the United States that enjoy perpetual sunshine. Sunshine is the greatest destroyer of mildew and mold. It is a purifier of water. People who work during the night are invariably pallid of face and flabby of muscle. Their blood is impoverished. They are not armed for the battle of life.

"Above all, sunshine is the one agency most conducive to cheerfulness. It is the cheapest kind of medicine. Rotating houses, constructed to point toward the sun from its rising to its setting, would be rather expensive, but to those who could afford the luxury they would well repay the cost."

THE Autumn season has begun with a rush. There were ever so many fashionable people in town last week, and the dates and arrangements for the October weddings have been given out and plans for the coming Winter discussed. A few of the cottagers will linger at Newport until quite late. Mrs. Ogden Goelet does not intend to close her villa until November. Her plans are uncertain. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who were in town last week looking for a house, will return to Beaulieu for the last weeks of October. Capt. and Mrs. Philip Lydig are taking a short season at Westbury before they come to New York, they being among the many who have suffered exceedingly by reason of strikes, leaving their new residence in a very incomplete condition. The polo games in the beginning of the week brought out as strong a contingent of society—remarkable for September—as one would see in the early Spring, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Goadby Loew, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, P. F. Collier, H. L. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Foxhall Keene being among the spectators and players. Society is yet in a state of transition, and these little gatherings do not mean that New York is actually beginning its social season, but that the Summer is over.

***

On next Saturday there will be three important weddings. These will be celebrated at various country places. At the picturesque little church of St. Peter's, at Gallilee, near Monmouth Beach, Miss Selina Jacquelin Fanshawe, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Fanshawe, will be married to Mr. George Henry Potts. Miss Fanshawe's mother was a Miss Jerome, and is a cousin of Mrs. Cornwallis West, who was formerly Lady Randolph Churchill. Miss Fanshawe's sister married last Autumn Mr. White, the son of Mrs. Foxhall Keene by her first marriage. Mr. Potts gave his bachelor dinner on Thursday evening at Delmonico's, and as already announced, Mrs. William Fanshawe will have a dinner dance, on Friday, for the bridal party at her villa at Monmouth Beach. Miss Isabel Fanshawe is to be maid of honor, and the Misses Emily Grugan and Emily Potts bridesmaids. Rockhill B. Potts will be best man, and E. Leighton Fanshawe, Harold Weekes, Arthur D. Weekes, Jr., and Edward H. Carle ushers.

***

Miss Mabel Stebbins's marriage to Capt. James Brady Mitchell of the United States Artillery Corps will take place at North Hatley, where Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stebbins, her parents, have had a cottage this Summer. Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins and the Misses Stebbins have been prominent members of the little New York colony at this pretty village in Canada for some seasons. Mrs. Charles Stebbins was Miss Minnie Vail. Miss Mabel Stebbins is a most accomplished young woman. She and her sister, Miss Ethel Stebbins, took a course of special studies at Cornell University, and they were graduated from there with high honors. The wedding will be an informal affair, and after the ceremony Capt. and Mrs. Mitchell will take a Western tour before going to their home, which will be Fort Williams at Portland, Me.

***

The wedding of Miss Winifred Folsom, the fifth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Winthrop Folsom, and Mr. Edward Henry Delafield will be the notable event of next Saturday at Lenox, Mass. Miss Georgette Folsom will be maid of honor and the bridesmaids Miss Janet Fish, Miss Cornelia Delafield, Miss Elsie Bacon, and Miss Gertrude Pell. This is the second wedding in the Folsom family this year. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Voorhis were married at the Folsom villa at Lenox in August, Mrs. Voorhis being a sister of the bride of next Saturday.

***

Fashionable life now centres around the various popular suburban clubs. First, there is Meadow Brook and the Long Island contingent, who set the ball rolling yesterday at the fair for charity given at the residence of Mrs. Clarence Mackay, at Roslyn, and described elsewhere, and at a dance at which Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont was the hostess. The frost has put the country in fine condition for hunting, and the regular programme has been arranged. During the Summer the foxes have increased and multiplied, and there will be some rare sport in October days. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds, Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Smith Hadden, Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bird, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Hitchcock, Jr., are all at their residences, and house parties are in order. Mrs. James P. Kernochan is visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. James L. Kernochan. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Dillon Ripley will return from Europe shortly. They have been motoring in Southern France and Italy. Mrs. Henry Hyde has closed her villa at Saratoga and has come to town. Her son, James H. Hyde, will entertain at his country seat on Long Island this Autumn, as usual. The reported arrival of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt will impart some bustle and life to the south side of Long Island. Their superb place, Idle Hour, is ready to receive them. Owing to Mrs. Vanderbilt being in mourning for her father, the late Oliver Harriman, she will not entertain on a large scale, but there will be always a houseful of guests at Idle Hour for the week end. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt are coming home by the same ship. They will be at their country seat, at Hyde-Park-on-Hudson, for quite a time. The Warrior, Mr. Vanderbilt's new yacht, will arrive later, and there will be a cruise to Southern waters and the tropics, when Winter shall have descended upon New York.

***

Of the other Vanderbilt plans this much is known: The George Vanderbilts arrived this week at Biltmore, where they are to be for the Autumn. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt will come to town for the Horse Show, and the Reginald Vanderbilts are contemplating a trip abroad. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., remain at their country seat at Lake Success until very late. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs has changed her mind about a trip to California and is to be at Newport until late November.

***

The H. McK. Twomblys remain at Madison until after Thanksgiving and Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb will have house parties right along at Burlington.

***

Herr Conried announces a splendid subscription for the opera, the first performance being on Nov. 21. There will be very few changes in the parterre boxes. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay have taken the William C. Whitney box, which is one of the most desirable in the house. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet will occupy the Goelet box. Mr. and Mrs. Almeric Paget have determined to remain abroad and are in negotiations for the residence of Mrs. Hartman, a very fashionable Englishwoman who has a most delightful town house in London. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney are abroad, but may return by November. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney would be one of the most frequent guests in the box of her mother, Mrs. Vanderbilt. It is not known when Mrs. Vanderbilt will return to New York. She and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt have had a very delightful Summer abroad. Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, according to present plans, will not make her début this Winter.

***

The subscription dances of the Winter will include the Junior Cotillions to be given as usual at Sherry's, the first taking place in December. Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Mrs. James M. Waterbury, Mrs. August Montant, Mrs. Duncan Wood, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, and Mrs. William Baylis will be among the patronesses. Also at Sherry's will be held the Cinderellas, organized by Mrs. John S. Barnes and other matrons. The University Cotillions, the Farmington dances for the graduates of Miss Porter's school, and the dances for young women not yet out at the Metropolitan Club will all go on this coming Winter. The Thursday Evening Dances, under the patronage of Mrs. Frederic J. de Peyster and Mr. Montgomery Strong, at Delmonico's, have dates Dec. 8, 1904, and Jan. 19, 1905. The first of the Saturday cotillions or dances, known for years as Mrs. Sands's class, will take place at Delmonico's on Dec. 10 and 24, 1904; Jan. 7 and 21, and Feb. 4 and 18, 1905.

The Neighborhood Cotillions will take place this Winter at Dodworth's on Dec. 8 and 29, 1904, and Jan. 26 and Feb. 23, 1905. The first Century Dance will be held at Delmonico's on Thursday, Dec. 15.

There will be a number of other smaller dancing classes.

***

Capt. and Mrs. Glen Collins are to be with Mrs. Spottiswood Schenck this Winter in Paris. The young couple are not separated and are very much in love with each other. They have taken an apartment with Mrs. Schenck. The Collins family have been a little obdurate, because at the time of the wedding Capt. Collins's financial affairs were not in the best shape. But he is not, as was represented, an impecunious person. He was obliged, owing to bankruptcy proceedings, to resign his commission in the army. He will eventually come into a very comfortable income. There have been many other well known London men who have gone into bankruptcy, and one of the most notable cases was that of the Duke of Manchester.

The Duke and Duchess, by the way, are going around the world. They intend to visit India and to penetrate into countries where but few Europeans have ever been. One of their points of destination is Lhassa, in Tibet. They take besides a yacht, on which they make their ocean voyage, a motor A corresponding secretary, who is a literary man, will assist in the compilation of the story of the journey. This will be published. Years ago, the Baron Sellière, disguised as an Arab, went through the Desert of Sahara in a caravan. E. Spencer Pratt, once Minister to Persia, and later Consul at Singapore, managed, in the dress of a darvish, to get as far as the great Chinese wall. These two voyages have never been put in print, and they are as interesting as the novel twentieth century experience, narrated elsewhere, of Cortlandt Bishop and Mrs. Bishop with a motor in North Africa, and of Mr. and Mrs. Phipps on their bridal tour through the jungles of Asia.

Miss MacLeod, the sister of Mrs. Francis H. Leggett, has made some memorable excursions in India, where very few, if any, Europeans or Americans have journeyed, and young Whitehouse of Newport headed an expedition through the Soudan and further into Darkest Africa. The books of the Burtons can contain no more graphic descriptions than these ladies and gentlemen could give.

***

A very pretty wedding of the week was that of Miss Malvina Nathan, the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nathan, and Edward Peixotto of San Francisco. It took place on Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs Peixotto will live in San Francisco.

L. SHAW,

AND NOW IT'S THE BOXING GIRL

Six-Ounce Gloves the Thing, and She Knows All About Feints, Clinches, and Side-Stepping—Woman's Latest Fad and Its Advantages.

THE Summer girl has unpacked her trunks, and put away with sighs more or less loud and deep her bathing suit, her yachting suit, her coaching clothes, her fishing tackle and rifle, her short skirts and tramping boots—all the things that smell of sea and mountains.

And as she looks at her plump brown arms and the neck that is full and smooth and only a shade lighter than her arms, she is wondering how she is going to keep these good brown pounds the Summer outing has given her. She can't let those good days of fishing and boating and bathing and tramping and sunning be wasted.

The brownness she can't keep. Fall clothes and housing will bleach that out. But the pounds she can keep, and must.

And already she has decided how to do it. This Winter she is going to box. She is tired of golf and basket ball and hand ball and tennis. She wants something new to piece out the old ones, and so the glove's the thing.

Boxing has for a long time been struggling for favor with the fair. It is one of the few things, however, that have remained man's own. But it is his no longer. The boxing girl is to have her day.

Not that the boxing girl is to invade the ringside. Heaven forbid!

But in the women's gyms and in their own homes girls are to take a turn at boxing. There all the science and skill may be kept, with the brutality left out. And it is the very best exercise in the world, bar none.

And not alone the girl who would save her plump arms and round neck has cause for rejoicing that boxing has come into fashion.

By that paradoxical rule of bringing back to normal from either extreme by the same means, the girl who has gained more pounds than she can squeeze comfortably into 1830 waisted frock may also rejoice and be exceedingly glad. Boxing will be to her a boon, for it knocks off pounds that are not needed quite as fast as it puts them on where they are.

As to the boxing outfit. Any pair of bloomers will do, or a very short skirt, though not so well. A regular gym blouse is best, but again there is an alternative in the eternal shirtwaist. The one point on which there can be no question is the shoes. Flat-soled and heelless they must be. Boxing in heels would be absurd. As well try to dance on stilts as box in heels.

Uses Six-Ounce Glove.

The boxing girl uses a six-ounce glove. It is heavy enough to keep her from hurting anybody, and not so heavy as to tire out her arms before she begins. They feel queer at first, like muffs tied on the hands, but after a round or two one gets used to the abnormal fist, and learns to manage it quite comfortably.

The rest is easy. All there is to learn is to put your left foot forward, just an easy step, and keep it there. Then you look your opponent square in the eye, and never turn away even for the hundredth of a second. After that there is the lead and guard, and by and by the feint and clinch and sidestep, and there you are, boxing like a belt winner.

"Women are too enthusiastic to make good boxers," says a New York boxing teacher who is giving private lessons to women who are taking up the fad. "They go at boxing about like a boy who tries to swim dog fashion. To box well one must think and keep cool, and that is something women have to learn.

"Then, too, they are timid. They are afraid of black eyes, and stiff jaws, and bruised bodies, and they forget that it would take a stiffer blow than any one of them could give to do any damage. Of course, they must go through all the motions of uppercuts and heart blows and solar-plexus punches. These things count for women boxers as well as for prize-fighters; but with a six-ounce glove there isn't likely to be so much as a tiny black-and-blue spot next day to tell the tale.

"Nervous women should not box. It's too strenuous. At least, they should not box until they have worked up to it with milder forms of exercise.

"The nervous woman is generally the thin woman, and as a general rule boxing is best for overweights, for the sluggish, phlegmatic women who take on pounds faster than they can let out the seams of their clothes.

"Not that every stout woman's nerves have become so heavily padded that nothing penetrates to them. And the best way to tell is to stand up before somebody with a pair of boxing gloves on and let him make a few quick movements with his hands. If he seems to have as many hands as a windmill has blades, don't box. Do something else until your nerves are better.

"But if there are only two hands, put up your own, look him square in the eye, and get to work."

This looking the other fellow square in the eye is one of the main points in boxing, and one of the hardest things to do. By looking her square in the eye you will become a mind reader, almost. You will know what she intends to do the instant she has decided to do it. She can't help giving just the wee-est, quickest glance in the direction she intends to make her lead. And if you are quick enough to catch that glance, you can tell how to guard yourself.

Don't be content merely to keep your face and body covered or to side-step a well-directed lead. That's only half of boxing. Keeping out of the way is all right enough, but the defensive alone won't do, though in dodging and side-stepping there is good exercise for the trunk muscles.

Whether she lands her blow or not, then is the time to get back at her. Her guard is down for the moment, and either face or body is partly uncovered, and this is the chance to get in a blow or two before she can get away.

It is when she has closed in with a strong lead that you must dodge it, and before she can recover clinch with both hands. Then, quickly freeing one hand, holding her close with the other, punch, punch, punch, unless—

All this time she is not standing still and taking punishment, though a good boxer will sometimes take a blow to give one. Even as you clinch she throws up an arm on one side and breaks it, and with the other begins to do a little business that will make you let go and get away.

Two-Minute Rounds.

Two minutes is a round for women, instead of the regulation three of the ring. And the first two minutes will be the longest two the beginner ever spent. Before time is called your blood will be racing through your veins, your breath will be chopping itself in inch lengths about half way down your throat, and you will feel as though you had spent an hour in the hot room of a Turkish bath. All this unless you are in good training from other exercise.

Instead of one minute allowed a prize fighter in his corner, the girl boxer gets three. Nor must it be taken in an open window, nor beside the water cooler, no matter how much the best places they may seem. Just rest.

The three minutes for rest will be a good deal shorter than the two of action at first. But it will give the breath and blood a chance to calm down a bit. Then up and at it again.

Same positions as before. Left foot forward, right arm guarding the body, left slightly forward to parry any lead of the other's right, and both hands ready to slip in whenever and wherever the other's guard is down.

Always eye to eye. The eye training is not the least of the good results of boxing, and it won't come amiss when you are dodging street cars and automobiles, or even when you are alone in an African jungle, for you would know the mind of a lion or tiger before he knows it himself.

In boxing for fun, do plenty of sparring. This dancing about each other, with every muscle in command, is worth hours of massage, for the movements are a natural massage which makes pounds drop off where they are not needed and on where they are. The dodging and sidestepping bring the trunk muscles into play, and the woman who would be slender and supple should take her boxing as regularly as she takes her bath.

At first two rounds are enough. For some one will do for a start. But after a while, when you get so you can go on breathing, when your mind goes on working, and you can eye your opponent steadily, you can box three rounds of two minutes each, with three minutes rest between. And this ten minutes will do you more good than a half hour at anything else.

Boxing has one big fault. You may not laugh when you box, not even smile. The moment you begin to smile your forces are scattered, and you can't box at all. But with practice you can learn to box with the features in absolute repose. Above all things, beware of a scowling, tightly drawn, savage boxing face. For what availeth a graceful body with a distorted face?

Then here's to the boxing girl! May her shadow ever grow less if she wills it, and never grow less if she wants it as it is.

WHY ARTEMUS WARD QUIT.

JAMES H. RYDER, who died in Cleveland a few days ago, was an intimate personal friend of Charles Farrar Browne, (Artemus Ward.) When the famous humorist whose writings and lectures convulsed the people of both continents, was an unknown reporter on The Cleveland Plain Dealer, on which paper he made his first reputation as a humorist, Ryder's home was his favorite haunt.

There was always a spare bed for Browne at Ryder's, and Sunday morning was always an occasion of pleasure for Browne and Ryder and kindred spirits who gathered to exchange gossip, but principally to hear Browne's droll comments on men and things.

It has been said that Ryder's wife was responsible for many of Browne's funny sayings. Mrs. Ryder was an accomplished woman and possessed an unlimited vein of humor. She always mingled in the Sunday morning symposium, and her comments and observations always made a hit with Browne.

George Hoyt, who was a colleague of Browne's on The Plain Dealer, and later for many years one of the owners and an editor, is still living in Cleveland. He tells many interesting and funny stories of Browne that have never appeared in print.

A man named Gray was proprietor of The Plain Dealer when Brown worked there. Browne was sent out one night to "write up" an account of some social function to be held at the residence of a prominent citizen who lived in Erie Street, then almost in the suburbs of the young city.

Being of a convivial nature, he stepped into a neighboring caravansary to play a game or two of billiards and absorb a few libations. There he met several old friends. As the time passed on, Browne was impressed with the importance of covering his assignment.

"I've got to go over to a swell function in Erie Street, boys," he said.

"Oh, don't be in a hurry," one of his companions persisted.

"Well, I want to get over there before the blamed thing is through," Browne continued.

"Let's have another drink," said another.

"And a couple of more games of billiards," volunteered still another of his companions.

Browne wanted to stay, and at the same time he recognized that his duty was to his paper. But he lingered. Drinks were ordered, and the billiard balls were agitated again. Time is fleet under such circumstances. Browne looked up at the clock. It was nearly midnight.

"Good heavens," he exclaimed. "I've got to go, and I'll have to be in a hurry. The function is over by this time."

"What if it is?" said one of his friends. "You know where it was held. You can describe the costumes of the ladies and write a general descriptive account of the thing."

It was about the only thing left for him to do. He went back to the Plain Dealer office, sat down at his desk, and ground out about three-quarters of a column. He told how beautiful the parlors looked embanked with flowers, described the exquisite costumes worn by the guests—in fact, gave a detailed descriptive account of the affair.

Then he drifted back to the caravansary and mingled with the boys until a late hour, when he went to his room. The next morning, while in bed, as was his custom, he glanced over The Leader, The Plain Dealer's only competitor, to see whether he had been "scooped." In those days Browne was the only man besides the city editor who garnered the local news. This morning he was particularly anxious. His account of the function was "played up" in a conspicuous place in The Plain Dealer.

He looked over the pages of The Leader and was convinced that he must have got a "beat" on his hated rival, as he couldn't find an account of the function. He scanned the columns more eagerly than ever, and was finally rewarded by finding a four-line paragraph at the bottom of one of the columns of the last page saying that the function had been postponed because of illness in the family.

Browne did not show up at The Plain Dealer office that day. He left town, and unceremoniously, too. He did not tell even his intimate friends where he was going. Several months passed away, and he was heard of as having been connected with a paper in Buffalo.

It was fully a year before Browne returned to Cleveland. The boys were all glad to see him and he was kept busy telling them of his exploits. On the afternoon of the day of his return to Cleveland he came face to face in Superior Street with Gray, his old employer.

"Browne," said Gray, and it was evident that he was perturbed, "what did you mean by leaving me so unceremoniously—without giving me any notice?"

"Don't ask me," said Browne.

"But I insist that you tell me. Haven't I always been your friend? Did you ever come to me for a favor that was not granted?"

"Don't press me for an answer," Browne continued, and his voice became husky as if he were about to give way to tears.

"I demand to know," said Gray. "I could expect such treatment from any one but you."

"Well, if you insist," Browne declared, "if you really insist, the reason I left The Plain Dealer was because I could not, for the sake of my reputation, afford to be identified with such an unreliable sheet."

THE KIND ARCHBISHOP.

ARCHBISHOP RYAN and Cardinal Gibbons were walking down the beach at Cape May one day, prepared for their morning dip. The Cardinal, clad in sexless flapping flannel garments, with a woman's bathing hat tied under his chin to keep out the glare, was leaning on the arm of his companion, who was helping him carefully over the hummocks of sand. Just then they were spied by two women who were strolling along the boardwalk—one a stout, rosy soul, hailing unmistakably from the neighborhood of Cork; the other, from her kindly but somewhat severe expression marked as a good North of Ireland Protestant.

"There's our Archbishop, God bless him!" said the South of Ireland woman.

"He's a fine man, entirely. Sure he's the good friend to the poor!"

"Yes," agreed the other, with the air of giving the devil his due, "and will ye see what care he takes of his little ould wife."

Echoes from Clubland

THE announcement of the engagement of another of the younger members of the Iselin family was made this past week. Arthur Iselin is engaged to Miss Eleanor Jay, the daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Jay. Arthur Iselin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Iselin and the grandson of Adrian Iselin, the banker. He is a member of the Knickerbocker, a well-known polo player, and at the same time a young man with a career. He is in the business house of his father. This is an old silk-importing house, which has its offices on Canal Street, and where the foundation for some of the Iselin fortune was made. The Iselins are descended directly from an old Swiss family. One of their ancestors exploded the William Tell myth. There is a statue to him in one of the Swiss cities. Many of the older Iselins were Protestant clergymen, and they have for centuries adopted the names of the Old Testament until of recent years. The father of young Arthur Iselin is William E. Iselin, who is the owner of the famous Emerald, which has won so many cups in different races. Mr. Iselin has been a sufferer from rheumatism for some years, and he frequently passes long seasons on his yacht, which is a schooner, very fast and luxuriously furnished. He takes with him Mrs. Iselin and a party of friends, and in Winter he generally resides at Aiken. Mrs. Iselin was Miss Alice Rogers Jones of an old New York family. She was one of the heiresses of the late Joshua Jones, and owns much real estate, including some of the houses of the famous white Jones row, on Fifth Avenue. The old mansion of Mrs. Mary Jones, at the corner of Fifty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue, was occupied by the late Mrs. Paran Stevens, and is now the home of Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. Arthur Iselin is a great favorite in society. He went abroad two Summers ago as the guest of the Duchess of Marlborough, and has a large circle of friends abroad and in New York. He has followed the faith of his mother, who is a member of the Episcopal Church. Adrian Iselin, Sr., is not a Roman Catholic, as many suppose. His wife, who was Miss O'Donnell of Baltimore, was a very devout member of that faith, and all her children, sons and daughters, were brought up in it. C. Oliver Iselin, Columbus O'Donnell Iselin, and William E. Iselin have married wives who were not Roman Catholics, and their children have been brought up in the faith of their respective mothers. C. Oliver Iselin has been twice married. Adrian Iselin, Jr., married Miss Caylus, who was a Roman Catholic, and her son, Ernest Iselin, who married Miss Whittier last Spring, was brought up in that faith, and his wife joined his church. Adrian Iselin, Sr., has given munificently to the Roman Catholic Church and its many charities. His three daughters are living. The eldest is the wife of Col. De Lancey Astor Kane. Miss Emily Iselin married "Jack" Beresford. Miss Georgia Iselin is unmarried. Col. De Lancey Astor Kane and Mr. Beresford have joined the Roman Catholic Church since their marriage.

The dinner which will be given this week by the Church Club to the Archbishop of Canterbury will be an event in the history of that unique organization. The club has rooms at Fifth Avenue and Forty-seventh Street and is a place of gathering for many prominent laymen as well as clergymen. It was organized in 1887. The rooms are not very commodious, so that the dinner, which is to be an extremely large affair, will be given at the new Hotel Astor. The Archbishop of Canterbury belongs himself to the Athenaeum Club, which, strange to say, is the only club of prominence in London of which not a member of the royal family is on the list.

William Waldorf Astor is not a clubman in the New York significance of the word. He was one of the founders of Tuxedo, and he retains his membership there. In other New York clubs where he is a member he is seldom seen. These comprise at present the Metropolitan and the Century. At one time he was a Vice President of the Union League, but he has since resigned. He was also in the Union, having joined in 1871. His name does not appear in the last books of that organization, and he no doubt withdrew from the club at the time of his departure for Europe. This is a bit odd, as the Union is the first club recognized abroad. In London he belongs to the Marlborough, which is the club of the King and the Prince of Wales, and the Carlton. He is one of the very few Americans who have a membership in exclusive London organizations.

Several Americans have been bidding on the famous hunting box of the late Charles Hanbury, which is called Belmont. It is near New Barnet, in the midst of the hunting country. Mr. Hanbury was killed in the hunting field a few years ago while following Lord Willoughby de Broke's hounds and was buried in the red coat, boots, and breeches which he was wearing at the time of his death. One of Mr. Hanbury's daughters is the present Lady Willoughby de Broke. In this country death in the hunting field has been rare. One of the most lamentable accidents of the kind at the Meadow Brook Hunt was the death of Charles Cottonet. Young Magoun was also killed some years later. Abroad several Americans have been killed.

Arthur Meyer, the editor of the Gaulois, whose engagement to Mlle. de Turenne has been announced, is over sixty, while the young lady is barely twenty-three. It is said to be a love match and not a marriage de convenance. The bride is a relative of the house of Fitzjames, one of the proudest in the French nobility. Gen. de la Charette's first wife was a daughter of the Duchess de Fitzjames and his second was Miss Antoinette Polk of Tennessee. He is a member of the Automobile Club. He is a self-made man, but occupies to-day an excellent position in Paris. His paper is the organ of the Orleanists and Royalist Parties.

Francis Burton Harrison, or "Frank" Harrison, as he is known among his friends, will be the first candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket for a long time who is a member of many of the fashionable clubs. Since a boy he has passed his Summers at Bar Harbor, where his mother, Mrs. Burton Harrison, who was Miss Constance Cary, has one of the show places, Sea Urchins. There he was one of the original members of the Pot and Kettle Club, and also of the Kebo Valley Club. In New York he belongs to the Knickerbocker, the Union, the Metropolitan, and the Yale Club. He is a member of the Tuxedo Club, and has been a cottager at the Park ever since his marriage. He is one of the three sons of the late Burton Harrison. His biography has already been given in THE TIMES. His wife was Mrs. Mary Crocker, the daughter of the late Frederick Crocker of San Francisco and a niece of Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, George Crocker, and William Crocker, and a granddaughter of Charles Crocker. Her mother died in the late eighties, and her father some few years ago. She was one of the greatest heiresses on the Pacific Coast. Prince Poniatowski, who has been here, recently married Miss Bertha Sperry, the sister of Mrs. William Crocker, who was Miss Ethel Sperry. Francis Burton Harrison was one of the most popular men in his class at Yale, and at one time it was thought that he would follow the literary career, inheriting from his mother, one of the most charming of society novelists, a generous share of her talent. He entered the practice of law, and has never, even before his marriage, cared a great deal for society, although he has always kept in the very fashionable set.

The action of the Union Club of Chicago in suing William Havemeyer, Jr., for unpaid bills is one which is not exactly according to the ethics of a first-class club. However, it was done in New York by several leading, although not ultra-fashionable, organizations. In London clubs the general rule is that everything is paid spot cash, and it is only the American who gives limited or unlimited credit. At the Union Club in this city the credit is limited to $25, and the House Committee is very strict about the payment of bills. A member who does not settle within the required time is quickly dropped. But the Union, the Knickerbocker, the Racquet, the Calumet, the Metropolitan, and other social and semi-social organizations where there are men of social position have never aired their losses in court, although there is unfortunately from time to time a lapsing member. Many of the bills, however, are run up by foreigners who are put up in New York clubs by confiding members. As often stated, their club status at home is not looked into, and it takes years of experience to convince an American that a Londoner or a Frenchman who does not belong to a good club in his own home must have something wrong with his social position. Mr. William F. Havemeyer of this city has two sons, neither of whom is William F. Havemeyer, Jr. There are two Havemeyer families, and there are many collateral branches. The fortunes of these families have had a foundation in sugar. Mrs. Clara Laimbeer's first husband was a William Havemeyer, a son of a former Mayor of this city.

O'Donnell Hillen, who was so attentive to Miss Alice Roosevelt at Bar Harbor, is from Baltimore. He has a large fortune. His mother was a Miss Frick of Baltimore, a relative of Mrs. Barton Jacobs, formerly Mrs. Robert Garrett. On his father's side he is related to the O'Donnells, the Carrolls, and the Lees of Maryland. He is about twenty-six years of age. His mother married on seconde noces, a few years ago, Elliot Schenck, a member of the well-known Brooklyn family and a cousin of Mrs. Glen Collins. He has taken up music as a profession and is a conductor of orchestras and of opera.

Baraque has been a favorite gambling game at Ostend this Summer, where it is said that on one day at the Kursaal, a Rothschild from Paris, a Vanderbilt from New York, and a Goldschmidt from Germany were in the rooms at the same time. The game is stupid. There is a board with nine holes in it, four red, four blue, and one black. A ball is rolled down an inclined plane, and the color is backed in which it will settle. The bank gives even money against red or blue and four to one against black.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

MILLINERY is ever a matter of interest to women, and a new chapeau is almost invariably regarded with greater interest than even a new frock, for the latter is more of a necessity.

***

The new hats have short backs or none at all. Some of them are cut out in horse-shoe shape at the back. One brown beaver shown by a smart milliner has the wide four-inch brim wired with brown silk-covered wires, and the wires are placed on top of the brim and on the outside of the crown. This brim is cut to the crown at both sides near the back, and also several times on the left side near the front, and these sections are turned up, like wide tabs against the crowns, with their upper edges flaring outward from it. At the base of the brim so turned up there is a rolled fold of dull, orange-colored velvet, and the ends are twisted into an odd, wide, flat bow across the back. Just above the left ear and fastened among the upturned tabs is a smooth brown feather pompon, from which floats to the rear a bird of paradise plume shading from brown to orange.

Another hat is made of white silk plush in military shape, about six inches across by fourteen long, trimmed with heavy military braidings in large white silk cords.

An odd and small toque is entirely in peacock-eye effects, the foundation being velvet and the crown covered with fine chenille embroideries making the centre of the peacock eyes. Folds of green and blue velvet, embroidered in smaller peacock eyes and laid in folds, form the soft brim and loosely plaited.

There will, as ever, be great variety in hats, and she who wishes to astonish with a flaring brim chapeau may be as easily suited as another is with a close-fitting toque.

The exaggerated crowns will be avoided by women of taste. Some of these are six inches high; the average is three inches for the usual large hat. The so-called small hats of the season are what in other years would have been dubbed large. The huge hats are for carriage wear, and those women of small incomes and no carriages who aspire to be gowned and hatted like the very fashionable class should bear this fact in mind. There is no reason why a women of moderate means, and to whom even a cab is a luxury, should not be as tastefully and fashionably frocked as her richer sisters, although in materials less expensive and less elaborately made, and she may have but one gown to fifty or more owned by her wealthy sister.

A small toque or a medium-sized hat of fine material trimmed with a single good ostrich tip or some simple but uncommon bit of trimming and simply made is always the best for women of limited means.

A pretty chapeau, a compromise between a tricorne and a toque, was worn at Delmonico's one evening. It was a coarse black straw, the rolling, slightly three-cornered brim seemingly merely an extension of the crown, which was of the same height. Small red and pink roses, the red above and the pink below, were set close together in a band an inch wide, and was woven in and out through the brim and against the crown where the brim rolled from it. Formerly such insets of flowers formed a continuous line around the rolled brim or the crown, but the Autumn chapeaus and this one in particular showed more graceful effects. In this hat the pointed front of the brim was devoid of flowers; the roses began to show perhaps two inches back from each side of the point and extended back along the sides for six inches or so, and then disappeared through slits in the brim to reappear against the crown, and then to reappear across the back of the brim.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor is wearing a chic purple crinoline hat with a small, flat, round crown and a wide brim that curves over a bit at the edges and then rises at the right front and describes a wide, flaring semi-circle to a point back of the left ear. Its sole trimming is a black bird of paradise plume that starts from the left of the crown and sweeps upward, outward, and backward against both brim and crown.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay wears hats to match her frocks, the hats being made to go with each costume. The other evening she had on at dinner at Sherry's a charmingly light but large round hat of pearl gray-white tulle shirred on invisible wires and quite transparent as to the wide brim. A little back from the brim's edge was a fold of pale gray velvet. From the front and left of the hat floated a plume of white bird of paradise feathers. The gown this frail but beautiful creation topped was pale gray covered partially with darker gray paillettes in chenille effects, and the material about the neck and sleeves was threaded with lines of silver. The bodice was cut in a square, but not at all low, and the elbow sleeves were slightly puffed below the shoulders and had scant flounces where they terminated.

Mrs. Forbes Morgan, Jr., dining at a fashionable restaurant, wore a large round hat on the bébé order. The white crinoline trown had a ruche of lavender tulle at its upper edge. The bri was overlapped by two white lace ruffles, and inch-wide mauve velvet ribbon was laid in long loops on the brim, the ends hanging off at the right back. Mrs. Morgan, who was Miss Edith Hall and is a sister of Mrs. Stanley Mortimer and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, is tall with golden-brown hair and eyes of the same color, and is slight. Her gown was a silk-finished gauze of rather coarse thread, much the texture and color of fine grass linen and yellowish in hue. It was embroidered in white. The sleeves outlined the arms to the elbows, where they were finished by tucked ruffles, and several wide tucks went around the arm above the flounces. The bodice had at the lower part two wide designs in white embroidery running around the body, and the stock and yoke were also embroidered. The skirt was gathered around the waist, but only slightly, save at the back, and trailed. It was finished at the bottom by several tucks. A girdle of liberty satin ribbon the color of the gauze was tied around her waist.

A Parisian model hat with a very wide, round brim, save at the back, where it is slashed and turned back, has a wide, flat crown two inches high, slanting inward from the top to its much-narrower base. It is covered with a dark shade of mauve velvet, and around the crown, made into a wide twist, is a ten-inch taffeta ribbon in ombré blendings of mauve and heliotrope spotted in palest lavender, and tied at the right side in a wide five-looped bow, the loops extending beyond the crown at both front and back and wired to stand upright on their edges. From under the bow ends at the front starts a wide ostrich plume, shading from heliotrope to mauve, the tip of which ends with the other loops of the ribbon bow at the back.

Mrs. W. M. V. Hoffman has a small round hat with a round crown an inch high of dead-white straw an inch wide braided in basket fashion. Half of the crossing strips show black lines. The hat is set back a trifle from her round face, and the brim, perhaps three inches wide, is bent slightly and irregularly upward, but most at the left side and front, where a small black quill is fastened across the under side of the brim.

Bridal frocks are again coming into public notice, but slowly, for as yet there have been hardly any weddings in town. Mrs. Walter S. Gurnee, Jr., who was Miss Rita Burgess, was married in a trained white chiffon robe having a yoke of Irish point, and her large bouquet was made of orchids and valley lilies. It was caught when she threw it by her sister and maid of honor, Miss Helen Burgess, who wore a charming 1830 frock, modified sufficiently to be pretty, of ciel-blue silk and white lace. Her large, flaring picture hat of pale-blue crinoline, lace, and tulle was trimmed with wide plumes of pale blue arranged under the left brim and over the brim and crown. The frock started in a yoke that extended over the shoulder curves, and was formed of bands of the silk perhaps three inches wide, alternated with bands of white lace an inch and a half broad. The stock was of lace with a narrow band of blue silk. At the edge of the yoke were five and six inch ruffles of the silk bordered with white lace nearly two inches wide. These ruffles were shirred scantily to a fine cord, and formed a deep double bertha ruffle. Below them the bodice was gathered in closely to the figure and had insertions of lace. The sleeves ended below the elbows in ruffles matching those on the bodice, and having lace insections above them in the sleeves. The skirt, of round length, was shirred at the waist line, and the slightly gored sections forming it were joined by lengthwise insertions of white lace. The bottom of the gown was finished by two silk ruffles eight or nine inches wide, each bordered with lace and having lace bands inserted above them. Her bouquet was pale yellow roses.

Mrs. Gurnee's going-away gown was a dark-blue foulard dotted with white, simply made, and somewhat shirred and puffed as to the bodice. A flat blue hat draped by a dark-blue chiffon veil topped it.

***

Among the gowns seen at the Gurnee-Burgess wedding was a charming gray satin crêpe de chine with a sunray skirt of round length and a bodice to match, but drawn close to the figure. It was trimmed with gray lace and topped with a gray hat, and was worn by Mrs. C. C. Worthington. Another handsome gown was worn by Mrs. Joseph Ulman. It was a soft satin of a rich pink shade, showing mauve tints in certain lights. It had a deep yoke and stock of heavy white lace over chiffon, embroidered in fine beads and tiny spangles of deeper pink than the satin. The sleeves were formed of very narrow, scant puff effects in lace and chiffon to the elbows, where narrow lace ruffles formed a finish. The lower portion of the bodice was formed of slashed bows for perhaps seven inches, or enough to allow the jacket part being pulled over the head, and is then laced through worked eyelets by the lavender tape. This little jacket is perfectly plain, and is really a very deep, round, flaring yoke, so deep that it permits of short under-arm seams and the insertions of kimono-shaped sleeves that flare out quite wide just below the elbows, where they terminate, and show the sagging puffs and narrow wristbands of the white underblouse. The rest of the gown is a loose princess that ends under the arms and an under the little overjacket. It has graduated tucks in the back, tapering at the top and also below the hips. As Mrs. Sorgensen is extremely slim only a few tucks are required, and the almost straight line over the hips requires no tucks; a slightly curved seam fits it. In front on each side there are scant tucks or gored scams, and the frock is laced from the top to below the waist line to match the coat. The skirt trails somewhat, but is scant, even about the bottom, and is finished in two flat, overlapping bias pieces of linen some six inches broad, the lower edges left loose in ruffle fashion. The hat worn with this matches it exactly in color and is a smooth straw, with a low, round crown and a round straight brim, narrow at the back and turning up at the front and left side, where a lavender quill is fastened across it.

***

A gown worn by a young girl recently shows the clever employment of shirred sections to conceal the defects of a too slender or undeveloped figure. The frock was pale-blue chiffon voile, a material so light yet stiff that it stands out from the taffeta lining. It was shirred evenly all eight inches long and was pointed ends were placed. The sleeves were full puffs from the shoulders to a couple of inches above the elbows, where two very narrow but flat puffs and a two-inch double ruche completed them. Full flounces of white net eight inches wide and with a band of lace across each lower section were set in at the outer and elbow termination of the sleeves.

One of the oddest ways of using heavy cloths is to puff and ruffle them. A hideous example of this sort of thing was seen in a fashionable restaurant. The cloth was a heavy gray checked tweed, and on the already cumbrous skirt were three five-inch double ruffles of the tweed, each headed by a double bonjlait two inches wide set on as a heading and stitched through the centre. These ruffles were so arranged that one was at the lower edge of the round skirt, one at the knees and another half way between. A short, squatty-looking jacket of the material topped it.

One of the most beautiful evening wraps for warm weather is worn by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is made of taffeta ribbon, white lace, and narrow satin ribbon. It is a coat with rounded-out neck, the back closing in a little to the figure and the fronts hanging loose, the lower edges coming to her knees. The taffeta ribbon used is about nine inches wide. The coat is formed of alternate stripes of broad taffeta ribbon boxplaited at the top and narrower rows of heavy lace, and is bordered all around with pale-blue satin ribbon. The nine-inch taffeta ribbon has a three-quarter-inch border of pale blue, and running through the middle of the broad, white cen-

Mrs. Bayesen (Miss Adelaide Barclay) is wearing one of the oddest frocks of the day. It is a lavender linen, and both the little bolero coat and the princess body part are laced with lavender tapes. Mrs. Boyesen is very slim and girlish in figure, and while the gown is clinging and follows the outlines of her figure it is not tight. The top and jacket portion is rounded out at the neck to show a white stock and a bit of a white underblouse. The centre front is a wide piece of the satin laid in scant folds on a tight lining; the folds running around the body, and the edge shirred at the back formed a double ruche seven or eight inches in length from the yoke to the bottom of the waist. The skirt, shirred around the waist line, was formed of three deep, scant, overlapping flounces, the lower and wider one forming a trailing section. Each flounce was edged with three half-inch tucks. The upper flounce was perhaps eighteen inches deep, the second deeper yet, and the third and lower was about twenty-four inches in depth. Her very large black hat formed a halo effect all around, but was lifted highest at the left side, and a large white rose was placed against her brown coiffure. Starting from the right side close to the back was an extremely long white ostrich plume that wound around the inside of the brim clear to the back on the left side and drooped against her hair. A fold formed of dull silver braid outlined the crown at the back.

Mrs. Algernon Boyesen (Miss Adelaide Barclay) is wearing one of the oddest frocks of the day. It is a lavender linen, and both the little bolero coat and the princess body part are laced with lavender tapes. Mrs. Boyesen is very slim and girlish in figure, and while the gown is clinging and follows the outlines of her figure it is not tight. The top and jacket portion is rounded out at the neck to show a white stock and a bit of a white underblouse. The centre front is the way around the waist, and hung in full folds to the floor, where it was finished by a six-inch hem with three two-inch tucks, two inches apart, above the hem. From the square yoke effect at the back the bodice was shirred scantily at the top and more at the bottom, where quarter-inch white silk cord fastened to the lower edge of the bodice formed the only girdle. Across the centre back was a narrow buckle arrangement of the silk cord. There seemed to be a plain under-bodice portion across the top front of voile, and from each shoulder seam to the under-arm seam was a curved, separate inch-wide band of voile shaped to perfectly fit the curve, and to this curved section the voile was laid in very narrow upward turning plaits set close together. These plaited sections opened out into full folds that met in the centre front of the bodice, where they were shirred into two very narrow ruchings closed invisibly by hooks. These shirred sections formed full-shirred but flat puffs from the shoulders and stock to below the bust line, and from under them very scantily shirred pieces fastened smoothly to a tight lining formed the rest of the bodice front, the ruching effect at the centre continuing all the way down. At the top of the bodice at the back straps an inch and a half wide striped and edged with minute white silk cord formed three crowning straps from arm seam to arm seam and to the beginning of the shirred portion at each side. Over the tops of the arm seams similar straps are band is a line of large pale-pink half-blown roses. The lace used is heavy and about four inches broad, the pattern composed of alternate grape leaves and small clusters of grapes over white chiffon. At the top of the coat the wide ribbon is plaited in box fashion but not fastened, and the joining edges outlining the plaits open to the outside. The sleeves are made the same way, and are a compromise between the kimono and coat shape, but formed of straight stripe and plaited ribbon to match the coat. The entire edge of the coat, including the rounded-out neck, is formed of a two-inch band of pale-blue satin ribbon doubled so that the edges conceal and hold the raw edges of the lace and ribbon. It is lined with finely plaited white chiffon, and is closed by streamers of the nine-inch taffeta ribbon as long as the coat.

***

Nothing uglier is seen in a sleeve finish for heavy goods than the narrow, gathered puffs above the cuffs. In chin goods the effect is different, but even then it is not to be admired. Puffs should be properly placed and wide enough to give breadth or full enough to sag in graceful looping effects if used at all. MARIE WELDON.

FOIBLES of the FAIR SEX

MISS JANE ADDAMS of Hull House, Chicago, celebrated for her philanthropic work, was born forty-four years ago at Cedarville, a small Illinois town. She is small and dark, with a rather sad face and wistful eyes, and stoops a wee bit. She wears her brown hair brushed straight back from her forehead, but fluffed up a trifle. She is fond of soft bluish tones in her frocks, and dislikes to wear a hat. She is a quiet woman and inclined to silence.

While many institutions similar to Hull House are started from religious motives, and religion is preached more or less to those benefiting through them, there is nothing of that sort at Hull House, and no references to a future life or "what one must do to be saved" are heard at the Chicago building, as Miss Addams considers the problems of the present life quite enough for her to cope with in her work. At Hull House there are engineering and other technical classes, and sketching, painting, wood carving, pottery, millinery, carpentry, head basket weaving, cooking of all sorts, and dancing, as well, are taught. There are Italian, French, German, and English evening classes, also classes in literature and its history, while the common school branches are also taught. In the musical department choral singing is included, and, of course, instruction on various instruments.

Hull House has a fine theatre and an excellent dramatic school, and the resulting work is so fine that the dramatic critics of Chicago make it a point to see all the plays produced. These are not the popular plays of the day, but the Greek tragedies, old English comedies, and poetic plays.

The kindergarten and the gymnasium are among the most complete of their kind.

One of the largest clubs, called the Jane Club in honor of Miss Addams, is formed of working girls, and has quarters at Hull House. Another and larger club is the Hull House Woman's Club, whose purpose is both social and literary. It numbers about 400 members.

One of Miss Addams's interesting methods for reaching the hearts and the ambitions of the older and the foreign-born visitors at Hull House is the Labor Museum, where all the implements for use in the domestic labors of the long ago are stored. These are put in active use by the old people, who delight to show that they, too, have ability to produce interesting and useful products.

Miss Addams is no orator, although she frequently addresses large audiences, but her voice has been so trained that it carries her words distinctly to the remotest corners of large halls. Her language is simple, her methods direct, and once she has stated the matters in her mind, she stops without further parley. At the time of the meeting of the women's clubs at Los Angeles Miss Addams was in favor of admitting the colored women's organizations. She has visited Tolstoy, who was interested in hearing of Hull House. Her nephew, James Weber Linn, the young novelist, dedicated his first book to Miss Addams.

Mme. Adelina Patti has a fad for keeping birthday and Christmas cards, little knick-knacks, and even toys. She has retained playthings and cards given her from the time she was seven years of age and sang "Comin' Thro' the Rye" in a concert hall in New York.

Lady Carnarvon, who before her marriage possessed the old-fashioned combination of Almina Wombwell, is called the "Petite Marquise," because of her small and piquante French type of beauty. She has some remarkable jewels, including a belt set with diamonds and three or four beautiful tiaras. The Carnarvons entertain more at Highclere Castle and Brethy Park than in London, and have two small children—Lord Porchester and Lady Evelyn Herbert.

Miss Eveyln Van Wart, [illegible] of the late Marshall O. [illegible] who for some years has paid flying visits only to America, left London in August for Ditton Park, near Slough. Miss Van Wart has become a great favorite in London society. Her Curzon Street house is beautifully furnished, and her servants are of the tall, portly, powdered order. She does not favor motors, but has superb horses and carriages. She is no longer a very young woman, but neither is she middle-aged. In appearance she is tall, dark and handsome with regular features and a dignified bearing. She has a fad for samplers, and posses among her fine collection of needlework in her London home a unique collection of samplers worked several generations ago. Miss Van Wart does not play bridge, and is so averse to card playing for stakes that games rarely or never take place at her houses.

Lady Colebrook, well known in New York, has as her London residence Stratford House in Stratford Place. Stratford House is famous, for in days gone by it was the town house of Sir John and Lady Constance Leslie. During her time as hostess there Lady Leslie kept up a salon at which neither dancing, cards, nor music was allowed as an attraction, and yet her evening parties were very successful and were attended by the members of the smartest set. Lady Leslie was famous as a conversationalist and as a wit, and was possessed of great beauty. The children of Lady Leslie are noted in different lines. One of them, Mrs. Murray Guthrie, has some of the finest emeralds in London. Another, Mrs. Bagot, won fame in her efforts in behalf of a hospital; still another, Mrs. Blackie Hope, is the mother of Lady Kerry, and a fourth is Mrs. Robert Crewe-Read. Many of the artistic ceilings of Stratford House were painted by Sir John, who paints and draws very skillfully, and who also painted numerous rooms at Glenbough House, his Irish country place at Monaghan.

The authoress M. E. Braddon, who wrote "Lady Audley's Secret," a popular novel with the past generation, and who has produced a long list of novels—sixty or, more—is Mrs. Maxwell, and in Summer she occupies Lichfield House, at Richmond, where she entertains her friends. This house is rather small, is Georgian in its architecture, and has a walled garden back of it. It is situated on the high road in what are called the Royal Suburbs, although its titled residents long since disappeared. Mrs. Maxwell takes a kindly interest in young writers and is fond of entertaining fellow-scribes. She has three sons, all of whom write. One, Edward Maxwell, is a lawyer, and his contributions to literature are confined to reviews and essays on legal and social subjects. Gerald Maxwell produces plays and stories, also dialogues, and William Maxwell has done much newspaper work. He wrote for The London World a series of articles that attracted the attention of an English publisher, who thereupon offered to bring out any books Mr. Maxwell should write; the latter accordingly penned "Fabulous Fancies," which was published a year ago, and another book, "The Ragged Messenger," has just made its appearance. Mrs. Maxwell's method of working, together with her remarkable dogs and her house, has often been described at length in the various journals.

At a recent fair held in Southampton the first hose-wheeled wagon ever used on Long Island was shown. It was filled with various old-time farm utensils, and in it were seated George L. Kobbé and Mrs. Wyllys Vickar. In the children's section of the fair the two Little Standley children dressed as white rabbits rode in the centre of a load of cabbages to a wagon drawn by ponies. The two little Cowhihar girls were dressed as fairies with tinselled wings, and drove two tiny ponies, also having gorgeous tinseled wings. They carried gilt wire rifles, and little Sallie Manice in the garb of a small Algerian peasant girl, driving another pony, captured the red ribbon.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Small Decrease in Loans — Large Decrease in Cash and Deposits.

The bank statement showed a decrease in loans for the first time since Aug. 27. The amount was only $2,454,000, and this was more than accounted for by the National Bank of Commerce, whose loans were reduced by $4,056,200.

The general tendency was toward further expansion of loans. Thirty-two banks had increases in this item, four of them exceeding $500,000, and twenty-one banks had decreases, three of them in excess of $500,000. Nearly all the mercantile banks expanded their loans.

The loss of $5,633,000 in cash was very close to the preliminary estimates of Friday, and the losses were well distributed.

The decrease in the surplus for the past five weeks amounts to $32,362,050, but it still is larger than at the corresponding period in prior years since 1897. The surplus of $26,251,025 represents, however, only a little more than 2 per cent. of deposits.

There were fifteen banks with less than 25 per cent. reserve, seven National and eight State. This compares with seventeen banks below the reserve required in the preceding week, sixteen in the week ending Sept. 26, 1903, twenty-seven in the corresponding week of 1902, and seventeen in the corresponding week of 1901. The total deficit of these fifteen banks was $1,373,070, which is equivalent to the reserve required upo ndeposits of $5,495,880 out of the total of $1,214,083,100.

Money on call loaned on the Stock Exchange last week at 1¾ to 2 per cent., averaging about 2 per cent. Time money was quiet, but the tone grew firmer. Rates were 3 per cent. for sixty days, 3½ to 3¾ per cent. for ninety days, 4 to 4¼ per cent. for two to six months. Commercial paper was quoted at 4½ to 5 per cent. for indorsements, 4½ to 5 per cent. for prime single names, and 5½ to 6 per cent. for good names. Demand sterling ranged from 4.8575@4.8585 to 4.8600@4.8670, closing firm at 4.8585@4.8590, a net decline for the week of seven-eighths of 1 cent.

In the corresponding week of 1903 money on call loaned at 2 to 3 per cent., averaging 2½ per cent. Time money was quoted at 5½ per cent. for sixty days and 6 per cent. for three to six months. Rates for commercial paper were 6 per cent. for indorsements, 6 to 6½ per cent. for prime single names, and 6½ to 7 per cent. for good names. Demand sterling ranged from 4.8620@4.8635 to 4.8650@4.8660, closing easy at the lower rate.

The items of last week's bank statement, the changes from the preceding week, and the statement of Sept. 26, 1903, follow:

FRENCH SARDINE CATCH HEAVY

Estimated at 2,300,000 Cases—Best Season in Five Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The sardine catch of this year is much the best France has enjoyed for five years, according to United States Consul Ridgely at Nantes. In 1902-1903 there was almost no catch at all, and as a consequence French exporters were unable to supply even a reasonably small percentage of the demand.

It is estimated that the catch this year, along the coast from Brest to Bordeaux, will amount to considerably more than 2,300,000 cases, which is above that of an average season. As a consequence, all the packers are working hard to lay in as much excess stock as they can, in view of the possible failure of next year's catch.

It is believed that the good catch this year is due to the early Spring and fine warm Summer. In 1902-1903 the Spring was late and the Summer was cold and wet. To this was attributed the failure of the sardines to appear off the French coast.

An idea of the importance of the sardine industry may be had when the exports to the United States alone are considered. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1902, which was a good year, the declared value of these exports from Bordeaux was $437,225; from Nantes and its agencies, $541,168. This year these exports will probably be exceeded.

VERMONT GRANITE.

Compressed Air Used in Quarrying and Shaping the Stone.

"Vermont has become noted for three things," said H. L. Brown of New York, a granite dealer and one of the best judges of the stone in this country. "The marble, the granite, and the Republicans it professes have astonished the world.

"It is peculiar that marble and granite should be found so close together and of such valuable qualities, when the two stones are so entirely different. I see that the authorities in the district have selected granite for the union station, and may do so for the Municipal Building and the Congressional office buildings. Such action would be a great boom for the granite industry. That is of comparatively recent origin in the State, but the State's output is already large, not only because of the superior quality of the granite, but also from the fact that it is far ahead of any other section of the country in the use of improved appliances for quarrying the stone.

"Forty years ago it was customary for the workers to drill holes along the line, marking the size of the block desired. Into these holes, drilled by hand, flat wedges of hard wood were driven and these afterward soaked with water. Eventually the wedges would swell so that the block would be split. Instead of using the skilled mechanics have resorted to the same material with which politicians make Republicans up there. They now use compressed air. The granite line is laminose sheets, and at the Woodbury quarries in a small mountain. Holes are drilled into sections by machinery, then by hand machines, all run by compressed air. The block is split by driving tiny steel wedges into the smaller holes. These sections vary from 20 to 300 feet in length, and are lifted out of the quarry by huge derricks. The sections are transported to the cutting plant, where lathes, planing machines, saws, and hand hammers, generally operated by compressed air, reduce the stone to the size and shape desired.

John Hix, the Pennsylvania State Capitol and the Washington Union Station will bring large sums of money into the State. The country there is prospering, and nothing can contribute to that more than the granite industry.—Washington Post.

Apple Crop Appalls Dealers.

The apple market throughout Wayne County has practically come to a standstill, for dealers are frightened at the size of the crop. Earlier in the season there was a fair demand for choice apples at 90 cents per barrel, the purchasers furnishing the barrel. Now there is practically no market. The outlook on green apples never suited the buyers as little at it does this Fall, and the more they investigate the situation the less they like it. It begins to look as though the farmer would have to do business without middlemen. The best price talked now is 75 cents per barrel, and scarcely a dealer can be found who will buy at any price. In the dried apple market things are a little more lively, although dealers are not active. Dealers are advising their old customers to go slowly, drying their own apples before they contract for other orchards. The reason for this is that the dealers look to see evaporating apples drop from 12½ cents a bushel to 8 or even 6 cents later in the season. The producers are going at it as hard as ever they can tilt, and hope to make a profit.—Rochester Union.

CONSERVATIVE OPTIMISM.

Summing up the facts and endeavoring to strike a fair balance between National assets and liabilities, it appears safe to say that the country is in a sound and prosperous condition; that the outlook is for increased railway and manufacturing business in 1905; that the changed conditions render a repetition of the panics of 1893 and 1896 highly inprobable, if not impossible, and that strong confidence in the future is abundantly justified.—J. KUROPATKIN LOSES SUPREME COMMAND

Czar Orders Reorganization of Forces in Manchuria.

FEELS PERIL OF EMPIRE

Another Great Army to Be Sent Out, Gen. Grippenberg at Its Head—Grand Duke May Be Chief Commander.

ST. PETERSBURG, Monday, Sept. 26.—The division and reorganization of the Manchurian Army, regarding which there have been rumors ever since the battle of Liao-Yang, was officially announced to-day in an imperial rescript appointing Gen. Grippenberg, commander of the Third Army Corps in the Province of Vilna, as commander of the Second Army now being mobilized for immediate dispatch to the Far East, leaving Gen. Kuropatkin in command of the First Army.

The Emperor is personally convinced that the political as well as the military prestige of the empire is at stake, and that every other consideration must give way before the exigencies of the war.

The resources of the empire in men and money must be drained, if necessary, in order to turn the scale and vindicate the power of Russia.

Czar's Tribute to the Japanese.

Emperor Nicholas has sent the following autograph letter to Gen. Grippenberg:

"The intense energy with which Japan is conducting the war and the stubbornness and high warlike qualities displayed by the Japanese impel me to considerably strengthen the forces at the front, in order to attain decisive success in the shortest possible time.

"Since by this increase the units will reach a figure making their continuance in one army impossible without prejudice to the proper direction, manoeuvring, and mobility of the troops, I have found it necessary to divide the active forces in Manchuria into two armies, leaving one in the hands of Gen. Kuropatkin. I appoint you to command the second.

"Your many years' service in warlike exploits and your wide experience in training troops assure me that you, following the general directions of the Commander in Chief, will successfully lead to the attainment of the objects of the war the army intrusted to you.

"God bless you for your great and glorious services to me and to Russia. Ever your affectionate, NICHOLAS."

The reorganization amounts to formal notice to the world, as the Emperor frankly explains in his rescript, that he intends vastly to increase the number of troops at the theatre of war in order to force the struggle to a successful issue in the shortest possible time. It is intended to silence definitely all talk of foreign intervention by the announcement that Russia means to fight out the issue with Japan on the field of battle. Probably 300,000 additional men will be placed in the field.

Commander in Chief Needed.

Eventually the creation of this second army will involve the selection of a Commander in Chief. Not only is there no intimation in the rescript that Gen. Kuropatkin will have command of both armies, but he is distinctly placed upon the same footing as Gen. Grippenberg.

It is the best opinion that Grand Duke Nicholas Michaelovitch, Inspector General of Cavalry, will be made Commander in Chief of the 600,000 or 700,000 men to be put in the field, occupying in the war with Japan the position held by his father in the war with Turkey.

Grand Duke Nicholas is not yet forty-five years old, with much of his father's dash, energy, and resolution.

The dispatch of the Grand Duke as commander of both armies would accord with the traditions of the Romanoff dynasty, a member of the imperial family having been in command in all of Russia's great wars.

Career of Gen. Grippenberg.

Gen. Grippenberg was born on Jan. 1, 1838. He is ten years older than Gen. Kuropatkin, but ranks three numbers lower in the list of Generals. He is a Lutheran in religion, is married, and has three children. He passed through no military school. He won his first commission while fighting in defense of Sevastopol, and then came into prominence in the campaigns in Turkestan in 1863 and 1868, where he won the St. George's Cross and was promoted to be a Captain.

He went into the Turkish war as a Colonel, and as a reward for his services was appointed aide-de-camp to the Emperor. He again won the St. George's Cross and was promoted to the rank of Major General. He became a Lieutenant General in 1890, a General of infantry in 1901, and recently was appointed General-aide-de-camp to the Emperor.

While Gen. Grippenberg's distinguished war record is sufficient to explain the appointment, it is believed that Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky's recommendation did a great deal in that direction. Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky and Gen. Grippenberg served several years in Vilna, the former as Governor General and the latter as Commander in Chief of the troops there. The appointment is none the less a surprise. Gen. Grippenberg will leave for the Far East in the middle of October.

Russia's recognition of the fact that the forces now in the Far East cannot successfully prosecute the war against the men Japan is able to put in the field, the knowledge that Japan is now mobilizing 100,000 more men for the front, and the decision to reorganize the Russian Army upon a gigantic scale in order to be able to assume the offensive quickly, mark a distinctly new phase of the war.

The physical difficulties to be reckoned with in getting out such large reinforcements over a single line of railway more

MAY WOMAN SMOKE IN AUTO?

Not in Fifth Avenue, Says Bicycle Policeman—Trouble Follows.

Two well-dressed young men, accompanied by two women, rode leisurely up Fifth Avenue in an automobile about 10 o'clock last night. One of the women was smoking a cigarette. At Thirtieth Street Bicycle Policeman Rensselaer spied the automobile and its occupants and requested the woman to cease smoking.

"You can't do that on Fifth Avenue while I'm patroling here," said the policeman.

The woman drew in a quantity of the smoke from the cigarette and then exhaled it in the policeman's face. While so doing she also flipped the ashes from the cigarette in his direction.

The automobile continued on its way and so did Rensselaer. The young men declared they were doing nothing wrong, and protested against being followed. There were high words, and at Thirty-fifth Street Rensselaer placed one of them under arrest, charging him with being drunk and disorderly.

The automobile was headed for the station house, and Rensselaer accompanied it on his wheel. When arraigned before Sergt. Place the man said he was "Frederick Smith," a broker, of 123 East Sixty-third Street.

"Yes, I was smoking a cigarette," said the woman whose action provoked the trouble, "and I don't see that I was doing any harm. I have done it in many other places, and I don't see why they should object to it in New York. I think the policeman overstepped his authority, and I shall make it my business to find out whether I am to be molested in this way. I can't see why he didn't arrest me, for I seemed to be the whole cause of the trouble."

Charles Kenerleder of 304 West Fifty-fourth Street appeared later and offered to bail "Smith" out. He said he knew the young man well and that he was a regular customer. When "Smith" was searched four five-dollar bills were taken from him, and when the money was handed back he remarked:

"I don't think it's all here."

Sergt. Place then declared that he would not accept bail, for "Smith" had made an accusation against the officer. He was locked up for about half an hour, and was then allowed to go.

The woman who had been smoking said she was Mrs. William P. Orr of the Waldorf. She said she was an actress. The other woman said she was Miss Elaine Von Selover, also an actress, living at the Hotel Belmont. Miss Von Selover said that the prisoner was Frederick Norton, an Englishman, and that the other man was Tracey Farnum, who lives at the Hotel Manhattan.

GEN. W. P. CHADWICK DROWNED

Managing Trustee of Phillips-Exeter Academy Lost Life While Bathing.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Word was received here to-day of the drowning of Gen. W. P. Chadwick of Exeter, N. H., Managing Trustee of Phillips-Exeter Academy, in the channel off Harbor Heights. The accident occurred late last night while Gen. Chadwick was bathing. The body has not been recovered.

Gen. Chadwick was the guest of Dr. Henry R. Barstow of Boston at the latter's Summer cottage at Harbor Heights, and the two men entered the water for a swim before retiring. They attempted to swim the channel, but finding the wind very strong, Dr. Barstow turned back. Gen. Chadwick continued and was not seen again.

Gen. Chadwick was for several years a member of the Governor's staff. He was forty years old and unmarried. Two brothers, one residing in Lowell and the other in New York City, survive.

OCTOGENARIAN WILL STUMP.

Ex-Senator William Pinkney Whyte to Tour West Virginia with Davis.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 25.—William Pinkney Whyte, who has been United States Senator, Governor, and Attorney General of Maryland and Mayor of Baltimore, and has been called the "Grand Old Man" of the Maryland Democracy, has announced his intention of taking the stump for his old friend, Henry G. Davis. Whyte is eighty and Davis eighty-one years old. In speaking of the campaign, Mr. Whyte said:

"The old men won't ask any one to give them a chance; they'll take it, and you will hear the two octogenarians—Davis and me—making the hills and valleys of the great old State of West Virginia resound with Democratic truths.

"Senator Davis and I have been intimate for nearly thirty years, and I have been one of his closest friends and legal advisers. He can command my services day or night."

The two old campaigners will begin their tour of the Mountain State Oct. 2, and Mr. Whyte says they will be accompanied by ex-Senator David B. Hill of New York.

DEATH SOLVES A MYSTERY.

"Preacher Jim" of Chicago Workmen a Clergyman Who Vanished Long Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—James Martin, an assistant engineer employed by Gillen & Gillen, contractors of South Chicago, was drowned last week, and it now appears that he was a clergyman of the Episcopal Church at Rutland, Vt., and that he appeared from that place ten years ago. Since then his friends had been unable to learn his whereabouts.

A chance description in the dispatches announcing his death brought his sister here, and she identified the body as that of her brother. It was said that his disappearance from Rutland was caused by unrequited love.

Although he never disclosed his former calling, his efforts to reform workmen with whom he came in contact caused him to be called "Preacher Jim" and "The Preacher of the Pier." He never told any of his companions anything of his past life, but he was highly esteemed by all and especially by his employers for the good effect his words and example had on the other employes.

EXECUTIVE CUSTOMS ORDERS BY ROOSEVELT

Importers' Personal Appeal Upset Procedure of Years.

DUTY LEVIES SUSPENDED

Departure in Administrative Methods Arouses Discussion Among Traders Who Suffer Through Uncertainty.

The clash of interests in the tobacco trade, whose appeals for and protests against a new ruling on the use of conspicuous distinguishing stamps on boxes of imported cigars are now before the Treasury Department at Washington, has caused renewed discussion among customs officials and importers concerning what they now familiarly refer to as "The Executive Order." It is that which they say has frequently reversed the customary order of procedure in the Government's collection of duties.

The complaint of the importers who have been doing business without taking into their calculations the effect of an unexpected "Executive Order" is that the Administration's new policy has left them no ground for judging what the customs duties may be.

Formerly it was comparatively easy for an importer to tell by a study of the tariff law what the duty on his goods was going to be, or if a disagreement arose between the importer and the officers charged with the assessment and the collection of the duty the importer could figure with certainty that the duty would be what the appraising officer placed it at, until the matter could be adjudicated by the Board of United States General Appraisers or the courts. He could, therefore, arrive at a basis on which business could be done with confidence that there would be no abrupt change in values, such as has been urged by protectionists as likely to result from any proposed change in the tariff law.

Under the present administration of the customs service no one has been sure for a day what the values of his goods landed in the United States were likely to be. This policy began about a year ago. In most instances it has been carried out by Mr. Roosevelt's personal order, and persons familiar with conditions in Washington declare that for the last six months at least Leslie M. Shaw has been Secretary of the Treasury in name only as far as customs matters were concerned, and that Mr. Roosevelt has been running this branch of the public service himself, it is said that Assistant Secretary Armstrong, who is in charge of the Customs Division, reports directly to the President.

The Method Once Uniform.

When imported goods arrive here they are classified by the Collector; that is, the duty is levied on them under the appropriate clause of the tariff law. If the importer feels that a wrong classification has been made, he has the right of appeal to the Board of United States General Appraisers, which is virtually a court. If he is dissatisfied with the board's decision, he can carry his case to the United States Circuit Court, then to the Court of Appeals, and finally to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Once the Board of General Appraisers has decided that a rate of duty is the legal and proper one, that decision, under the law and the practice until a year ago, becomes the legal rate, until upset by the courts, and must be imposed on all similar merchandise imported. If the Government wins in the appeal to the courts, the legal rate has been collected, and there is no more trouble. If the importer wins, he is entitled to a refund of all the excess duty paid over the rate which the court has decided to be the legal one.

If, however, the Government does not collect the high rate of duty in the first instance, and the court decides that the high rate is the proper one, the Government cannot, after one year, collect the difference in the duties, and it must go through a difficult and often useless litigation to collect those which have accrued during the current year. It has been an axiom in customs practice, therefore, to collect the high rate of duty because the importer had an adequate remedy at law.

President Roosevelt, however, has inaugurated the practice of suspending the operations of decisions of the Board of General Appraisers pending an appeal to the courts, or in many cases of suspending the operation of a decision and ordering a new case made before the board on the same issue. In the meantime the goods have continued to come in at the low rates, and the Government has been unprotected in case of a decision adverse to the importers.

Where only a single importer was concerned or where the trade affected was small and uninfluential, no such relief has been granted. The importer has been compelled to pay the higher rate of duty and take his refund when the case was decided in his favor. In fact, on account of the Treasury deficit, it is said, there has been a disposition to delay the payment of refunds wherever possible by appeals to the higher courts.

The first notable instance of the President's personal activity in the customs administration was the "baby ribbon" case which arose about a year ago. A Collector at one of the ports conceived the idea that the provision for trimmings which carries a duty of 60 per cent. was more applicable to "baby" ribbons than that for non-enumerated manufactures of silk at 50 per cent., under which they had been coming in since the passage of the Dingley law. The importer appealed to the Board of General Appraisers, and General Appraiser De Vries wrote a decision holding that the Collector was right, and that not only "baby" ribbons, but ribbons of all descriptions were dutiable as trimmings.

This aroused the entire ribbon trade. The importers declared that it would prohibit entirely the importation of certain grades of ribbons. They sent delegations to see Secretary Shaw, but without result. They enlisted the aid of the Merchants' Association of New York, but at first it was unable to do anything.

Then the President was appealed to, and it was represented to him that the entire

HOPE FOR LADY CURZON.

Remedies Rushed from London to Walmer Castle by Special Train.

LONDON, Sept. 26—(Monday.)—According to The Daily Mail, oxygen was administered to Lady Curzon yesterday and anti-streptococcic serum was injected hypodermically as an antidote to blood poisoning. These remedies were hurriedly fetched from London by a special train to Walmer Castle, ordinary traffic being meanwhile held up to allow the special to pass.

Sir Thomas Barlow, in reply to late inquiries, said:

"Peritonitis has been considerably localized, and the patient's condition is as comfortable as could be expected."

A dispatch from Walmer Castle at 10 o'clock last night said:

"The improvement in Lady Curzon's condition continues, and the doctors state that if her strength can be maintained during the next two days there will be hopes of her recovery."

A London specialist has informed The Daily Mail that Sir Thomas Barlow and Dr. William Watson Cheyne form an ideal combination for fighting such a terrible disease as septic peritonitis. Serum injected is defensive. A product is formed in the blood if the patient lives long enough for its manufacture, and the injection relieves the weakened system and combats the poison at an earlier stage.

Lord Curzon's brother, F. Curzon, has arrived at Walmer Castle.

King Edward, who is a frequent inquirer and receives constant information, made another sympathetic inquiry regarding the condition of Lady Curzon late last night.

But Negro Weakens and Saves Them—He Blames Estranged Son.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 25.—But for the weakening of the criminal at the last moment, the wife and four children of Judge James H. Mulligan, late Consul to Samoa, might have been poisoned here Saturday afternoon. Just as Dennis Mulligan, a son, had picked up the dish of salmon, and was about to place some of it in his plate, Louis Mitchell, a negro house boy, rushed out and snatched it from his hand, saying he did not think it was good. Young Mulligan followed the boy, who dashed out of the door and attempted to destroy the contents of the dish, and took it from him.

When questioned as to his actions, Mitchell said he feared there was poison in the salmon; that he had seen a strange man in the pantry. The salmon was sent to the State College experimental station, and large quantities of arsenic were found in it.

The boy was arrested, and told the officers and Judge Mulligan that Jim Mulligan, the Judge's favorite son, had induced him to poison the family, but that when he saw them about to partake of the poisoned dish he decided not to carry out the plot. Judge Mulligan refused to believe the negro, and ordered him locked up. To-day he refused to change his first confession, although sweated for two hours this morning and as long this afternoon.

Jim Mulligan lives in Chicago, where he is employed on a trade journal. He was here last week to see his sister married and left Friday for Chicago. He and his two sisters have become estranged from their father and stepmother and four half sisters and brothers. He did not visit his father's home, Maxwell Place, remaining with one of his sisters. Jim Mulligan was the favorite son of his father. When in the State Senate Judge Mulligan had him elected page, and when he went to Samoa he took him as his private secretary.

Judge Mulligan is a humorist, and wrote the poem "In Kenutcky." He has every confidence in his son, and says he will again to-morrow attempt to have the negro change his story.

H. P. WHITNEY FOR CONGRESS.

May Be Nominated by Tammany for Francis Burton Harrison's Seat.

It was said last night that Harry Payne Whitney may be nominated by Tammany Hall to succeed Francis Burton Harrison as member of Congress from the Thirteenth District when the Congress District Conventions are held on Monday night of next week. This nomination has been under consideration by the Tammany leaders since Mr. Harrison was named for Lieutenant Governor. The district, which is known as the "Diamond Back" district, extends along Fifth Avenue, from Fourteenth to Eighty-sixth Street, and under normal circumstances is almost certainly Republican. Mr. Harrison, however, overturned political conditions two years ago and was elected by a safe plurality on the Democratic ticket.

"Big Tim" Sullivan will accept a renomination in his district. William Sulzer and Henry M. Goldfogle will be renominated also, but Goldfogle will have Charles S. Adler as his Republican opponent. It has not yet been determined by Tammany whether or not William R. Hearst will be renominated in the Eleventh District. Ira Edgar Rider will not be renominated in the Fourteenth District, where Charles A. Towne will become the party candidate. W. Bourke Cockran will be renominated in the Twelfth. Jacob Ruppert, Jr., is understood not to want a renomination in his district, and ex-Councilman Stewart N. Brice is spoken of as successor to Jacob Ruppert, Jr. Francis E. Shober may be turned down for a renomination in his district.

REOPEN HARVESTER WORKS.

Work to be Resumed To-day by International Company—A Hitch Possible.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Work in the plants of the Deering, McCormick, and Plano divisions of the International Harvester Company, the closing of which on Sept. 10 resulted in 9,000 employes being left idle, will be resumed to-morrow morning. Coupled with this announcement comes the statement that the company has declined to renew last year's agreement with the organized trades employed.

Meetings of the various unions affected will be held this week to decide on what action shall be taken. The agreement with the company was obtained only after a hard fight, and affected approximately 3,000 men. It was the only trades union agreement existing between the company and its employes in the three plants named, and members of the unions must now return to work on the same basis as the non-union employes.

The agreement which the company refused to renew provided for nine hours work each day for ten hours' pay. Hereafter the number of working hours each week will be increased from fifty-four to fifty-seven and a half.

VESUVIUS'S ERUPTION INCREASES IN VIOLENCE

The Greatest Since 1872—Flowing Lava Works Havoc.

RAILWAY STATION DESTROYED

Vegetation Disappears—1,844 Explosions in Eleven Hours—Earth Shocks at Naples.

NAPLES, Sept. 25.—The eruption of Mount Vesuvius continues to increase in force, and is now more violent than at any time since 1872.

Red hot stones are hurled to a height of 1,600 feet, falling down the flanks of the mountain with a deafening sound. The director of the observatory says that between 5 o'clock this morning and 6 o'clock this afternoon his instruments registered 1,844 violent explosions, and that one stone thrown out weighed about two tons.

Lava flowing from the crater has melted the metal of the Funicular Railway, destroyed the upper station, and burned the wooden huts in which guides lived. All vegetation within a radius of one mile of the crater has disappeared. Several earthquake shocks were felt to-day.

Part of the population of the surrounding villages have left their homes and are camped in the open air.

The curiosity of tourists anxious to approach the volcano is such that a large number of carbineer guards have been detailed to prevent them crossing prescribed limits.

VAIN RACE TO SAVE LIFE.

Mrs. Newman Erb, Hurt in Wreck, Dies Before Doctors Arrive.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Newman Erb, wife of the Vice President of the Père Marquette Railroad, was fatally hurt, and Mr. Erb and four others were injured, in a wreck on the New York Central Railroad a short distance east of Lyons early this morning. Three sleepers on the Western Express, a fast train bound from New York to Chicago, left the rails because of a split rail, and threw the passengers to the floor of the coaches. Just as the train came to a standstill a fast freight, east bound, ran into the derailed cars.

Mrs. Erb was brought here with both legs cut off, and died at the hospital. Mr. Erb sent to New York for physicians, who made the trip in a special train to Rochester in six hours and twenty-five minutes, but were too late to save his wife. Mr. Erb resides at 25 East Seventy-fourth Street, New York City. He left at 9:30 o'clock this evening for New York with his wife's body.

The following are the other injured passengers who were brought here:

Sarah Lowen, 424 Woodward Street, Detroit, Mich., bruised and cut; Richard Heany, San Francisco, a brewer, bruised and cut; Samuel Stern, Kansas City, bruised and cut about the head and shoulders, and Mrs. Stern, bruised and suffering from shock.

A party of three—Dr. Ray Felt, Mrs. Felt, and Mrs. Paul P. Smith—all of Eureka, Col., who were on the sleeper and were shaken up and bruised, stopped here and are receiving attention at a hotel.

DEATH LIST NOW SIXTY-TWO.

Six More Victims of Southern Railroad Wreck—A Family Wiped Out.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 25.—The death list as a result of the wreck on the Southern Road near Newmarket Saturday has grown to-night to sixty-two. To-day there were six deaths, the last one occurring to-night, when M. P. Gant, a prominent North Carolinian, residing at Shelby, N. C., passed away.

Physicians at the hospital say to-night that of the long list of injured which they have in their care it is probable that not more than four will die. The complete list of injured as given out by the railroad officials shows a total of 162.

The cause of the terrible loss of life in the heavy east-bound train was explained to-day. It seems that the second coach plowed its way into a bank in such a manner that the other cars were jammed into it, and, pushed on by the weight of the heavy Pullmans, were crushed like eggshells.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 25.—A telegram was received at Gaffney, this State, yesterday, announcing the death of Lee Hill, at Jellico, Tenn., who was killed in an explosion in a powder mill.

The corpse was expected at Gaffney last night, but instead a telegram was received stating that the corpse, accompanied by Scott Hill, his father, Lee Hill's wife and four children, and single sister, was on the train which was wrecked yesterday, near Knoxville, and that all the parties were killed.

The corpses of all seven of the family are expected to reach Gaffney by to-morrow morning.

STRICKEN IN THE PULPIT.

The Rev. Dr. Jacob Steinhaeuser Dies at Allentown, Penn.

ALLENTOWN, Penn., Sept. 25.—The Rev. Dr. Jacob Steinhaeuser, pastor of St. Michael's Lutheran Church and Professor of Hebrew in Muhlenberg College, suffered his third stroke of paralysis while preaching a sermon in German to-day, and died a few hours later. He was 54 years of age.

Dr. Steinhaeuser's former home was in Rochester, N. Y. He was ordained in 1875, and filled pulpits in Boonville, Cohocton, Rondout, and Kingston, N. Y. In 1889 Dr. Steinhaeuser was elected President of Wayne College at Rochester, remaining there until called to Allentown in 1894. He leaves a wife and six children, one being his assistant in St. Michael's Church.

Detained Woman's Friends Protest.

AKRON, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Considerable surprise and indignation is expressed among the Hungarian residents of this city at the action of the immigration authorities in New York, in ordering Mrs. Appolonia Rolicsky deported. The woman is the wife of George Rolicsky, a well-known Hungarian. They have lived in Akron about nine years. Hungarian friends here have taken the matter up, and will get a bond to present to the immigration authorities to allow the woman to come on to Akron and prosecute her suit against the steamship agent, with whom a dispute over her money matters has arisen.

BIG GIFT TO A UNIVERSITY.

$500,000 Said to Have Been Presented to Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—A large sum of money, reported to be $500,000, has been presented to the University of Pennsylvania. Announcement of the figure and the name of the donor will be made next Friday at the opening exercises. Provost Harrison and other members of the Faculty, beyond admitting to-day a large gift had been made, would say nothing.

The money has, it is believed, been presented as the nucleus of an endowment fund to meet current expenses. Without an assured income Provost Harrison is usually hard pressed each year, and it has been his custom to spend the greater part of each Summer in the city for the purpose of raising funds.

MANIA FOR HUGGING WOMEN.

Thomas Cantwell, Punished for One Offense, Arrested Again at Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 25.—Thomas Cantwell, a machinist from New York, was arrested to-day within three hours of his release from the workhouse on the charge of attempting to hug a woman on her way home from church. He had just finished serving three months for a similar offense.

Cantwell claims to be unable to resist the desire to hug a woman the moment he sees one. His sanity will be inquired into.

MAJOR ADAMS FATALLY HURT.

Struck by San Francisco Cable Car and His Skull Fractured.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—Major Thomas R. Adams, Assistant Inspector General of Artillery of the Coast Division, was run down and fatally injured last night by a cable car on the Powell Street line. The car struck Adams and hurled him to the sidewalk, fracturing his skull. The surgeons said he could live only a few hours.

Major Adams is a West Point man, Class of '07, and popular.

WILL PROTECT MISS GOULD.

Salem Y. M. C. A. Committee Promises Protection from Charity Grafters.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—So great is the number of charity grafters who are awaiting the arrival of Helen Gould to-morrow that the Reception Committee of the Y. M. C. A., to prevent her from being subjected to great annoyance, has been compelled to keep the public in ignorance of the place where she will be entertained.

It was announced the other day that she would be the guest of a certain woman in Salem during her stay. The following day the house was besieged by people who represented some form of charity, who implored the lady of the house to introduce them to Miss Gould and enable them to enlist her sympathy and cash.

Miss Gould will be closely guarded by the Y. M. C. A. Reception Committee, and the grafters will be kept away from her unless their plans fail. Miss Gould will attend the dedication of the new Y. M. C. A. parlors, which are said to be among the finest in the country.

REAR-END TROLLEY SMASH.

Dislodged Pole Left First Car Dark—Several Slightly Hurt.

In a rear-end collision between two trolley cars of the Canarsie division of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company shortly after 8 o'clock last evening at Rockaway Avenue and Avenue L, half a dozen persons were slightly injured and a panic was caused among the passengers. The only injured person who required medical attention was John Doerr of 436 Central Avenue, Brooklyn, whose back and legs were hurt.

Darkness was responsible for the collision. Both trolley cars were returning to Brooklyn from Canarsie. The first car came to a sudden stop at Avenue L because the trolley pole had left the overhead wire. This left the car in darkness. The motorman of the other car thought he had a clear track, and found out his mistake only when it was too late to avoid a crash.

SENATOR HOAR SINKING.

Sleeps Most of the Time and Refuses Medicine or Nourishment.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 25.—The family of Senator George F. Hoar, who has been dangerously ill for several weeks, at his home in this city, to-night issued a bulletin, showing that the Senator is gradually succumbing to the effects of his long illness. Only immediate members of his family are admitted to the sick chamber. The bulletin reads:

"Senator Hoar has been weaker since Friday, passing most of the time in sleep and refusing to take his medicine or nourishment. If this condition does not improve, it will have a serious effect upon his little remaining strength. If the condition continues he may last several days."

POWER HOUSE WRECKED.

Water Supply Cut Off by Explosion at Alexandria Bay.

Special to The New York Times.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The power house at Alexandria Bay which supplied water for the village, and was built last Spring at a cost of $12,000, was completely wrecked by an explosion of gasoline to-day. Engineer Clarence Williax narrowly escaped death, being in the oilroom at the time.

The explosion was caused by a spark from the dynamo communicating with the gasoline, a large amount of which could not escape from the building on account of the discharge pipe which runs into the river being covered by water, the river being higher at this time of year than usual. Bricks and pieces of wood were blown 500 feet in all directions, but no one was seriously injured.

NEWSPAPER OWNER SHOT.

S. J. Ayers, Wounded by Footpads in Marshalltown, Iowa, May Die.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa, Sept. 25.—Samuel J. Ayers, proprietor of The Marshalltown Herald, early this morning was shot by hold-up men and probably fatally injured. The footpads escaped.

Mr. Ayers is over sixty years of age.

PARKER'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE ISSUED

If Elected, He Will Revoke Roosevelt's Pension Order.

REMEDIES FOR THE TRUSTS

He Answers the President's Arguments—Warning Against Imperialism—Plea for Tariff Reform.

ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Judge Alton B. Parker's letter of acceptance of the Democratic nomination for the Presidency was given out here to-day. The letter is addressed "to the Hon. Champ Clark and others, committee, &c.," and is as follows:

Gentlemen: In my response to your committee, at the formal notification proceedings, I referred to some matters not mentioned in this letter. I desire that these be considered as incorporated herein, and regret that lack of space prevents specific reference to them all. I wish here, however, again to refer to my views there expressed as to the gold standard, to declare again my unqualified belief in said standard, and to express my appreciation of the action of the convention in reply to my communication upon that subject.

Grave public questions are pressing for decision. The Democratic Party appeals to the people with confidence that its position on these questions will be accepted and indorsed at the polls. While the issues involved are numerous, some stand forth pre-eminent in the public mind. Among these are tariff reform, imperialism, economical administration, and honesty in the public service. I shall briefly consider these and some others within the necessarily prescribed limits of this letter.

Menacing Power of Executive.

Imperialism.—While I presented my views at the notification proceedings concerning this vital issue, the overshadowing importance of this question impels me to refer to it again. The issue is oftentimes referred to as Constitutionalism vs. Imperialism.

If we would retain our liberties and Constitutional rights unimpaired, we cannot permit or tolerate, at any time or for any purpose, the arrogation of unconstitutional powers by the Executive branch of our Government. We should be ever mindful of the words of Webster, "Liberty is only to be preserved by maintaining Constitutional restraints and just divisions of political powers."

Already the National Government has become centralized beyond any point contemplated or imagined by the framers of the Constitution. How tremendously all this has added to the power of the President! It has developed from year to year until it almost equals that of many monarchs.

While the growth of our country and the magnitude of inter-State interests may seem to furnish a plausible reason for this centralization of power, yet these same facts afford the most potent reason why the Executive should not be permitted to encroach upon the other departments of the Government, and assume legislative, or other powers, not expressly conferred by the Constitution.

The magnitude of the country and its diversity of interests and population would enable a determined, ambitious, and able Executive, unmindful of Constitutional limitations and fired with the lust of power, to go far in the usurpation of authority and the aggrandisement of personal power before the situation could be fully appreciated or the people be aroused.

The issue of imperialism which has been thrust upon the country involves a decision whether the law of the land or the rule of individual caprice shall govern. The principle of imperialism may give rise to brilliant, startling, dashing results, but the principle of democracy holds in check the brilliant Executive and subjects him to the sober, conservative control of the people.

The people of the United States stand at the parting of the ways. Shall we follow the footsteps of our fathers along the paths of peace, prosperity, and contentment, guided by the ever-living spirit of the Constitution which they framed for us, or shall we go along other and untried paths, hitherto shunned by all, following blindly new ideals, which, though appealing with brilliancy to the imagination and ambition, may prove a will o' the wisp, leading us into difficulties from which it may be impossible to extricate ourselves without lasting injury to our National character and institutions?

Tariff Reform at Once.

The Tariff and Trusts.—Tariff reform is one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic faith, and the necessity for it was never greater than at the present time. It should be undertaken at once in the interest of all our people.

The Dingley tariff is excessive in many of its rates, and, as to them at least, unjustly and oppressively burdens the people. It secures to domestic manufacturers, singly or in combination, the privilege of exacting excessive prices at home and prices far above the level of sales made regularly by them abroad with profit, thus giving a bounty to foreigners at the expense of our own people.

Its unjust taxation burdens the people generally, forcing them to pay excessive prices for food, fuel, clothing, and other necessaries of life. It levies duties on many articles not normally imported in any considerable amount, which are made extensively at home, for which the most extreme protectionist would hardly justify protective taxes, and which in large amounts are exported. Such duties have been and will continue to be a direct incentive to the formation of huge industrial combinations, which, secure from foreign competition, are enabled to stifle domestic competition and practically to monopolize the home market.

It contains many duties imposed for the express purpose only, as was openly avowed, of furnishing a basis for reduction by means of reciprocal trade treaties, which the Republican Administration, impliedly at least, promised to negotiate. Having on this promise secured the increased duties, the Republican Party leaders, spurred on by protected interests, defeated the treaties negotiated by the Executive, and now these same interests cling to the benefit of these duties which the people never intended they should have, and to which they have no moral right.

Even now the argument most frequently urged in behalf of the Dingley tariff and against tariff reform generally is the necessity of caring for our infant industries. Many of these industries after a hundred years of lusty growth are looming up as industrial giants. In their case, at least, the Dingley tariff invites combination and monopoly, and gives justification to the expression that the tariff is the mother of trusts.

For the above-mentioned reasons, among many others, the people demand reform of these abuses, and such reform demands and should receive immediate attention.

Hope of Aid from the Senate.

The two leading parties have always differed as to the principle of customs taxation. Our party has always advanced the theory that the object is the raising of revenue for support of the Government whatever other results may incidentally flow therefrom. The Republican Party, on the other hand, contends that customs duties should be levied primarily for protection, so-called, with revenue as the subordinate purpose, thus using the power of taxation to build up the business and property of the few at the expense of the many.

This difference of principle still subsists, but our party appreciates that the long-continued policy of the country, as manifested in its statutes, makes it necessary that tariff reform should be prudently and sagaciously undertaken, on scientific principles, to the end that there should not be an immediate revolution in existing conditions.

In the words of our platform we demand "a revision and a gradual reduction of the tariff by the friends of the masses, and for the common weal, and not by the friends of its abuses, its extortions, and discriminations."

In my response to your committee I pointed out the method under which a gradual reduction of customs duties may be accomplished without disturbing business conditions. I desire again to express the opinion that this method should be followed.

It is true that the Republicans, who do not admit in their platform that the Dingley tariff needs the slightest alteration, are likely to retain a majority of the Federal Senate throughout the next Presidential term, and could, therefore, if they chose, block every attempt at legislative relief. But it should be remembered that the Republican Party includes many revisionists, and I believe it will shrink from defying the popular will expressed unmistakably and peremptorily at the ballot box.

The people demand reform of existing conditions. Since the last Democratic Administration the cost of living has grievously increased. Those having fixed incomes have suffered keenly; those living on wages, if there has been any increase, know that such increase has not kept pace with the advance in the cost of living, including rent and the necessaries of life. Many to-day are out of work, unable to secure any wages at all. To alleviate these conditions, in so far as is in our power, should be our earnest endeavor.

Common Law and the Trusts.

Trust Remedies.—I pointed out in my earlier response the remedy, which, in my judgment, can effectually be applied against monopolies, and the assurance was then given that if existing laws, including both statute and common law, proved inadequate, contrary to my expectations, I favor such further legislation, within constitutional limitations, as will best promote and safeguard the interests of all the people.

Whether there is any common law which can be applied and enforced by the Federal courts cannot be determined by the President, or by a candidate for the Presidency.

The determination of this question was left by the people, in framing the Constitution, to the judiciary, and not to the Executive. The Supreme Court of the United States has recently considered this question, and, in the case of the Western Union Telegraph Company vs. The Call Publishing Company, to be found in the one hundred and eighty-first volume of the United States Supreme Court reports, at Page 92, it decided that common law principles could be applied by United States courts in cases involving inter-State commerce, in the absence of United States Statutes specifically covering the case. Such is the law of the land.

Greater Markets Now Needed.

Reciprocity.—In my address to the Notification Committee I said that tariff reform "is demanded by the best interests of both manufacturer and consumer." With equal truth it can be said that the benefits of reciprocal trade treaties would inure to both. That the consumer would be helped is unquestionable. That the manufacturer would receive great benefit by extending his markets abroad hardly needs demonstration. His productive capacity has outgrown the home market. The very term "home market" has changed in its significance. Once, from the manufacturers' point of view, it meant expansion; to-day the marvelous growth of our manufacturing industries has far exceeded the consumptive capacity of our domestic markets, and the term "home market" implies contraction, rather than expansion. If we would run our mills to their full capacity, thus giving steady employment to our workmen and securing to them and to the manufacturer the profits accruing from increased production, other markets must be found. Furthermore, when our manufacturers are dependent on raw materials in whole or part imported, it is vital to the extension of their markets abroad that they secure their materials on the most favorable terms.

Our martyred President, William McKinley, appreciated this situation. He pointed out in his last address to the people that we must make sensible trade arrangements if "we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus." He said: "A system which provides a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued and healthful growth of our export trade. * * * The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good-will and friendly relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not."

This argument was made in the interest of our manufacturers, whose products, he urged, "have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention." He had come to realize that the so-called "stand-pat" policy must give way; that there must be a reduction of duties to enable our manufacturers to cultivate foreign markets.

McKinley's Last Words Commended.

The last words of this President, who had won the affection of his countrymen, ought to be studied by every man who has any doubt of the necessity of a reduction in tariff rates in the interest of the manufacturer. They present with clearness a situation and a proposed remedy that prompted the provision in our platform which declares that "We favor liberal trade arrangements with Canada and with peoples of other countries where they can be entered into with benefit to American agriculture, manufactures, mining, or commerce."

The persistent refusal of the Republican majority in the Federal Senate to ratify the reciprocity treaties negotiated in pursuance of the policy advocated alike by Mr. Blaine and Mr. McKinley, and expressly sanctioned in the fourth section of the Dingley act, is a discouraging exhibition of bad faith. As already mentioned by me, the exorbitant duty imposed on many an imported article by the Dingley tariff was avowedly intended by its author not to be permanent, but to serve temporarily as a maximum, from which the Federal Government was empowered to offer a reduction, in return for an equivalent concession on the part of a foreign country. President McKinley undertook honestly to carry out the purpose of this section of the act. A number of reciprocity agreements were negotiated within the prescribed limit of two years which, if ratified, would have had the twofold result of cheapening many imported products for American consumers, and of opening and enlarging foreign markets to American producers. Not one of those agreements has met with the approval of the Republican masters of the Senate. Indeed, they did not even permit their consideration. In view of the attitude of the present Executive, no new agreement under the general treaty power need be expected from him. Nor does the Republican platform contain a favorable reference to one of the suspended treaties. This section of the Dingley act stands forth as a monument of legislative cozenage and political bad faith.

No Tyranny Over Other Peoples.

Independence for the Filipinos.—In some quarters it has been assumed that in the discussion of the Philippine question in my response the phrase "self-government" was intended to mean something less than independence. It was not intended that it should be understood to mean, nor do I think as used it does mean, less than independence. However, to eliminate all possibility for conjecture, I now state that I am in hearty accord with that plank in our platform that favors doing for the Filipinos what we have already done for the Cubans; and I favor making the promise to them now that we shall take such action as soon as they are reasonably prepared for it. If independence such as the Cubans enjoy cannot be prudently granted to the Filipinos at this time, the promise that it shall come the moment they are capable of receiving it will tend to stimulate rather than hinder their development. And this should be done not only in justice to the Filipinos, but to preserve our own rights; for a free people cannot withhold freedom from another people and themselves remain free. The toleration of tyranny over others will soon breed contempt for freedom and self-government and weaken our power of resistance to insidious usurpation of our constitutional rights.

American Citizenship.—The pledge of the platform to secure to our citizens, without distinction of race or creed, whether native born or naturalized, at home and abroad, the equal protection of the laws and the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges open to them under the covenants of our treaties, as their just due, should be made good to them. In the accomplishment of that result it is essential that a passport issued by the Government of the United States to an American citizen shall be accepted the world over as proof of citizenship.

To Enforce Civil Service Law.

Civil Service.—The statute relating to civil service is the outcome of the efforts of thoughtful, unselfish, and public-spirited citizens. Operation under it has frequently been of such a character as to offend against the spirit of the statute, but the results achieved, even under a partial enforcement of the law, have been such as to both deserve and command the utterance of the Democratic Party that it stands committed to the principle of civil service reform and demands its just and impartial enforcement.

Reclamation of Arid Lands.—A vast expanse of country in the West, portions of which are to be found in each of the sixteen States and Territories, mentioned in the law, is directly affected by the National statute—the outcome of intelligent and persistent efforts of leading citizens, providing for the reclamation of the arid lands for the benefit of home seekers. During the years of the development of the measure which finally received the vote of every member of the upper house of Congress it encountered opposition, based to a large extent upon the view that the aim of its promoters was to secure the benefits of irrigation to private owners at Government expense. The aim of the statute is, however, to enable this vast territory to reclaim its arid lands without calling upon the taxpayers of the country at large to pay for it. Whether the purposes of the bill will be fully accomplished must depend in large measure upon the ability, sobriety of judgment, independence, and honesty of the officers of the Interior Department having this great work in charge.

In 1902 the main canals and ditches in the region affected aggregated more than 59,000 miles, and the work of reclamation is but in its infancy. The total cost of construction of the necessary head gates, dams, main canals, ditches, reservoirs, and pumping stations was at that time a little over $93,000,000, which of itself suggests the hundreds of millions that may eventually be invested in the territory covered by the statute. The magnitude of the conception and the enormous expense its carrying out involves make us realize the overwhelming importance of a broad, capable, and honest administration of the work authorized by the statute, if effect is to be given to that part of the plan that relieves the country at large from ultimate liability.

National Good Faith Violated.

Panama Canal.—An Isthmian canal has long been the hope of our statesmen and the avowed aim of the two great parties, as their platforms in the past show. The Panama route having been selected, the building of the canal should be pressed to completion with all reasonable expedition.

The methods by which the Executive acquired the Panama Canal route and rights are a source of regret to many. To them the statement that thefeby a great public work was assured to the profit of our people is not a sufficient answer to the charge of violation of National good faith. They appreciate that the principles and healthy convictions which in their working out have made us free and great, stand firmly against the argument or suggestion that we shall be blind to the nature of the means employed to promote our welfare. They hold that adherence to principle, whether it works for our good or ill, will have a more beneficent influence on our future destiny than all our material upbuilding, and that we should ever remember that the idea of doing a wrong to a smaller, weaker nation than we, or even all mankind, may have a resultant good is repugnant to the principles upon which our Government was founded.

Under the laws of the United States the duty is imposed on the Executive to proceed with due diligence in the work of constructing the canal. That duty should be promptly performed.

American Shipping.—Our commerce in American bottoms amounts to but 9 per cent. of our total exports and imports. For forty years prior to 1861, when the Republican Party came into power, our merchant marine carried an average of 90 per cent. of our foreign commerce. By 1877 it had dwindled to 27 per cent. Now we carry but a contemptibly small fraction of our exports and imports.

American shipping in the foreign trade was greater by almost 100,000 tons in 1810—nearly a hundred years ago—than it was last year. In the face of the continuous decline in the record of American shipping during the last forty-three years, the promise of the Republican Party to restore it is without encouragement. The record of the Democratic Party gives assurance that the task can be more wisely intrusted to it.

It is an arduous task to undo the effect of forty years of decadence, and requires the study and investigation of those best fitted by experience to find the remedy—which surely does not lie in the granting of subsidies, wrung from the pockets of all the taxpayers.

Investigation of Government Departments.—Recent disclosures, coupled with the rapid augmentation of Government expenditures, show a need of an investigation of every department of the Government. The Democrats in Congress demanded it. The Republican majority refused the demand. The people can determine by their vote in November whether they wish an honest and thorough investigation. A Democratic Congress and Executive will assure it.

Army and Navy.—We are justly proud of the officers and men of our army and navy. Both, however, have suffered from the persistent injection of personal and political influence. Promotions and appointments have been frequently based on favoritism instead of merit. Trials and court-martials have been set aside under circumstances indicating political interference. These and other abuses should be corrected.

Usurpation in Pension Order.

Pensions for Our Soldiers and Sailors.—The National Democracy favors liberal pensions to the surviving soldiers and sailors and their dependents, on the ground that they deserve liberal treatment. It pledges by its platform adequate legislation to that end. But it denies the right of the Executive to usurp the power of Congress to legislate on that subject. Such usurpation was attempted by Pension Order No. 78, and effect has been given to it by a Congress that dared not resent the usurpation. It is said that "this order was made in the performance of a duty imposed upon the President by act of Congress," but the provision making the imposition is not pointed out. The act to which the order refers, which is the one relating to pensions to civil war veterans, does not authorise pensions on the ground of age. It does grant pensions to those "suffering from any mental or physical disability or disabilities, of a permanent character, not the result of their own vicious habits, which so incapacitates them from the performance of manual labor as to render them unable to earn a support." This specified requirement of incapacity is in effect set aside by Order No. 78 as to all persons over sixty-two.

The war closed nearly forty years ago. In the meantime many of our soldiers and sailors long survived the age of sixty-two, and passed away without receiving any pension. Skillful pension attorneys hunting through the statute failed to find there a provision giving a pension to all who had reached sixty-two. Many prominent veterans urged the justice of Congressional action giving a service pension to all veterans. Bills to that effect were introduced in Congress. And not until March of this year did any one ever claim to have made the discovery that the President had power to treat the statute as if it read that when a claimant had passed the age of sixty-two years he is necessarily disabled one-half in ability to perform manual labor, and therefore entitled to a pension.

The President of the Civil Service Commission, Gen. John C. Black, formerly Commissioner of Pensions and Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, indicated his view of the order when in a recent address he thanked the President for what he had done, and advised his hearers to use their influence that a law might be passed to the same effect. Full confidence after all seems not to have been placed on the defense of justification, for it is pleaded in mitigation that a former Democratic President did something looking in that direction. Even if that were so—which is not admitted—our present duty would be none the less plain and imperative. Our people must never tolerate the citation of one act of usurpation of power as an excuse for another. The first may possibly be due to mistake; the second, being based on the first, cannot be. In explanation, however, it should be said that the order relied on simply provided that the age of seventy-five years should be regarded as evidence of inability to perform manual labor. Few men are able to perform manual labor at that age, but nearly all men are at sixty-two. The first order is based on a fact that experience teaches, the other is based on the assertion of that which is not true as a general rule.

Roosevelt's Challenge Accepted.

The old inquiry, "What are you going to do about it?" is now stated in a new form.

It is said by the Administration, in reply to the public criticism of this order, that "it is easy to test our opponents' sincerity in this matter. The order in question is revocable at the pleasure of the Executive. If our opponents come into power they can revoke this order and announce that they will treat the veterans of sixty-two and seventy as presumably in full bodily vigor and not entitled to pension. Will they authoritatively state that they intend to do this? If so, we accept the issue."

This suggests the suspicion, at least, that the order was made to create an issue—that it was supposed to present a strong strategic position in the battle of the ballots. On the assumption that the order as stated by the Administration is revocable at the pleasure of the Executive, it having been an attempted though perhaps unwitting encroachment upon the legislative power, and therefore unwarranted by the Constitution, I accept the challenge and declare that if elected I will revoke that order. But I go further and say that that being done, I will contribute my effort toward the enactment of a law to be passed by both houses of Congress and approved by the Executive that will give an age pension without reference to disability to the surviving heroes of the civil war; and under the provisions of which a pension may be accepted with dignity because of the consciousness that it comes as a just due from the people through their chosen representatives, and not as largess distributed by the Chief Executive.

Under Bonds to Keep the Peace.

Foreign Relations.—The foreign relations of the Government have in late years assumed special importance. Prior to the acquisition of the Philippines we were practically invulnerable against attacks by foreign States. Those tropical possessions, however, 7,000 miles from our shores, have changed all this, and have in effect put us under bonds to keep the peace. The new conditions call for a management of foreign affairs the more circumspect in that the recent American invasion of foreign markets in all parts of the world has excited the serious apprehension of all the great industrial peoples. It is essential, therefore, more than ever, to adhere strictly to the traditional policy of the country as formulated by its first President and never, in my judgment, wisely departed from—to invite friendly relations with all nations while avoiding entangling alliances with any. Such a policy means the cultivation of peace instead of the glorification of war, and the minding of our own business in lieu of spectacular intermeddling with the affairs of other nations. It means strict observance of the principles of international law and condemns the doctrine that a great State, by reason of its strength, may rightfully appropriate the sovereignty or territory of a small State on account of its weakness. It means for other American States that we claim no rights, and will assume no functions save those of a friend and of an ally and defender as against European aggressions. It means that we repudiate the role of the American continental policeman; that we refuse to act as debt collector for foreign States or their citizens; that we respect the independent sovereignty of each American State and its right to preserve order and otherwise regulate its own internal affairs in its own way; and that any intervention in its affairs by us is limited to the single office of enabling its people to work out their own political and national destiny for themselves free from the coercion of any European State.

No Excuse for Extravagance.

Reform in Governmental Expenditures.—Twenty-eight years have passed since the Democratic Party of the State of New York, in convention assembled, recommended to the National Democracy the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden as its candidate for the Presidency, and declared it to be "their settled conviction that a return to the Constitutional principles, frugal expenses, and administrative purity of the founders of the Republic is the first and most imperious duty of the times—the commanding issue now before the people of the Union." This strong expression was called forth by the National expenditures for the year 1875, which amounted to $274,000,000—a situation which, in the opinion of a majority of our people, justified an imperative demand for reform in the administration of public affairs. As the expenditures of the last fiscal year amounted to the enormous total of $582,000,000, it is evident that a thorough investigation of the public service and the immediate abandonment of useless and extravagant expenditures are more necessary now than they were then. This astounding increase is out of all proportion to the increase of our population, and finds no excuse from whatever aspect we view the situation. The National Democratic platform declares that "large reductions can easily be made in the annual expenditures of the Government without impairing the efficiency of any branch of the public service."

Can there be any doubt of the accuracy of this statement? Between the expenditures of the year 1886, amounting to $242,000,000, and those of the last fiscal year—the seventh after Grover Cleveland ceased to be President—aggregating $582,000,000, there is a difference so great as to excite alarm in the breasts of all thoughtful men. Even excluding the sum of $50,000,000 paid for the Panama Canal rights and to the State of Panama, the expenditures of the last fiscal year exceeded the sum of $532,000,000, being more than double the expenditures of the Government for all purposes during the first year of Mr. Cleveland's Administration.

The expenses of the first four years succeeding the last Democratic Administration amounted to the enormous average of $511,000,000 per year. This large expenditure was due to a considerable extent to the cost of the Spanish-American war, which occurred during that period, but the termination of that war brought no relief to the Treasury, for the average annual expenses of the Government during the three subsequent years ended June 30, 1904, were about $519,000,000, which is the largest sum hitherto reached, during a like period, since the close of the civil war.

Concealment of Evil Conditions.

This draft upon the revenues of the country has had the effect which might have been anticipated, and now we have presented the reverse of the situation, which led to the famous observation, "It is a condition and not a theory which confronts us," for, although the present incumbent found at the close of the first fiscal year during which he assumed control of the Administration a surplus of receipts over expenditures of more than $91,000,000, there was an excess of expenditures over receipts at the close of the last fiscal year of $41,600,000, and the official monthly reports made by the Treasury Department show that the expenditures are continuously and rapidly increasing, while the receipts are diminishing.

In this connection it is interesting to note the recent administrative orders forbidding Government officers from making public any statement of estimates on which future appropriations are to be based.

If a man of ordinary intelligence and prudence should find in the operating expenses of his business such a tremendous percentage of increase, would he not promptly set on foot an inquiry for the cause of the waste and take immediate measures to stop it, especially when trusted employes have been found dishonest and convicted, and a widespread impression exists that a thorough investigation may discover other cases of malfeasance? When the Chief Executive reported to Congress that, "through frauds, forgeries, and perjuries, and by shameless briberies the laws relating to the proper conduct of the public service in general and to the due administration of the Post Office Department have been notoriously violated, * * *" there was a general popular demand for a rigid, sweeping investigation by Congress, in addition to that undertaken by the Executive himself. Such an investigation the Republican majority in Congress would not permit, although the minority insisted that the interests of good government demanded it. And the minority was right. The liberality, patriotism, and National pride of the people should not be made an excuse for waste of the public funds. Official extravagance is official crime.

There is not a sentence in the Republican platform recommending a reduction in the expenditures of the Government; not a line suggesting that the increase in the cost of the War Department from $34,000,000 in 1886 to $115,000,000 in 1904 should be inquired into, and not a paragraph calling for a thorough investigation of those departments of the Government in which dishonesty has been recently disclosed.

The people, however, can by their votes, if they desire it, order such an investigation and inaugurate a policy of economy and retrenchment. It is safe to say that this will not be accomplished by indorsing at the polls the Republican majority of the House of Representatives which refused the investigation and made the appropriations, nor by continuing in power the Administration which made the disbursements.

Reform in expenditures must be had in the civil, military, and naval establishments in order that the National expenditures may be brought to a basis of peace and the Government maintained without recourse to the taxes of war.

Conclusion.—I have put aside a congenial work, to which I had expected to devote my life, in order to assume, as best I can, the responsibilities your convention put upon me.

I solicit the cordial co-operation and generous assistance of every man who believes that a change of measures and of men at this time would be wise, and urge harmony of endeavor as well as vigorous action on the part of all so minded.

The issues are joined and the people must render the verdict.

Shall economy of administration be demanded or shall extravagance be encouraged?

Shall the wrongdoer be brought to bay by the people, or must justice wait upon political oligarchy?

Shall our Government stand for equal opportunity or for special privilege?

Shall it remain a Government of law or become one of individual caprice?

Shall we cling to the rule of the people, or shall we embrace beneficent despotism?

With calmness and confidence we await the people's verdict.

If called to the office of President, I shall consider myself the chief magistrate of all the people and not of any faction, and shall ever be mindful of the fact that on many questions of National policy there are honest differences of opinion. I believe in the patriotism, good sense, and absolute sincerity of all the people. I shall strive to remember that he may serve his party best who serves his country best.

If it be the wish of the people that I undertake the duties of the Presidency, I pledge myself, with God's help, to devote all my powers and energy to the duties of this exalted office. Very truly yours,

ALTON B. PARKER.

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON PARKER'S LETTER

Acceptance of Pension Order Challenge Taken Variously.

VIEWS ON HIS TARIFF POLICY

The World Praises the Judge's Stand—The Sun Says the Letter Shows a Little More Spunk.

Editorial comments in the several morning newspapers upon Judge Parker's letter follow:

The World.

Both President Roosevelt and Judge Parker, in the intervals between their speeches and their letters of acceptance, have gained in clearness, confidence, and force. The difference is that this increased vigor has carried Mr. Roosevelt into reckless swashbuckling, while it has taken Mr. Parker just far enough to free him from the charge of undue caution and leave him standing firmly on a sane, courageous, and honest public policy.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter consisted largely of "dares" to the Democrats. "We have done this—do you dare to undo it?" "We intend to do that—do you dare to do anything different?" The President evidently believed that the mere statement of the issues in this form would scare all the fight out of his opponents. But Mr. Parker has quietly accepted the challenges. * * *

Judge Parker emphasizes his adherence to the gold standard by declaring his "unqualified belief" in it, not merely his acceptance of it as an accomplished fact. Then dismissing the money question as not in dispute, he finds four pre-eminent issues—tariff reform, imperialism, economical administration, and honesty in the public service. The tariff policy urged by the Democratic candidate is not one of revolution, but of gradual reduction. * * *

President Roosevelt insists that the tariff has no connection with trusts. Mr. Parker meets him squarely with the assertion that excessive duties have been and will continue to be a direct incentive to the formation of huge industrial combinations which, secure from foreign competition, are enabled to stifle domestic competition and practically to monopolize the home market."

The Herald.

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance, though calm and dignified, will stir the country even more profoundly than did his famous telegram announcing his "firm and irrevocable adherence to the gold standard." Its calmness is the calmness of power—like that of the oceanic tide. It forcibly recalls Mr. Cleveland's letter of acceptance published on Sept. 27, 1892. * * *

As a great, but conservative tribune of the people which he author of this statesmanlike letter now shows himself to be, his strong protests against the oppression of monopoly and the subversion of Constitutional Government and law by audacious and arrogant exponents of imperialism will have immensely greater weight with all independent voters because the statements evidently emanate from a man who soberly weighs his words in the nice balance of judicial accuracy and are supported by irrefutable facts. He backs up his exposition of the enormous burden of Republican taxation by adducing from the Government's own statistics the frightful increase of taxation during the last four years of Republican rule. And his arraignment of the Roosevelt Administration for its revel of extravagance and its mammoth expenditures must arouse the most torpid voter to the perils of imperialism, militarism, and an ever-growing centralism that drain heavily upon the earnings of labor and of all classes of the people.

The central feature of Judge Parker's masterly letter is his bold exposure of the tremendous burdens imposed on the American people by the Republican system of high protectionism and the flagrant extravagance of the trust-fostering Dingley tariff, against which even many leading Republicans have protested, and which because of its disastrous effects on our manufactures and export trade led President McKinley in his last address to declare: "The period of exclusiveness is past."

The Sun.

Truth bids us say that there is a little more spunk in Judge Parker's letter of acceptance than in any preceding document of his composition since the campaign began. A little more, but not much. It is easier to read than its predecessors, because Mr. Parker himself or some useful friend has edited away the overabundance of qualifying phrases and moulding words with which the excellent gentleman has been accustomed in his political manifestos to ballast both sides so impartially that when you get to the end of one of his complicated sentences you do not know whether tweedledum or tweedledee has the plurality.

We bespeak the candid consideration of all critics as for what is the most creditable production, as literature, that has yet emanated from Esopus. And we call particular attention to its most interesting feature, namely, the reference to the much-debated order making the age of sixty-two presumptive evidence of disability to earn a living by manual labor. We have found no reason to revise our opinion that this Executive order was very much like a bid for the soldier vote; that its character as an encashment on the province of legislation was not altered by the circumstance that Congress afterward appropriated money to give it effect, and that the order must stand as one of the acts of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration most open to just criticism.

The American.

Judge Parker is neither so voluminous nor vehement as his adversary. He calmly discusses the great issues before the public as he sees them, and in summing up puts the following questions to the American voter for an answer at the polls in November:

Shall economy of administration be demanded or shall extravagance be encouraged?

Shall the wrongdoer be brought to bay by the people, or must justice wait upon political oligarchy?

Shall our Government stand for equal opportunity or for special privilege?

Shall it remain a Government of law or become one of individual caprice?

Shall we cling to the rule of the people, or shall we embrace beneficent despotism?

In these questions the Judge defines what he believes to be the grave issues before the American people. Each is based on conditions that now exist or are threatened. The people, after all, render the verdict, and these questions should command their serious attention.

This letter needs no extended comment. It is not involved or obscure. It is a plea of an earnest man.

All American citizens, whether Republicans or Democrats, should read it.

The issue is now made up, and every Democrat should go to work to make victory certain.

The Tribune.

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance goes far toward demolishing his reputation as a great jurist capable of sustained logical thought. It is an assemblage of disjointed paragraphs, seemingly produced without any plan of arrangement, without any clearcut conception of the problems discussed, and without any definite policy to expound. Judge Parker traverses the familiar ground of his earlier speech and of the Democratic editorials without saying anything new or noteworthy, except in one particular. * * *

On the tariff Judge Parker says nothing that has not already in effect in his speech of acceptance, which the tariff revisers among his own supporters found so timid and uninspiring. He is for lower duties, but not too low duties, and, anyhow, a Republican Senate would see that no harm was done. If, however, the Democrats could win all the States they claim, they might have a free field to "run amuck" in spite of Judge Parker's soothing assurances. * * *

On pensions Judge Parker does become specific, and astounding. After insinuating that the President's pension order, with its trifling addition to the pension expenditures, was a bid for votes, and promising, if elected, to revoke it, Judge Parker proceeds to make a higher bid, saying: "That being done, I will contribute my effort toward the enactment of a law, to be passed by both houses of Congress and approved by the Executive, that will give an age pension, without reference to disability, to the surviving heroes of the civil war." Thus he promises what is practically a service pension, a thing which has been violently opposed by the leaders and editors of his own party for years, and, indeed, advocated by few persons outside of radical Grand Army circles. It is not too much to say that this bid for votes is positively indecent. What will be said of it by Judge Parker's friends who have long been complaining of excessive pension expenditures? And what, in the face of it, are we to think of Judge Parker's pose of austere superiority to the petty arts of the politician and of deep personal concern for economy and retrenchment?

The Staats-Zeitung.

The Democratic candidate for the Presidency has in his letter of acceptance laid down the programme which is to guide him should he be elected. The document requires no elucidation, contains no superfluous word. It will require neither effort nor any great degree of time to read it, and hence it would be folly to give excerpts from it here. * * *

Out of every line there seems to be revealed a man who knows precisely what he wants and who has the courage to speak out. A man who before and beyond everything thinks logically, and who neither becomes intoxicated with his own words nor endeavors to influence others with sophistry. A man who is not afraid to throw down the gauntlet at the feet of his opponent. How skillfully and fearlessly he accepts the challenge of Roosevelt and states the position of the Democratic Party regarding the pension question! Judge Parker not only parries the blow of his adversary, but he also tears away the mask behind which he would conceal his real motives.

It is necessary to hold the letters of acceptance of both candidates side by side in order to recognize the contrast keenly. On the one hand, one will recognize evidence of great self-reliance and self-appreciation, and on the other a modest and conscientious appreciation of what are the views and wishes of the people.

PARKER COMING HERE AGAIN.

May Arrive Earlier This Week Than He Did Last.

Special to The New York Times.

ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Judge Parker spent to-day as usual attending church and receiving personal friends. To-night he is going through a huge pile of newspapers.

William F. Sheehan and ex-Senator John J. Linson came here for a short time in the afternoon. Neither the Judge nor his two conferrees had anything to say about what passed between them.

It was announced to-night that the candidate would probably go to New York again, starting perhaps earlier than last week.

This telegram was received to-day:

Hon. Alton B. Parker:

The Democracy of Colorado, in convention assembled, sends to you greetings, with the assurances of its loyal support in November and of the five Electoral votes of this State in the next Electoral College.

C. B. WARD, Chairman.
THOMAS F. DILLON, Jr., Secretary.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKETS.

Nominations for Governor in Doubtful States Praised by J. K. Jones.

At the request of Chairman Taggart of the Democratic National Committee, ex-Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas has prepared and issued a general review of the situations in the so-called doubtful States of the country. In his statement, which was issued last night, ex-Senator Jones sees an especially auspicious sign for Democratic success in the character of the several State tickets named.

"High-class nominations have been made in every instance," says Senator Jones. "In no campaign within the memory of the veterans connected with National headquarters have such exceptionally strong and popular candidates been presented for the chief executive offices in the various States as in this year. It is admitted by the Republicans that in many States which they confidently claim for their candidate for President the heads of the Democratic State tickets will be elected, while, on the other hand, no assertion is made by the Republicans that any of the States which they concede to the Democratic candidate for President will elect Republican Governors."

Senator Jones says the nomination of Justice Herrick in this State guarantees it to the Democracy, and anticipates the election of Judge Robertson in Connecticut and Gov. Garvin in Rhode Island. He expresses the belief that the probable nomination of W. L. Douglas in Massachusetts makes that State a harder battlefield than at any time since the death of William E. Russell. In New Hampshire, with H. F. Hollis, and in New Jersey, with Mr. Black, ex-Senator Jones expects especially active campaigns. The nomination of John W. Kern in Indiana, and of George W. Peck in Wisconsin, where he has served twice already as Governor, are also taken as extremely hopeful signs, and the election of each is predicted. Prof. Woodbridge N. Ferris in Michigan, ex-Gov. Osborne in Wyoming, Gov. Toole in Montana, ex-United States Senator Heitfeld in Idaho, and ex-Senator Turner in Washington are nominations which ex-Senator Jones declares show the strong position of the Democracy. He also sees strong hope in Utah, where James K. Moyle is running, and in Colorado, where Alva Adams, twice Governor, is running again.

DEFEND JUDGE HERRICK.

His Friends Contradict Charges Made in the Speer Affidavit.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 25.—The enemies of Judge Herrick are causing to be printed in the Republican newspapers an affidavit made by William McMurtrie Speer during the controversy over the ownership of The Argus, in which Mr. Speer says that he had a conversation with Judge Herrick which unfitted him to sit in the case and pass judgment thereon.

The fact is, say Judge Herrick's friends, that the case was not tried before Judge Herrick, but before Judge Alton B. Parker. Judge Herrick's only connection with the case was an application made before him for a stay of Judge Parker's decision pending an appeal. Judge Herrick's only conversation with any party to the action, it is asserted, was previous to its commencement, and before it was believed by him that there would be any litigation. His decision on the application for a stay was not on the merits of the case.

These facts are fully set forth in Judge Herrick's opinion accompanying his decision, rendered in the matter of the application for a stay on May 6, 1893. It was at the hearing of the case on May 3, 1893, that the Speer affidavit was read.

ODELL ATTACKS PARKER COURT

Governor-Chairman Assails Expenses of Appeals Bench Since 1897.

Governor-Chairman Odell issued a statement last night in regard to what he declared were extravagances in the expenditures of the State Court of Appeals since Judge Parker became its head, in 1897.

"I have been studying some of the figures," he says, "and find a very interesting condition in the Court of Appeals expenditures. In 1897, the year of Judge Parker's election, these expenses were, in total, $147,000. In 1898, the first year of the incumbency as Chief Judge of the Democratic candidate for President, they rose to $176,145.20. This included the salaries of ex-Judges Andrews and Earl.

"In 1903, notwithstanding the discontinuance of the salary of the late Robert Earl by reason of death, which salary amounted to $12,000, the expenses of the court rose to $195,350; and notwithstanding the fact that Judge Landon retired, by reason of age, from the court, and one might expect a reduction of $13,700 from 1903, his salary and expenses, the appropriations actually increased, being $199,077 for the current year.

"While I do not suggest that this sum was unnecessarily large, yet it does appear that if a Democratic official found it necessary to so largely increase the expenses of his department, by $52,077, it is an illustration of the necessity for the other increases to which I have heretofore called attention, and cannot be charged as Republican extravagance. This increase covers in part the $9,000,000 over 1894, the last year when Democrats had control of the State.

"It would be well to ask Judge Parker if this was a waste of public funds or their diversion to patronage or plunder, as charged by the real leader of his party, ex-Gov. Hill."

TAMMANY READY TO BEGIN.

Murphy to be at Wigwam Desk Daily from Now On.

Tammany's active campaign will begin in earnest to-day. Charles F. Murphy, who returned Saturday from Saratoga and Albany, will be at the Fourteenth Street headquarters daily, and at once will start in to arrange for the Tammany meetings in October. He also will get the canvass and other features of the actual working campaign started in each of the Assembly districts in Manhattan and the Bronx.

It is planned to hold a big mass meeting in and about Madison Square Garden during the first week of October, and it is hoped that Judge D. Cady Herrick, nominee for Governor, will be able to appear at this meeting. Other big meetings are planned also.

importing trade of New York would be arrayed against him if some plan of relief for the importers were not devised.

Mr. Roosevelt ordered that the operation of the De Vries decision be suspended, at first until last March, which had the effect of permitting the importers who had goods afloat or sold under contract to land them at the old rate.

Immediately there was a great speculation in ribbons, and several firms put large quantities in stock, anticipating an advance in the duty. When March came, however, it was found that the case was not ready to present to the courts, and another extension was granted. Still further extensions were granted until finally the case was decided by the Circuit Court in June in favor of the importers. The Treasury Department acquiesced in the decision of the Circuit Court without an appeal.

Next came the linen scrim case. Linen scrim, a loosely woven fabric which had been paying duty at rates ranging from 30 to 45 per cent. under the "countable clauses" of the law was classified as an etamine at 60 per cent. The importers went to Washington in force, saw the President, and got from him a suspension of the operation of the decision, and an order that a new case be made before the Board of General Appraisers. This was in March, and the new case was decided in favor of the importers in August. In the meantime they had been paying the lower rate of duty.

Then there was the pickled-sheepskin case, which was closed a couple of weeks ago. It is the custom to import sheepskins from Europe in a pickling solution consisting largely of sulphuric acid, the purpose of which is to preserve them from decay on the voyage. Five years ago the Government conceived the idea that this pickling was really a part of the process of tanning, and ordered that they be assessed as non-enumerated manufactured articles at 20 per cent. The importers protested, and the Board of General Appraisers decided that the pickling process was in no sense a process of manufacture and that the skins were free of duty, under the provision in the free list for raw skins.

About six weeks ago the Collector at Philadelphia, it is said, under orders from Washington, classified an importation of pickled sheepskins at 20 per cent. The importer filed a protest, and Assistant Secretary Armstrong issued a circular of instruction to Collector Loeb informing them of the Philadelphia case and ordering them to follow the practice established in Philadelphia in classifying these goods. Immediately a howl of protest went up, especially from the leather-manufacturing centres in Massachusetts.

Senator Lodge's aid was enlisted, and on his representation, it is said, President Roosevelt, at Oyster Bay, directed Secretary Loeb to write a letter to Mr. Armstrong ordering him peremptorily to withdraw his circular of instruction and take no further action in the case until he had discussed the matter personally with the President.

In the "fish in brine" case which first arose in February of this year General Appraiser Fischer decided that the duty on fish in brine should be imposed on the basis of the weight of the brine as well as that of the fish. The fish trade of Boston held meetings, wrote letters, and appealed to the President, with the result that Mr. Fischer was ordered to go to Boston and hear a new case on the same subject. The result was that it was decided that the brine was not dutiable, and that only the actual weight of the fish should be considered.

One of the latest cases in which the operation of decisions has been suspended in response to clamor by the importers is the ostrich feather case. In June General Appraiser McClelland decided that crude ostrich feathers were dutiable as ornamental feathers at 50 per cent. instead of as raw feathers at 15 per cent. The usual protest

ONCE there was a sage who said: "It does not matter what a married man buys down town, his wife always knows of a place where she could have bought it cheaper."

That's because the woman of to-day is a tutored shopper.

There was a time when shopping was a "price haggling affair"—the shrewdest shopper bought for the least and the smartest merchant secured the highest prices.

Then came the advent of the one price store—and competition brought not only one price to all but brought prices down to a legitimate level, and the practice of economy is no longer a matter of skilled argument but a matter of discrimination.

The woman of to-day when she goes on a shopping tour visits several stores and she soon learns when she has paid too much.

Our prices day in and day out, quality considered, are absolutely the lowest possible to quote.

Discriminating shoppers have learned this and to this fact we owe the gratifying daily increase in our business.

$35 tailor made suits at $22.50

WHILE the value is certainly unusual, it's the style of these garments that will please you most—they resemble in every detail those very exclusive custom made suits for which you would pay your tailor at least $50—in fact, they are copies of a regular $50 model—which we had made—and then figured out just how close we could duplicate them for. Third Floor.

They are made just as well as the most exclusive tailor could make them—smart creations as the 30 in. military coat, with a touch of the noted silk braids in handsome shades of brown, blue and black—skirt handsomely trimmed with braid $22.50

CUSTOM TAILORED suits. Extremely smart Fall Suits of custom make that show effective designs for formal wear or afternoon promenade. On the blouse order, with trimmings and combinations noted on many of the imported models, embracing all the new shades of materials distinguished in custom tailored garments —prices range $35 00, $42.50, $ 0, $57.50, $67.50, $75.

ENGLISH MOTOR OR TOURIST COAT—47 in. long, in mottled English cloths in striking designs, embracing the golden brown, London smoke and grays—plaited into a tourist shape back with broad shoulder effect..... $18.50

Exclusive new Fall millinery.

SIMPSON CRAWFORD CO.'S showing of millinery at all times is acknowledged to be not only the largest but the handsomest and most exclusive in all New York. We were the first to bridge the era of high prices, making exorbitant prices a thing of the past—giving you distinctively stylish millinery at prices impossible to duplicate elsewhere.

$25 sample lace robes at $10

AND you know that when we offer robes at a sensationally low price we've the merchandise to fulfill our promise. This sale comes a month earlier than usual because of the unprecedented demand for fine lace robes.

Here's a statement we want to make in connection with this sale—that there are $10,000 worth of robes in this great sale—that no other house in New York can show so many fine robes—priced at less than half.

Remember that it is only twice yearly that we hold this sale and that it's now or never—so far as this season is concerned. We go further, we say to you in all sincerity that you can come fully expecting to receive a regular $25 robe at $10. Just another word—the assortment is so large, so unusually rich and beautiful that there's not a robe want we cannot satisfy. Main Floor.

The entire showroom collection of three of the leading importers of fine Paris robes and the road samples of four domestic manufacturers; all in all this will be the greatest sale of its kind ever held in New York. We have many feeble imitations of these wonderful sales—but past experiences have taught all to watch and wait for this semi-annual event here.

Think of buying $25 and $35 hand run Marquise Lace Robes at $10—$75 hand made lace and Crepe de Chine Robes at $24—$50 imported exclusive Spangled Robes $18.

10,000 yds. of new Fall silks, to-day at 48c

WE'VE sold more silks during September than ever before during any corresponding period. We attribute our great sales to wonderful values perpetually offered. Manufacturers and dressmakers come to us to supply their needs, because they know that just such a sale as we will hold to-day affords silks at less than wholesale. 10,000 yards of new Fall silks, comprising a manufacturer's entire stock—beautiful effects in new Jacquards and checks, both Louisine and Taffeta grounds—all street shades—positively one of the season's best offerings, because you cannot find these silks on sale elsewhere for less than 75c. Absolutely pure silks—patterns all new—just the sort smart dressers are choosing for Fall frocks, waists, &c. The extraordinary purchasing power of Simpson Crawford Co. makes these values possible—48c.

$5 to $10 silk umbrellas now $3.95

MIGHT just as well secure a $10 umbrella for $3.95 as a $5 one—there are plenty of them—it all lies with you. Did we say $5 and $10 umbrellas? Well, we were modest. The fact of the matter is that the handles alone are positively worth $5 to $10—and still the statement is not strong enough. They are the handsomest lot of umbrellas ever shown in America, and outside of this store they are only sold in the very finest jewelry stores.

$5 TO $10 UMBRELLAS, $3.95

There are 1,263 umbrellas in this lot—763 are 26 inch, for women, and 500 are 28 inch, for men. They are made in the best possible manner—steel rods. Paragon frames, cases to match silks and sterling silver swedges. Main Floor.

All pinned, buffed and corded in every way right. Silks are so good that we guarantee them against cutting for one year. The handles are truly beautiful, in many instances works of art—hand carved ivories in hundreds of different grotesque designs. Long ivories, mounted with solid silver and gold; mother of pearl, mounted in silver and gold; gun metal, tortoise shell and other rare and exquisite styles. What a chance to effect a great saving on some of the holiday wants.

To-day's sale of Men's trousers

The Things of Autumn at Wanamaker's

Already the human leaves have turned.

The gay garments of Summer have been set aside. Men and women have donned the warmer Fall apparel—of this year or last, as convenience and opportunity provided.

But the new, is distinctly NEW. Fashion in many cases has been most radical in her revisions.

The NEW is here—for men, for women, for children—ample, complete, satisfying. The showing is interesting, instructive—a safe guide, a sufficient, gratifying source of supply.

Frock Coats
Made to Order

Our custom tailoring organization deserves your attention today, if you have in mind the buying of a new Prince Albert coat and waistcoat.

In the first place we guarantee a perfect fit, and thorough satisfaction with your garment. We will give you such work as you would pay a very much higher price for to any other tailor who will do equal work.

The particular style of Frock Coat we have in mind, to be made to your measure, is of strictly all-wool black thibet, the coat to be lined throughout with Skinner's pure dye silk; back of vest to be of the same material. Price for Coat and Waistcoat, $35.

For Trousers to go with the same, we are showing a very attractive collection of neat effects in striped worsteds, to be made to your order, at $7.50 to $12.

If you want a Business Suit, we have a very handsome assortment of fancy cheviots and worsteds, which we make to order in sack suits at $25 to $35. Second floor, Fourth ave.

The Smartest New Suits For Boys

The Rodman is an entirely new suit this season, which promises to be a prime favorite with boys of eight to sixteen years. The jacket has a yoke over the shoulders, with strapped plaits from the yoke to the belt; the belt being stitched fast to the coat; the coat below the belt being plain, except for a pocket on each side. The trousers are in bloomer style. The suits are in a nice assortment of blue and fancy mixed cheviots. They are some of the best looking Suits ever brought out for boys of these ages. Price, $6.50.

Bloomer Trousers for boys of six to sixteen years; of cheviot and corduroy at $1.50, $1.75 and $2.

Second floor, Ninth street.

A Fine Lot of GIRLS' WAISTS

New, pretty, spick-and-span styles, that girls, as well as their mothers, will admire. Waists of flannel, mohair, albatross, velveteen, and various sorts of silk. Priced, just when there's the greatest desire to get a supply of these necessary things for Fall and Winter, at a quarter less than their value! Due to special concessions by the manufacturers, on account of our large and ever-increasing business in girls' waists.

Three general groups:

At $3 to $3.25—Waists of botany flannel, cashmere, crepe, mohair, and albatross; box plaits with French knots and silk ties; or tailored effects. Colors, white, light blue, green, pink, black, and assorted dark colors; also stripes, in one style or another.

At $3.50 to $5—Waists of velveteen, albatross or fancy striped botany flannel. Some box-plaited blouse effects; others with new shoulders and turn-over collars. Also waists with fancy ribbon, or lace-trimmed yokes and collars. Light and dark colors, and black and white.

At $4 to $5.50—Waists of taffeta silk, peau de soie and peau de cygne; also fancy figured effects, in a variety of tailored styles. Black and colors.

Main floor, Tenth street aisle.

New Dress Fabrics From Paris

The present season does not allow of anything bizarre or elaborate in the way of fabrics. The dressmaker demands the right to finish the decoration for the beautiful gowns of the season, yet Paris must have her novelties. Though confined within certain limitations, her decisions have produced some thoroughly original and pleasing effects.

She has taken the liberty of embroidering dots on all kinds of fabrics, from the thin voiles to the thick, heavy cheviots and tweeds, where dots are seen looming up over the checks and plaids of the original fabric.

On the plain broadcloths, and other smooth fabrics will be found velvet like incrustations, in harmonious tones, in the shape of dots, rings, and other neat figures. Many of these surround cut-out designs in effects similar to embroidery.

There are wonderful possibilities in these fabrics for the clever dressmaker. Here are a few suggestions from a most ample stock:

At $2.50 a yard—Embroidered Polka-dot Tailor Suiting, in black and white, Panama weaves forming pin checks, with embroidered polka-dots in marine blue, ivy green and Persian colors.

At $2.75 a yard—Velvet Polka-dot Venetian Cloth; dots in self-colors.

At $2.75 a yard—Fancy Cloth Serge Checks, in combinations of blue and black, with small embroidered silk polka-dots in cardinal and green.

At $3.50 a yard—Perforated Figured Venetian Cloth; designs in rings and clusters of small oblongs edged with velvet in matching colors.

The sheer woven fabrics in silk-and-wool and all-wool are again in favor, of which are shown a number of attractive new weaves in self-colorings:

At $1.25 a yard—Silk-and-wool Pin Dot Eolienne, in self-colorings.

At $1.50 a yard—Silk-and-wool Nub Figured Eolienne, in self-colorings.

At $1.50 a yard—Silk-and-wool Figured Self-colored Checked Eolienne.

At $1.75 a yard—Silk-and-wool Small Figured Crepe de Paris, in self-colorings.

And the following in plain colors:

Silk-and-wool Eoliennes at $1 to $2 a yard.

Silk-and-wool Crepe de Paris at 75c to $2.25 a yard.

All-wool Voile at 75c to $1.50 a yard.

Rotunda.

Fine Ostrich Feathers
Make a Fine Sale

And these Ostrich Feathers are rich and beautiful enough to make fine hats, too. The high-crowned hats seem to have come to stay the season out; and the most effective trimming for such hats is Ostrich Feathers. And these are unusually full, handsome, well-curled specimens, such as we would be proud to put in our regular stock at full prices, if we weren't able, by reason of good purchases, to sell them

At Least a Quarter Under-Price

In black and white, 12 to 22 inches long; $1.50 to $12 each.

Tenth street Elevator Counter.

Coats for the Babies
Handsome and Under-Price

These are all spic-span-new Coats, that are in the choice styles of the present season, and the reason they are fully one-third below their regular price, is simply because they are a manufacturer's samples, and he is now through with them. All are in perfect condition, and the variety is very large.

The Coats are made of silk and chiffon velvet, richly trimmed with otter, ermine, and other furs, as well as hand-made lace, in many beautiful effects. The colors include white, light blue and pink; the sizes range up to four years.

These Coats will all sell regularly in the good stores at $22 to $75; the sample Coats we offer today are marked at $16.50 to $45. They are rare plums for mothers who secure them.

We have a fine assortment of Bonnets to go with these Coats, in prices ranging from $6 to $16.50.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Black Silk Waists, $3.75

Add another dollar to get at the value. Stylish, practical Waists of black peau de cygne, front cluster-plaited, and trimmed with fancy stitching and buttons; straps over shoulders. Plaited back and sleeves.

$3.75, Worth $4.75

Then an attractive lot of Washable Shirt-Waists, that women will find just right for Autumn wearing.

Of vestings of basket-weave cheviot, in light or dark colors; mostly striped effects. French back, shirt sleeves, stock collar, with embroidered turn-over.

$2.75, Worth $4.50 to $5.50

Second floor, Tenth street.

HANDKERCHIEFS

Here are several special lots of inexpensive Handkerchiefs, and yet every one of absolutely pure linen, notwithstanding its low price.

Men's Linen Handkerchiefs with initial; half dozen in a box, 75c.

Men's Handkerchiefs, with hand-embroidered initials; two styles; script or block letters; ½-inch hems; six in a box, $1.50.

Women's Lace-trimmed Handkerchiefs; worth 25c, now 12½c each.

Men's Linen Hemstitched Handkerchiefs; 1 and ½-inch hems; worth 18c, now 12c each.

Elegance From Europe In Women's Wraps

The last American buyer of Women's Wraps to leave Paris this season was the WANAMAKER representative. He brought with him the latest advices as to style-tendencies in Paris for the coming Winter, based on personal inspection of the newest wraps, up to the very day of sailing—news that has been put to good account in the making up of our American coats and Wraps. But the Paris wraps came too—superb confections that present the widest, most beautiful showing of the kind in New York.

Nor were quantities of a single style brought over. One of the particular joys of the collection is, that in spite of its extent, the majority of the wraps are here in but one or two of a design—they are sold, and that special model disappears from view. And they are being snapped up so quickly by appreciative New York women, that it's prudent, if the showing is to be seen at its best, to see it now—today.

New York manufacturers come in to look at the beautiful things, and gasp with astonishment at the low prices. "$75 for that coat? Why—there's $75 worth of handwork alone on it!" True—hand labor is cheap, though beautiful and artistic, abroad—and American makers could hardly sell these wraps to us, if they could do the work, at the prices for which we offer the wraps.

Some of the groups include:

A collection of Coats, mostly in three-quarter lengths, of velour, peau de soie, crushed plush, Renaissance lace and plain and appliqued cloths, at $65 to $195.

Crushed Plush Blouses; very new and fashionable, at $60 to $90.

The largest collection of foreign Carriage and Opera Wraps in America, at $35 to $225.

Coats in new mode shades of meltons and covert cloth, at $23 to $45.

Tourist Coats, in handsome Scotch mixtures, at $25.

Black Cloth Coats and Jackets, at $16.50 to $35.

Paris Silk Automobile Coats, at $28 to $55. Second floor, Broadway.

A Fashion Show Of Women's Dress

That is, in brief, what this superb collection of Women's Costumes, Suits and Separate Skirts presents. We have kept in touch with the latest and best styles from abroad, and kept our manufacturers busy, under our supervision, adapting these styles to the needs of American women.

The result is a showing of dress that is at once rich and beautiful in its radically new styles, but practical withal.

Among the Walking Suits there is splendid variety. The new high sleeves and vest effects, both salient features of Fall fashions, are seen. Lengths range from short to long; materials are plain and fancy Cheviots, Tweeds, Broadcloths and Covert Cloths. Prices are $12.50 to $60.

Walking Skirts present equally broad selection; in a variety of fabrics. Many stylish effects are shown, at $5 to $20.

As a special offering there is a group of Walking Skirts at $6

Including broadcloth, cheviots and sharkskins; made in gored and plaited styles, and beautifully tailor-finished.

Second floor, Broadway.

Some Tempting Silks

Here are two lots of brand new Silks of the plain staple sorts, that are being wanted in immense quantities right now, with savings of 20c to 25c a yard—because of our good fortune, and yours:

27-inch Taffeta Silk
At $1 Yard, Worth $1.25

The extra width makes this a most economical Silk to buy. It is a good heavy quality of glace dress or lining Silk in dark combinations, including navy blue and black, marine blue and black, brown and black, and black and white, $1 a yard.

75c Peau de Cygne at 55c

This popular Silk is in a soft, lustrous finish, that will make up handsomely in evening and street gowns. The collection includes practically all the most wanted shades, including browns, navy blues, green, white, ivory, cream and black. 19 inches wide, 55c a yard, worth 75c. Rotunda.

A Lillian Corset at $4

A popular model, too; for it combines Paris elegance with a moderate price for an imported corset.

Made of white French coutil; and designed for medium or full figures. It reduces the abdomen, gives grace of lines, and extra length above and below waist-line. Has hose-supporters at front and sides.

Comfortable, graceful corsets; and merely one of our large variety of specially-designed Lillians. $4.

Second floor, Tenth street.

The Campaign in China
Is Pushing to Its End This Week

The entire tremendous resources of this aggressive movement are being applied to making this week a grand finale, to this most successful September China Sale.

We bought more largely this year than ever before, and because of that foresight, have sufficient fine offerings to keep up the stirring interest every day until the very last. Then in the cleaning up of the odd lots of September wares, we present this morning some offerings that are better individually than any previously announced.

Today's offerings of Dinnerware have never been exceeded in value in any previous sale. The same is true of Cut Glass, of which we make a splendid showing, and name prices, which, though equaled in a few instances in the past on some special occasions, have never been exceeded in value anywhere.

Judged by the wares we present this morning, this should be the largest and most successful day of the September Sale, both to us and our public.

The items below give the principal details of today's offerings:

In Dinnerware

We shall today close out two patterns of our open-stock Dinnerware. One in the finest English porcelain, and one in Theodore Haviland china—as follows:

English Porcelain Dinner Sets of 100 pieces, in a rich border decoration, with all pieces gilt. This set includes soup tureen and three platters; and has never been sold before for less than $19. Today at $10 a Set.

Theodore Haviland China Dinner Sets of 101 pieces, with soup tureen and four meat platters, in a fine violet decoration, with all handles gilt. This set has never been sold before for less than $37.50. Today at $20 a Set.

The Odd Pieces remaining of these two patterns are on a counter, at half prices.

Then we have these unmatchable values, as well:

Pouyat China Dinner Sets of 114 pieces, in a fine rose decoration; at $35, regularly $50.

Theodore Haviland China Dinner Sets, in a fine spray flower design; all pieces gold-stippled—113 pieces, at $30, regularly $50. 100 pieces, at $25, regularly $45.

Fine Austrian China Dinner Sets of 101 pieces, in flower decoration, and all handles gilt. At $12.50, regularly $22.50.

Weathered Oak Furniture
A Sale of Attractive Pieces

Furniture cast on "Mission" lines, and finished in weathered oak, is in great demand this season. The pieces are sightly, comfortable, and very attractive additions to the furnishing of the home.

At this opportune moment we offer a choice selection of Weathered Oak Furniture. Most of it suitable for a bachelor's bedroom, but including many pieces for library, living room or den.

This furniture was made to our order, in the best manner, and the pieces were splendid value at full price. Reduced, as they are now, they form a most unusual offering. Details:

At $3.50, from $5.50—Thirty weathered oak Chairs; medium size; square legs, flat stretchers between legs, brown Spanish leather seat, medium high back with flat cross panels.

At $6, from $9—Twenty-seven weathered oak Rockers; broad arms, medium high back with cross panels, square legs with flat stretchers, Spanish leather seat.

At $16.50, from $24—Ninety-five weathered oak Chiffonniers; three large and two small drawers, paneled ends, plain French plate mirror; case 36 in. wide, 20 in. deep; fine construction and finish.

Shoes for the Million

The best shoes for the greatest number, at lowest prices consistent with quality. That's the basis of this Shoe Store; and the reason why we sell the thousands of pairs of shoes that we do every month.

And these low prices are lower than the prices at which many poor shoes are sold—shoes we wouldn't tolerate here at all.

Our powers of purchase come to be of concrete benefit to our customers—we have brought manufacturers to realize the advantages of low profits on steady large orders.

Three examples of this sort of shoe-buying and selling—interesting to you, at the beginning of Fall:

Women's Special Shoes at $2.20

Kidskin with tips of patent leather or kid; with vamps cut circular or square; with heels high or low; either lace or button: medium and heavy weights. Goodyear welted and stitched soles, made on lasts that are used for the highest priced shoes. In all sizes and widths. The specifications for these shoes are in many ways more stringent than those in many of the $3 and $3.50 shoes so widely exploited.

Girls' Special Shoes at $1.60

Spring-heel Shoes, made from a firm, durable black kid, with oak leather soles welted and stitched. Moderate last, stylish, but sensible. Shoes as good as these are usually sold for a third more. Sizes 8½ to 10½, $1.30; sizes 11 to 2, $1.60; sizes 2½ to 5, $2.

Boys' Special Shoes at $2

Made to resist the hard wear to which most boys subject their shoes. Box calf and kidskin, with welted soles of oak leather. The box calf shoes in one style have very heavy double soles, chemically treated to resist water. Sizes 13 to 5½, at $2.

WEDGE AGAIN DRIVEN IN AT PORT ARTHUR

Mikado's Troops Take Works Close to Big Northern Forts.

JAPANESE MUCH ENCOURAGED

Desperate Fighting on Both Sides—Russians Reply Weakly to Foes' Bombardment.

TOKIO, Sept. 25.—It is believed here that the Japanese have captured six forts in the second line of defense at Port Arthur since Sept. 19.

The hope of a speedy reduction of the fortress is running higher.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 25, (10:30 P. M.)—As a result of the battle before Port Arthur which began on Sept. 19 the Japanese succeeded in capturing several important positions, and to-day the Russian tenure of the big forts guarding the north, northeast, and northwest sides of the town is seriously threatened.

Chinese information places the Japanese losses at under 3,000 for the three days' fighting, and this comparatively small casualty list is said to be due to the excessive care used by the Japanese in making their preparations for the advance. Russian sources, however, assert that they have information that the Japanese losses were unusually severe, amounting to fully three times the number mentioned above.

Possibly the most important capture during the three days' fighting was that of Fort Kuropatkin, which, while of minor value so far as preventing the entrance into the town of the Japanese is concerned, was constructed for the purpose of protecting the source of the garrison's water supply. The control of this water supply is now in the hands of the Japanese.

As was announced in these dispatches on Sept. 20, the battle began before daybreak on Sept. 19. The citizens and garrison of Port Arthur, after the enjoyment of weeks of comparative security, awoke to the thunderous reports of artillery along the line extending from the west of Etse Mountain to Rih-Lung and Kik-Wan Mountains.

This was but a preface to the assault, which was destined to result in the capture of three new and important Russian positions, together with six small but annoying forts lying between Shu-hi-Yen and Rih-Lung Mountain.

During the day and night of the 19th and until noon of the 20th the bombardment continued without cessation, and the many shells falling from quarters which previously had been silent made it obvious that the Japanese had at last succeeded either in mounting many heavy guns in new positions or in strengthening their old positions. The infantry fighting during this period was comparatively trivial.

At noon on Sept. 20 the Japanese right and centre, the former being to the west and teh latter to the east of the railroad, commenced the advance. The troops made use of the trenches and infrequent natural cover that lay in their way. The small forts to the south of Shu-shi-Yen resisted this advance but for a short time, their garisons not being strong numerically.

Capture of Fort Kuropatkin.

Since the beginning of the bombardment the artillery fire from Fort Kuropatkin had be engrowing steadily weaker, and, it having become apparent that it had been practically silenced, the Japanese attacked the fort.

Fort Kuropatkin is situated to the south of Pali-Chwang and to the northeast of the parade ground, on a low hill. It derives its name from the time when Gen. Kuropatkin inspected it, pointed out the weakness of the position, and ordered that it be strengthened as far as possible because of the necessity of protecting the water supply.

Whil situated in the chain of main forts, Fort Kuropatkin has never been as strong as the others, and after severe fighting it fell into the hands of the Japanese. This capture lessens further the security of the fort on Rih-Lung Mountain, which is now thratened from a new quarter as well as from Pali-Chwang.

Two More Forts Stormed.

At 5 o'clock on the afternoon of the 20th the Japanese captured a supplementary fort which from the lower ground threatens the fort on Etse Mountain. This ended the heavy fighting for that day, although the Japanese later were compelled to resist several sorties.

During the night the heavy bombardment continued, the Japanese fire being directed with particular vigor against another supplementary fort 3,000 yards to the west of the fort on Etse Mountain, and regarded as highly important because of its bearing on the Etse and Antsz Mountain forts.

The next day, after having pounded this position unmercifully and until its fire had slackened visibly, the Japanese delivered their attack.

They met with a stubborn resistance. They were exposed to the fire of machine guns and rifles, and they made frantic efforts to reach the crest of the slope. They leaped over trenches and embankments and tore down the entanglements in their path, until at length they entered the fort.

Russians Fight Desperately.

The Russian troops there refused to desert their position, even in the face of the superior numbers which confronted them, and desperate hand to hand fighting occurred inside the fort. Eventually almost the entire Russian garrison was either killed or wounded.

The foregoing information has been obtained from a Chinese of unimpeachable trustworthiness.

Military experts here are of the opinion that if the Japanese capture either Rih-Lung or Kik-Wan Forts or the Etse and Antsz Forts the doom of Port Arthur is sealed, and for this reason the importance of the results obtained by the Japanese in their latest assaults upon the Russian positions is obvious.

As the Chinese from whom the correspondent of The Associated Press obtained his information left Port Arthur the night of Sept. 21 he is unable to say whether the battle was renewed on the 22d or not, although junks which have come in here brings reports of a light bombardment on that day.

A steamer which has arrived here from Dalny confirms previous reports that there was heavy fighting at Port Arthur on Sept. 24.

ST PETERSBURG, Monday, Sept. 26.—A dispatch received here from Che-Foo states that the Japanese, having augmented their artillery with 12-inch guns, began a fresh bombardment of Port Arthur on Sept. 10, lasting tell Sept. 19, when it culminated with a heavy attack, which was repulsed with enormous losses.

Driving in the Wedge.

[Etsc-Shan and Antz-Shan forts, on the east and Rih-Lung and Kik-Wan forts on the west, are the great works guarding the approach to Port Arthur by way of the railway. They are about three miles to the northward of the city. Between them lies the parade ground, situated in a valley. Operating from Shu-shi-Yen, about three miles above the parade ground, the Japanese have been constantly directing attacks on these forts, their purpose apparently being to drive in a wedge along the railway and so gain the rear of the great chain of forts.]

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 26.—The Daily Mail's Che-Foo correspondent says that the Japanese are now devoting their energies to an attempt to drive out the Russian fleet from Port Arthur. The Japanese assault is directed against the forts commanding the harbor.

Admiral Togo, with a reinforced fleet, is waiting outside and has placed powerful cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers in a position to prevent the possible use of Tsing-Tau or Chinese treaty ports by the Russian vessels.

Japan, the correspondent says, is determined to destroy the Russian vessels before it is possible for the Baltic fleet to arrive.

JAPAN RESPECTS HOLY CITY.

Is Said to Have Promised China Not to Fight Near Mukden.

MUKDEN, Sept. 25.—The halt in active operations around Mukden is believed to be due not only to the fatigue of the Japanese troops and the slowness in getting up necessary additional supplies, but to a distinct understanding between the Chinese and Japanese that there shall be no bloodshed near the "holy city," where Chinese Emperors are buried.

It is expected, however, that there will be fighting north or northeast of Mukden, possibly on a larger scale even than at Liao-Yang.

The weather has become settled, and the best season of the year is now commencing, with prospects of a warm, dry Autumn.

ST. PETERSBURG, Monday, Sept. 26.—Gen. Kuropatkin has sent the following dispatch to Emperor Nicholas, dated Sept. 23:

"There is no change in the situation today. Cold set in a few days ago. It has become slightly warmer since yesterday.

"The health of the troops is good."

Unofficial advices indicate that Marquis Oyama is slowly continuing to advance. His tendency seems to be to the northeast. This may be prompted by recognition of China's superstitious reverence for Mukden, the Japanese being anxious to remain on the best terms with the Chinese.

Russian Ships Leave Port Said.

PORT SAID, Sept. 25.—The Russian Volunteer Fleet steamers Smolensk, with 350 tons of coal, and the Petersburg, with 100 tons of coal, have sailed from here ostensibly for Libau. The orders to the British cruiser Furious to be in readiness to sail on two hours' notice have been canceled.

Manchurian Railway Report Denied.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 25.—It is authoritatively denied that Minister Lessar is negotiating at Peking for the cession of the Manchurian Railway to China.

OUR POLICE—TWO VIEWS.

Four Bluecoats for One Woman—Only One for Seven Men.

It took four policemen last night to take one woman, Annie Silverman, of 227 East One Hundred and Second Street, to the Fifth Street Police Station. She had been found screaming and tearing her clothing on the street. That was one view from the police kinetoscope. This was another:

"March, ye tarriers, march! Keep in line there, or I'll bat the everlastin' head off ye. Steady!"

Big Policeman Downey was the grand marshal of the parade—one of the finest, from a Corcoran's Roost point of view, that has ever filed into the East Fifty-first Street Police Station.

"Hep, hep; get in step there, ye Eyetalian thug; hep, hep!"

Downey was on his way to the station, not with two men or three men, but a whole lusty seven. The seven had started an early morning fight on Forty-fourth Street between First and Second Avenues. That is Downey's post, and Downey knows the difference between a post and a loaf. He applied his night stick in frequent and impartial doses, then made a sidewalk diagnosis of "subdued," and told the seven Italians to play Indians long enough to each "the house" in single file.

Once or twice in the half mile Downey had to renew his treatment, but he had little trouble until the seven, with Downey acting as rear guard, were at the station house steps. Then the two nearest Downey turned and ran. Downey pushed the five inside the door with one sweep of his arms and then set off in pursuit. One of the fleeing prisoners he "winged" in the leg with his night stick. Then, leaving this one temporarily hors de combat, he sped after the second and captured him unwounded. On the way back he picked up the first.

Now all Downey fears is that the Captain will lengthen his post on the ground that he can take care of two or three posts as well as one.

BOY DECIDED TO BE BURGLAR.

Policeman Found Him at Work and Dissuaded Him Temporarily.

Seven-year-old Wendel Garrison of 199 Broadway, Williamsburg, is old enough to enjoy reading cheap literature, and last night in order to get a little "easy money" he broke into the shoe store of John Hoerle, which adjoins his home, and proceeded to rifle the cash drawer. While little Wendel was at work Policeman O'Brien of the Bedford Avenue Station, who weighs nearly 300 pounds, lumbered by and heard the noise in the store.

O'Brien went to the rear of the store, and, climbing to the roof of the one-story extension in the rear of the main building, discovered a hole two feet square in the roof. Looking down through the hole he saw little Wendel at the cash drawer. O'Brien yelled to Wendel to come out, but Wendel only laughed and kept at work. Finally O'Brien became so positive and threatening in his talk that the boy concluded it was best to do as he was told, and caught a rope that O'Brien let down, and was drawn up through the hole to the roof.

At the station house Wendel told Capt. Harkins that he had been reading cheap literature and that he ran across so many young characters who made money easy that he decided to see what he could do for himself. Wendel is now a guest of the Children's Society, on Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn.

FATAL AFFRAY OVER NEGRO.

Two Men Killed and One Wounded in a Georgia Store.

MACON, Ga., Sept. 25.—Specials to The Telegraph say that last night, at Naylor, Mannie Carter, a young white man, and Gravey Hodge, a negro, were killed and another white man seriously wounded.

The negro was ordered out of a store for insolence. Ben Penny and Reuben Knight, both white, sided with him. He returned to the store, renewing the difficulty. Penny shot Carter through the body, but the latter, as he fell, shot his slayer through the arm. The negro was killed soon afterward, presumably by one of Carter's friends. Penny and Knight have been arrested.

DOUBTS PRISONER'S STORY.

Sheriff Bell Thinks Confession Regarding Colorado Murders Is False.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Sept. 25.—Sheriff Bell has concluded that the alleged confession of Edward Romaine, a prisoner at Topeka, Kan., implicating union miners who formerly lived in this district in the Vindicator mine and Independence depot murders, is entirely false.

"I found many discrepancies in Romaine's story," said Sheriff Bell, who has just returned from Topeka, "and many of his statements were easily disproved. He was in Lajunta on the day of the Independence depot explosion."

KUROPATKIN LOSES SUPREME COMMAND

than 5,000 miles long are fully realized, but with the Circum-Baikal Railway completed the authorities expect practically to double the present capacity of the line, and to send out two corps instead of one monthly.

Within three months three corps are expected to reach Harbin, swelling the total number of Russian soldiers in Manchuria to considerably over 500,000. In the meantime the armies at the front, continually augmented by fresh troops, will act as a buffer to hold in check the Japanese until the Russian Army is able to assume the aggressive with sheer weight of numbers.

In the reorganization special plans have been made to overcome the deficiency in guns under which the Russians have been laboring. Over 600 additional field and rapid-fire guns are to be sent to the front.

The struggle for the mastery in the Far East now seems destined to assume titanic proportions.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 26.—Interest in the fate of Port Arthur has again grown so keen as to overshadow the significance of Russia's decision to organize a second army. This decision, as The Daily Telegraph remarks, shows, together with the Emperor's remarkable letter to Gen. Grippenberg, that Russia has at last awakened to the magnitude of her task and the character of her foe.

It is assumed by the paper that Gen. Kuroki is carrying out some important turning movement, but owing to the secrecy of the Japanese movements, it is regarded as useless to indulge in speculation.

The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent regards the Emperor's rescript as a brilliant victory for Viceroy Alexieff, and declares that the real reason for the Emperor's decision was Gen. Kuropatkin's failure to carry out his plans at Liao-Yang.

GERMANY'S PRINCE-ATTACHE.

Charles of Hohenzollern at Tokio—Going to the Front at Once.

TOKIO, Sept. 25.—Prince Charles of Hohenzollern arrived here to-day and received an official welcome.

He will meet certain high Japanese officials to-morrow, after which he will join the Japanese forces in the field without loss of time.

Prince Charles Anton von Hohenzollern, who is a son of Prince Leopold, Burgrave of Nuremberg, is a Major in the Prussian Army and the representative of Emperor William with the Japanese Army.

Prince Frederick Leopold was to join Gen. Kuropatkin's army as a representative of Germany, but the plan had to be abandoned, Russia politely saying she could not vouch for the safety of the Prince.

ENGLISH NOT SATISFIED.

Papers Take a Serious View of Russia's Decision as to Contraband.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 26.—Several of the morning newspapers take a serious view of the Russian decision on the question of contraband, which is published in full in the English press to-day. The Daily Graphic says:

"To propose to interpret the new rule leniently without specifying the conditions of leniency is of no value to the commercial community and in no way modifies the gravity of the situation."

The Standard similarly declares that more information is necessary before this limited concession can be accepted as meeting the Anglo-American demands.

CIRCUM-BAIKAL RAILWAY OPEN.

Russia Has Now an Unbroken Line to the Seat of War in the Orient.

IRKUTSK, Sept. 25.—The Circum-Baikal Railway was opened to-day.

Russia has now an unbroken line of railway from Europe to the seat of war in the Far East. The line around Lake Baikal is part of the main railway to Vladivostok, but when the Trans-Siberian Railway was opened this portion of the road had not been completed, owing to the enormous difficulties involved. The total length of the line is 161 miles.

ROBBERIES AT WHITE PLAINS.

Gang Now at Large Suspected of Two Burglaries and an Arson Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, Sept. 25.—Several attempts at robbery were made early this morning in this place. At 3 o'clock this morning burglars cut out the glass in the large windows of the store of James L. Reinolds & Co. With the aid of "jimmies" they tried to open a six-foot safe without success. Then they wrenched off the outside combination lock and broke the hinges on the safe door. They failed, however, to open the safe, which contained over $1,000, and overlooked a cash drawer in which was about $50.

Last night the burglars cut the glass in the door of West Hughes's store on Lexington Avenue and tried to open his store safe with "jimmies," but the noise attracted attention, and they hurriedly made their escape.

It is reported that the same gang were responsible in setting fire to the barn of Howard Willets yesterday in the hope that they might rob the Willicts residence during the excitement. Mr. Willets's loss was only about $200. The same gange is supposed to have operated at Hartsdale Friday night, when a barn is said to have been set on fire.

THREAT TO FUEL MINORITY.

Must Ratify Majority's Reorganization Plan or Face Ruin.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 25.—Fearful lest they be frozen out of the company entirely, the stockholders of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company will ratify the reorganization plan of the Bondholders' Protective Company at the annual meeting on Oct. 17 in Denver. That there may be no hitch in the adoption of the plan and that the minority stockholders may be fully informed of what the majority will do, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will be present with several of the Rockefeller-Gould men.

Mr. Rockefeller will explain what is proposed by his people.

The minority stockholders are apprehensive that if they refuse to ratify the $2,200,000 increase in the capital stock the Rockefelled-Gould crowd will retain the best properties of the company. It is said that a vigorous hint has gone out to the majority that unless they want to face ruin they must indorse the plan.

SNATCHED PURSE ON CAR.

Woman Who Owned It Fell Off—Would-Be Thief Escaped.

Mrs. Ann Singer of 420 West Seventeenth Street and a twelve-year-old son were riding on a north-bound Second Avenue open car last night when, between Fourth and Fifth Streets, a young man leaped up on the running board. He instantly seized her purse, but Mrs. Singer held on, and in the struggle the purse fell to the floor of the car.

Mrs. Singer tried to hold to the young man while she shouted for assistance, but in doing so was pulled from the car and fell to the ground. She was picked up unconscious and carried into the office of Dr. Wolff, at 58 Second Avenue. The physician worked over the woman for an hour before he brought her back to consciousness. She was then able to leave for home. The police of the Fifth Street Station are looking for the purse snatcher, who fled.

MEN FIGHT OVER LAD'S COFFIN.

One Avenges the Other's Insult to Grief-Stricken Mother.

Mrs. Frederick Wolferts of 50 First Avenue accused Thomas Lamb in the Yorkville Court yesterday of having insulted her while she was at prayer beside the coffin containing the body of her eleven-year-old son. The lad had been drowned in the East River.

"I had just arisen from my knees, having been in prayer before the coffin, when I saw this man standing before me," Mrs. Wolferts testified. "I had never seen him before. Before I had said anything to him he made an insulting remark. I resented his talk, and my uncle, Henry Slavin came to my assistance."

At this point the prisoner interrupted the testimony of Mrs. Wolferts.

"What she says is untrue, your Honor," he said.

"What were you doing in this woman's house? She doesn't know you," asked Magistrate Flammer.

The prisoner replied that he had brought the body of Mrs. Wolferts's son home. This statement was contradicted by Policeman Hines of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station. He was fined $10.

Afterward Mrs. Wolferts told of the struggle between her uncle and the intruder.

"My uncle struck the man and knocked him down," she said. "When the man got to his feet he tried to strike my uncle in return. The men clinched and would have tipped over the coffin had I not steadied it."

POLICEMAN FOLLOWED HIM.

Didn't Let Mrs. Huntington's Gardener Fire His Revolver.

Charles Buhler, a middle-aged German, who lives on the Elm Road, Westchester, and is employed as a gardener by Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, got a big revolver yesterday and started for the Fort Schuyler Road. On the way he dropped in on his old friend Schroeder to have a glass of beer. When he had drunk it he bade Schroeder a fervent good-bye.

"Why, where are you going?" asked Schroeder.

"Oh, well," stammered Buhler, "I am not loved any more, and well—"

At this point Buhler exhibited the revolver.

Schroeder tried to persuade Buhler that anything like violence was not in accordance with reason, but Buhler seemed obdurate. When Buhler had left the saloon Schroeder slipped out, hunted up Policeman Dougherty, and pointed out the woods near by, toward which Buhler had started. Dougherty found Buhler apparently picking out a soft spot in the woods.

Dougherty slipped up behind Buhler and pinioned his hands behind his back. Then he took his revolver out of his hip pocket and took him to the police station, where he was charged with disorderly conduct. He denied there that he had intended to shoot himself.

KILLED SEEKING BIRD NEST.

Boy Fell from Tree and Landed Upon Sharp Branch.

Alphonse Pede, the seventeen-year-old son of a cigarmaker living at 197 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, fell to his death yesterday afternoon from a tree in Briar's Woods, Jamaica, L. I. He landed on a sharp branch, which pierced his lung, and died in a few minutes.

While the dying lad's companion, Frank Doscher, sixteen years old, of 13 Wyckoff Avenue, Ridgewood, ran for help, a party of merrymakers who were attracted by his cries of grief ran up. Two young women were in the party. They tried to aid the dying lad, but he retained consciousness only a moment.

The two boys had gone to Jamaica on a trolley car and had spent the early part of the day in the woods. They had filled their pockets and a small bag with chestnuts, and were about to return home when young Pede started up a tree after a bird's nest. He was about to grasp it when the branch upon which he was standing gave way.

WROTE THREAT OF SUICIDE.

Husband's Letter Moves Wife to Search for His Body.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Having received a letter from her husband, telling her that he intended to commit suicide by jumping into a river, Mrs. A. H. C. Hinde of Long Island City, N. Y., has asked the police of Chicago to search for his body. He came to Chicago and found employment in a printing office, but suffered injuries to his right arm, incapacitating him for work. The letter received by Mrs. Hinde said, in part:

"Dear Little Wife:

"I have been to the hospital, and they think they will have to take my hand off to save my arm. Oh, this is horrible. I will never again be able to support myself.

"You will be a widow when you receive this. This is my birthday and my deathday. I intend to fall off the pier to-night."

SUICIDE WITH SHOTGUN.

Newark Man Lying on Couch Pulled Trigger with Toe.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 25.—Philip Bittman, forty-five years old, of 72 Gotthard Street, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shotgun at his home this afternoon.

Bittman attached a string from the trigger of the gun to his toe, and lying down on a lounge in his parlor with the muzzle of the gun under his chin, pulled the trigger.

5,000 INDIANS TO GATHER.

Will Honor Chief Joseph's Memory and Elect His Successor.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Sept. 25.—Indians from all over the Northwest have been summoned to gather at North Lapwai, on the Nez Perces Indian Reservation in order to celebrate with a feast and war dance in memory of their late leader, Chief Joseph. At the same time a successor will be chosen to rule the tribe.

Summonses by mail and messenger have been sent to all the wandering bands, including Nez Perces, Lapwais, Blackfeet, Spokanes, Colvilies, and other tribes. Five thousand Indians will be invited. The date for the affair will be fixed later by the subchiefs. A week will be devoted to feasting, dancing, and balloting for a new chief.

Girl's Mind Affected by Fright.

Her mind affected by a scare received six months ago, Teresa Peichert, fourteen years old, of 120 East One Hundred and Second Street, was removed to Bellevue Hospital yesterday afternoon. One night she was sent into a dark parlor. She couldn't find a match, and was groping about in the dark, when her cousin entered the room and spoke to her suddenly. The girl became so frightened that she was taken ill and had to be put to bed.

APATHY IN MISSOURI.

Senator Stone Says He Never Saw Such Political Indifference.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Senator William J. Stone of Missouri arrived in Washington this afternoon, being the only Senator seen in Washington for two months.

"I never saw such political quiet and indifference in Missouri," said the Senator. "If there has been a firecracker exploded or a dry goods box burned in the whole State since nominations were made, I am not aware of it. I have never seen such a campaign.

"The old custom for many years has been, you know, for both parties immediately after the Presidential nominations are made to hold ratification meetings from one end of the State to the other. I have heard of none, and there was no demonstration of any kind until the active campaign started.

"This applies to both parties, though. The Republican candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor are making a good campaign from their standpoint, and trying to swing back into line those Republicans who had declared for Folk. The Republicans have an idea they can carry the State. The Democrats will win, but I could give no estimate of the majority. It may be that the voters will get aroused before the campaign ends, but there will be some stay-at-homes."

He did not attempt to explain the lack of enthusiasm in Missouri, and when asked if it was the inability of the Democrats to "warm up" to Parker and his gold platform, replied merely:

"Well, you know Missouri has always been a very strong Bryan State."

He thought that those who went to the polls, however, would "vote'er straight."

BROADWAY CROWD SEES ROW.

Men Said to be Assaulted Would Not Complain—Prisoner Locked Up.

A man who said he was James S. Fillmore of 36 West Twenty-sixth Street told the West Thirtieth Street police when asked his occupation last night that he "didn't have to work for a living." He was walking up Broadway at Thirty-seventh Street when Frank H. Stohn of the Putnam House said the man struck him from behind in the neck.

He was going to follow Fillmore when the latter stepped into the street, and an automobile containing Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Adams of 12 East Thirty-first Street passed along. Adams said Fillmore reached over and struck him in the face; Adams nearly lost his seat, and the machine careened and shot for the curb. He pulled the controller in time to prevent an accident, and he and Stohn stepped up to Fillmore to settle the scores.

A crowd surrounded them, and Policeman Geary of the West Thirtieth Street Station arrested Fillmore. In the station house the complainants said they did not think Fillmore responsible and would not make complaints against him. But the police locked him up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

FAIRBANKS IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Candidate's Train Waits While He Attends Church.

MANDAN, North Dakota, Sept. 25.—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks and party spent the day crossing the State of North Dakota. They were joined at St. Paul by Senator Henry C. Hansbrough. The run from Fargo to Jamestown across the valley of the Red River was made rapidly and almost without stop.

The Jamestown train was held for two hours in order to afford the Vice Presidential candidate and his friends an opportunity to attend church. A special religious service was held at the opera house, which was attended by Senators Fairbanks, Dolliver, and Hansbrough. The sermon was preached by Dr. J. F. Dudley, a Congregational clergyman.

SHOT BY HIGHWAYMAN.

Victim Attacked by Five Men in a Bronx Avenue.

While Matthew Ryan, a driver of 171 Brook Avenue, was on his way home last night about 10 o'clock, five men, supposed to be Italians, sprang out at him from the bushes at One Hundred and Forty-third Street and Brook Avenue and knocked him down, supposedly for the purpose of robbery. Ryan managed to struggle to his feet and was attempting to run away when one of the highwaymen drew a revolver and fired at him. The bullet took effect in Ryan's left hip and he again fell in the street.

Three men heard the shot and came to the assistance of Ryan. They were James Doherty of 451 Robbins Avenue, William McElroy of 691 Morris Avenue, and Peter Mulhall of 2,342 Third Avenue. With them was Policeman De Witt of the Alexander Avenue Station. Ryan's assailants immediately took to their heels and disappeared in the darkness over through the vacant lots.

Ryan was removed to the Lincoln Hospital in an ambulance. He is in a serious condition rom the bullet wound, and it is thought that he is suffering from possible concussion of the brain as a result of the blow which felled him.

LONG COMMENTS ON SCHLEY.

Calls References to Himself in Admiral's Book "Entirely Wild."

Special to The New York Times.

HINGHAM, Mass., Sept. 25.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy John D. Long, after reading for the first time to-day the references to himself in Rear Admiral Winfield S. Schley's book "Forty-five Years Under the Flag," declared that they were "entirely wild." Then he dictated a statement of his position, saying:

"The whole matter of Admiral Schley's conduct has been so fully covered by the court of inquiry, which found against him, and by the decision of President Roosevelt, who, on Schley's appeal to him, also confirmed the finding against Schley, that it seems unnecessary to comment on the Admiral's present statement.

"I do not mind a bit his reference to me. The head of a department in discharging his duty must expect criticism, especially from those who are found at fault, even though the finding is by their brother officers.

"Indeed, though I have not read or before this seen the Admiral's book, the references to me which you now show me seem to be entirely wild. I certainly have only the kindest feeling for Schley, and have never referred to him in any except the most courteous manner.

"As to Maclay's book, I never had the slightest knowledge of anything in it relating to Schley's conduct till its publication. His references to Schley were very improper, and orders were at once given by me that the book should not be used at the Naval Academy, and his publishers were asked to correct it."

QUICK-WITTED AUTOIST PREVENTED A SUICIDE

Picked Up Young Student and Rushed Him to Doctor.

TWO WOMEN LEFT MACHINE

Young Grace's Mother Had Just Reprimanded Him for Attachment to a Brooklyn Girl.

Roderick T. Grace of 695 East One Hundred and Forty-first Street, a young man who last Spring was graduated from the College of the City of New York, will owe his life—if, indeed, he survives—to the chance passing of Richard M. Sterns, proprietor of the Hotel Navarre, who last night found the young man almost dead as a result of his having swallowed carbolic acid. Mr. Stearns, with a party of friends, had been spending the afternoon at the Country Club at Throgg's Neck, and was on his way home in his automobile, when, as he neared a point on the Fort Schuyler Road near the Boulevard, he discovered young Grace leaning against a tree. The next moment Grace tottered and fell.

Mr. Stearns immediately brought his machine to a stop and ran to the tree. He saw the acid bottle on the ground and the man's burned lips. He realized that it was a case of quick action. Accordingly, he told the two women who were in the car to alight, and, picking up the unconscious form of the man, he carried him to the machine and put him in. He then climbed in himself and drove the machine at top speed to the Westchester Police Station. Mr. Stearns told in a few words the nature of his visit, and Sergt. Posthoff telephoned to the Fordham Hospital for an ambulance.

In about ten minutes the ambulance, in charge of Dr. Dolan, arrived. It was not until after half an hour of the hardest kind of work that the young man responded to the doctor's treatment. At the hospital last night it was said that his condition was still very serious.

Young Grace's mother, when she heard last night of his attempted suicide, said that she was to blame. She had reprimanded him yesterday morning, she said, for his strong liking for a Brooklyn girl whom he had met in the Summer. She learned of his infatuation from a letter which she found in his pocket.

"I know I've been too strict with him," she said, "but I did it all for the best."

Young Grace is a member of the Mott Haven Athletic Club.

SAILORS CATCH ROBBER.

Then Save Him from Norfolk Mob, Which Wanted to Lynch Him.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 25.—Four United States sailors, Hospital Apprentices Cornell, Lindsay, O'Neill, and Fenton, from the receiving ships Franklin and Richmond, late last night, after a desperate struggle in the river with David Hines, a negro robber, landed the desperado at police headquarters, where he is charged with attacking Mrs. Abraham Jacobson in front of the city Post Office and taking her purse.

Mrs. Jacobson had just left the Post Office when Hines grabbed her purse. A crowd of several hundred persons pursued the negro, who darted through an alley and made for the Granby Street Canal. The sailors led the chase, and when Hines plunged into the deck the bluejackets went after him. Hines was a match for the quartet, which, however, fought him and dragged him ashore. When they reached the pier the crowd cried "Lynch him!" The sailors counseled coolness, but when things looked squally for Hines the police arrived.

McNALLY WITNESS MISSING.

Police Looking for Man Not Seen Since the Shooting.

The Brooklyn police, under the direction of Capt. Toole of the Flushing Avenue Station and Capt. Formosa of the Brooklyn Central Office, worked all day yesterday and into the night trying to solve the mystery connected with the death of Frank McNally, the saloon keeper, who was shot in a room over his saloon, 104 Park Avenue, last Wednesday morning.

Within the last twenty-four hours the search has assumed more definite form, the officers believing that they now know who riddled the dead man's body with bullets. Several men are known to have threatened McNally. All but one of these men have been seen and have told straight stories. The missing man is said to be a brother of a girl who made a practice of visiting McNally's saloon. He was seen near the saloon but a short time before the shooting, and since then has not been found. The police will not admit that he will be arrested if found. It is evident, however, that they are hunting high and low for him.

The safe in McNally's saloon will probably be opened to-day.

RESTAURANT SAFE ROBBED.

Thieves Worked Within a Few Feet of Sixth Avenue.

A safe standing within three feet of the front door of Childs's restaurant, opening on Sixth Avenue between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, was broken open some time yesterday morning. Sledge hammers and wedges were used in the work, but the police knew nothing of the burglary until it was reported to them late last night by H. G. Stryker, the manager. The thieves got about $80, the receipts of Saturday night.

The restaurant closes from midnight Saturday until 1 o'clock Monday morning. Mr. Stryker went to the place before midnight to prepare for the opening. He found the safe open and the books and papers scattered about the floor. The police found that the thieves entered through a small window leading into the kichen that had been left open for ventilation.

GIRL SEARCHES FOR BROTHER.

Confidential Clerk of Broadway Firm Strangely Disappears.

Miss Sadie Hauver, who lives at the Banta House, 30 West Fifteenth Street, has appealed to the police and the hospital authorities to aid her in searching for her brother, Charles Hauver, thirty-two years old, employed in a confidential capacity with a wholesale firm in Broadway. He left his boarding place Monday morning last apparently in the best of health, and saying he was going to his place of business. None of his friends has seen him since.

Miss Hauver said last night that her brother had no love affairs, his accounts were all straight, his employers had told her, and she could account in no way for his disappearance.

RUNNING FIGHT WITH ROBBERS.

Three Are Captured in a Pennsylvania Farmer's Barn.

TARENTUM, Penn., Sept. 25.—After a running exchange of shots between local police and three alleged highwaymen, culminating in the round-up of the trio in a farmer's barn on the outskirts of the city, Harry Leslie, William Krepts, and James Orris were to-day lodged in jail, charged with robbing Robert Smith of $75 and beating him into an unconscious condition. Smith's condition is serious.

HAD A FIGHT IN A CAB.

O'Connor's Guest Ran Away—His Wife and Boy Shrieked.

Patrick O'Connor, a longshoreman, living at 86 Horatio Street, with his wife, Mary, and their nine-year-old boy attended the funeral of Mrs. Mary Callahan, a former neighbor, at Calvary Cemetery yesterday. On their way home Mr. O'Connor became incensed at the action of a guest, whose name he would not divulge.

O'Connor's resistance was confined to words until the cab reached Twenty-third Street and Broadway, when the unnamed guest was seen to leap from the cab and get away as fast as he could. Then came the sounds of a struggle from the interior of the cab, interspersed with the shrieks of the woman and the frightened cries of the boy. At Seventeenth Street the driver, Patrick O'Brien, thought that his cab was being sufficiently damaged to warrant police interference.

So he summoned Policeman Baxter, who arrested O'Connor. Mrs. O'Connor was thrown into a heap in the corner, while the son had hidden under a seat. Baxter took the whole outfit to the "Tenderloin" Station, where O'Connor was locked up charged with assault. Mary was permitted to go home and promised to come back after husband.

PISTOL PANIC ON FERRYBOAT.

Antonio Albino Couldn't Find Man He Wished to Kill.

Antonio Albino caused great excitement on board the Staten Island ferryboat Middletown as she was about to leave St. George shortly after 12 o'clock this morning for this city. The passengers were mostly on board when Albino ran through the waiting room of the ferry house with a pistol in his hand.

He ran past the ticket chopper and into the men's cabin of the boat. He searched this fore and aft and also the main deck forward. He then ran into the women's cabin, and then to the hurricane deck and through the cabins and around outside, peering at every one and still holding the revolver ready for use. Policeman Wells met him as he reached the women's cabin on the main deck.

The screams of the women attracted the policeman. Albino was locked up. He said he had been attacked by a man, who went to the ferry house, and, after obtaining a pistol, Albino said he followed to kill the fellow, who, however, was not on the boat.

POLICE AWAIT A CALL.

Negro Left Stolen Horse in Stable Near Headquarters.

A bay mare and buggy that had been stolen from the stable of Eugene McCabe, a boiler manufacturer, of 195 Commerce Street, Newark, on Friday night, was found last night in a stable in Mulberry Street, here, nearly opposite Police Headquarters, and returned later to its owner.

The proprietor of the stable where the rig was found told the police that it had been left there by a colored man, who said he would return later and arrange for having it sold. The police hope he will keep his promise.

SHOT WOMAN AT FAIR.

Restaurant Man Then Fled—Had Attempted Suicide Thrice.

TRENTON, Sept. 25.—Mrs. Frederick Admeski, a widow, twenty-three years old, was shot and perhaps fatally injured this evening at the Inter-State Fair grounds here by Gottlieb Mink, a prominent German, formerly an extensive bottler.

Mink had contracted to run a small restaurant on the fair grounds. He and his wife and Mrs. Admeski visited the grounds this evening. Mrs. Mink and Mrs. Admeski were sitting in the restaurant eating, when Mink entered. He walked up to where Mrs. Admeski was sitting, and, pulling a revolver from his pocket, fired at her. The bullet entered her right lung.

Mink, thinking that he had killed her, ran from the building and disappeared from the grounds. There were about 4,000 people on the grounds at the time.

The police say there had been ill-feeling between Mink and the woman for some time. Mink has attempted suicide three times in four years.

PRISONER'S POLITE THREAT.

Solicitous About Health of Policeman He Would Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, Sept. 25.—Chief of Police Hector of Vailsburg received a postal card yesterday from Nicholas Gabel, who is serving a term in the Caldwell Penitentiary for a murderous assault with a hatchet he made on his wife about a year ago, after which he tried to commit suicide. His term is about to expire, and he wrote Chief Hector as follows:

I thought I would write you a few lines hoping you are well, as I am at present. I would like to know what right you have to put my name in the paper. There will be a fight to a finish between you and me. I don't want to be blamed for everything that is done in Vailsburg.

Chief Hector says he is not looking for trouble, but that if Gabel is, he, the Chief, has all the facilities for fully accommodating him. Other members of the force are inclined to treat the matter seriously, as Gabel is known to be a man of violent temper.

CROWD BEATS SHOOTER.

Tenants Jumped In When Italians Had Row in Hallway.

Giuseppe Zacomeno of 437 West Twenty-ninth Street, got into a fight with Cetenete Domenico of 339 West Thirty-ninth Street, in the hallway of the latter's home last night. Domenico alleges that Zacomeno fired five shots at him.

When the Italian and negro tenants rushed down stairs they found Domenico shot in the leg and fighting with Zacomeno. They kicked and beat Zacomeno into insensibility, and he was taken unconscious to Roosevelt Hospital. He had several ribs broken, a possible fracture of the jaw, six scalp cuts, and bruises innumerable on his body, arms, and legs. Domenico with a bullet in his right leg was also taken to the hospital.

FOUND POLICE WERE ALERT.

Youth Who Doubted Alertness of Force Is Undeceived.

"I saw in the papers that there were no policemen on the streets at night, and thought I'd see if it was so," was the only defense offered in the Harlem Court yesterday by Thomas Fleming, twenty-four years old, of 339 East Seventy-second Street, who was charged with malicious mischief in demolishing the fruit stand of Tony Mamolo, at Eighty-seventh Street and Avenue A, Saturday night.

He had just finished smashing the stand, according to Policeman Lustbader of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, when that officer arrived and arrested him. Magistrate Crane fined him $5, and as he did not have the money he will spend five days in jail.

Found Beaten in Hallway.

Police Headquarters was notified last night that a man had been sandbagged and thrown into the hallway of the tenement at 213 Avenue A. At the same time a boy told Policeman Jones of the Fifth Street Station that a man had been stabbed there. Jones went to the hallway and found Jerolamo Cenia, 22 years old, a laborer, of that address, in a comatose condition. Women living in the house said there had been a fight in the hallway, and that four men had beaten Cenia.

Body Found in North River.

A man's body was found floating in the North River between Piers 6 and 7 yesterday. He was about thirty-five years old. A pay envelope, containing $10 and marked "William Walsh," was found in the trousers pocket.

AMERICA LEADS IN WORLD'S MANUFACTURES

Growth of Production Far Greater in This Than in Other Countries.

SOME COMPARATIVE STATISTICS

Consumption of Cotton, Pig Iron, and Coal in the United States, Britain, France, Germany, and Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The rapid growth in the exportation of manufactures from the United States and the increase in the share which they form of the total exports has led the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics to a comparison of the growth of the manufacturing industry in the United States with that of other countries engaged in supplying the world's international markets with manufactured products.

Four countries—the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and the United States—are the world's chief purveyors of the manufactures which enter into international commerce. The value of manufactures entering the international markets of the world amounts to about four billions of dollars annually, and of this sum about three billions in value is supplied by the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and the United States.

Studies of production of manufactures as a whole are extremely difficult because no country other than the United States makes any measurement, by census or otherwise, of the value of its manufactures as a whole. Estimates have been made by Mulhall and other statisticians of the value of the manufactures produced in the principal countries of the world at various dates.

These figures are in all cases estimates, except those of the census of 1900. If approximately accurate, the comparison of conditions in the United States and the European countries at the two periods named would indicate that the increase in the production of manufactures in the United States is much greater than that of the European countries in question. During the period 1888 to 1903 the growth of production of manufactures in the United States is estimated at $5,982,000,000, and in the three European countries combined, $3,863,000,000, and the percentage of increase for the United States 85 per cent., and for the three European countries combined 42 per cent.

The actual figures of consumption of three of the most important articles utilized in manufacturing are available for each of the countries in question for a considerable term of years. These figures are those of the consumption of cotton, pig iron, and coal. These three articles—cotton, pig iron, and coal—supply in their consumption a better measurement of industrial and manufacturing activity than any other data available in countries which take no census of manufactures. The figures presented in the annual report of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics show the consumption of cotton, pig iron, and coal in the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and the United States in 1880 and 1903. In the case of coal and iron, figures for Russia are also included.

In cotton consumption the actual increase in the United States in 1903, as compared with 1880, is 1,026,917,226 pounds, as against an increase of 883,653,016 pounds in the United Kingdom, Germany, and France combined, the percentage of increase in the United States being 107 per cent., as against 46 per cent. in the three European countries combined.

In pig-iron consumption the actual increase in the United States in 1903, compared with 1880, is 15,263,454 tons, as against an increase of 11,518,000 tons in the four countries, the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and Russia combined; while the percentage of increase in the United States is 437 per cent., as against an increase of 102 per cent. in the four European countries combined.

In coal consumed, the actual increase in the United States in 1903, compared with 1880, is 247,214,000 tons, as against an increase of 175,301,000 tons in the four countries, the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and Russia, combined; and the percentage of increase in the United States is 364 per cent., as against an increase of 82 per cent. in the four European countries combined.

Considering the actual quantities of these three great articles consumed, the figures for 1903 are:

Cotton consumption, 1,979,966,331 pounds in the United States, as against 1,458,439,232 pounds in the United Kingdom, 815,124,000 pounds in Germany, and 481,228,000 pounds in France, the total amount consumed in the United States thus exceeding by 33 per cent. that of the United Kingdom and being far in excess of that of Germany and France combined.

Of pig iron, the total consumption in the United States in 1903 was 18,757,357 tons, against 9,758,000 tons in Germany, 7,875,000 tons in the United Kingdom, 2,749,000 tons in France, and 2,457,000 tons in Russia, the consumption of the United States being thus nearly double that of Germany and considerably more than double that of the United Kingdom.

Of coal consumption, the figures for the United States in 1903 are 316,069,000 tons, as against 166,533,000 tons for the United Kingdom, 156,236,000 tons for Germany, 47,246,000 tons for France, and 16,945,000 tons for Russia, the consumption of coal in the United States being thus nearly double that of the United Kingdom and fully double that of Germany.

The one country of Europe in which the figures of growth approximate those of the United States is Germany, which shows in the case of coal consumption an increase of 174 per cent., against 364 per cent. in the United States; in pig iron consumption, an increase of 386 per cent. against 437 per cent. in the United States, and in cotton consumption, an increase of 170 per cent., as against 107 per cent. in the United States.

In actual consumption, however, Germany shows an increase in coal of but 99,234,000 tons, as compared with 247,214,000 tons in the United States; in pig iron, an increase of 7,095,000 tons, as against 15,263,454 tons in the United States, and in cotton, an increase of 518,676,000 pounds, as against 1,026,917,226 pounds in the United States.

PRESBYTERIANS COMING HERE.

International Alliance Convention on Fourth Calvin Sentenary.

The Rev. Dr. Robert H. Roberts, Secretary of the Alliance of Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, announced in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday the coming international convention of the Alliance to be held in this city in June, 1909. He said that at the last convention held in June in Liverpool, England, a committee headed by the Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay of this city tendered an invitation from the New York Presbytery to hold the convention here. The invitation was unanimously accepted.

A committee composed of Dr. Mackay, the Rev. J. Ross Stevenson of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. William R. Richards of the Brick Presbyterian Church has been appointed to complete arrangements for the convention.

"The year set for the convention," said Dr. Roberts, "will be appropriate in that it will be the fourth centennial of John Calvin. It will also be the tri-centennial of the discovery of the Hudson River. Thirty-five thousand congregations will be represented in the convention, and delegates will come from as far as New Zealand.

"The object of the alliance is more fraternal than union, but it brings the various branches of the Presbyterian Church in closer touch, and may in the end result in uniting them."

Lost His Place, Ended His Life.

Justus Schmuits, fifty years old, for many years a telegraph operator in the Western Union Building, at 195 Broadway, committed suicide yesterday by turning on the gas in a room in the Lackawanna Hotel, at West and Vesey Streets. Schmuits recently lost his place. He expected to get another place, as porter in a hotel, but when he telephoned to the hotel yesterday he was told that it was too late.

Heavy Men for Harvard Team.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Harvard's football management announced to-day that Barry, the 275-pound centre of the Roxbury Latin School, would make his first appearance on Soldiers' Field to-morrow afternoon. Barry was one of the best centre rushes in the vicinity of Boston last year, and he will be a great addition to the Crimson squad, especially as there has been a woeful lack of line-centre material so far this year. Another freshman giant who is expected to-day is Parker, centre of the Milton Academy eleven last year. Parker stands 6 feet 2 inches in height, weights 215 pounds, and is very strong. He was the terror of all the school teams about here last Fall, and through his efforts mainly Milton won the championship of the inter-preparatory School League. Don Nichols of New York, the right half back of last season's team, is also expected to come out to-day.

M. Albert Clement Arrives Here.

Among the passengers on La Bretagne, which arrived from Havre yesterday, was M. Albert Clement, son of the famous automobile manufacturer of France. M. Clement will take part in the races for the Vanderbilt Cup on Long Island on Oct 8, and has brought with him a ninety-horse power Clement machine, which took the third prize in the Ardenne circuit races in France, and a lighter car.

Outdoor Meet for Irish Athletes.

Under the auspices of the newly formed Irish Counties Athletic Union, which promises to be an important factor for the betterment of Gaelic sport in this country, a series of track and field games and Gaelic football will be decided in Celtic Park Oct. 9.

The athletic events, all handicaps, include running races at 100 yards, half a mile, and a one-mile relay race, and a running long jump and hop, step, and jump.

In the football series the draw for the first round of the inter-counties championship is Sligo versus Galway, Cork versus Tipperary, Westmeath versus Monaghan, and Kilkenny versus Kerry.

Polo at Van Cortlandt This Week.

With the big grand stand adjoining the polo field at Van Cortlandt Park open to the public, the three days of tournament play there this week should attract large crowds. The popularity of polo at Van Cortlandt has been growing rapidly for the last two years, and now, whenever a match game is in progress, the number of spectators lining the bank west of the field usually mounts up into the thousands.

In the Squadron A tournament there will be two events for the Squadron Cups. The first match will be played to-morrow, the game beginning at 3:30 o'clock. The Squadron A first team will line up against the Great Neck team. The Squadron A team will be J. H. Hunt, R. G. D. Douglas, L. J. Hunt, and H. M. Earle, while the Great Neck team will present J. P. Grace, W. R. Grace, Morgan Grace, and J. Insley Blair. On Thursday the final game will be played, the winning team in to-morrow's game meeting the Rumson team, which will be made up of W. S. Jones, J. A. Rawlings, R. J. Collier, and H. S. Borden. The tournament will close on Saturday with the match that was to have been played last Saturday for the Van Cortlandt Cups, the teams being Squadron A second and New Haven. The visitors will be J. C. Rathborne, W. L. Goodwin, L. E. Stoddard, and J. Watson Webb. The Squadron team will be J. H. Hunt, L. Nellson, L. J. Hunt, and R. G. D. Douglas.

SPECIAL FALL SALE of PIANOS

Taken in Exchange for the Pianola Piano

Also Slightly Used PIANOLAS

FOR the first time in the history of the piano business, pianos which were entirely satisfactory have been exchanged by their owners. These exchanges have been made for the Pianola Piano, "The First Complete Piano" (a perfect piano containing a Metrostyle Pianola within its case).

These exchanged pianos afford a splendid opportunity for those who wish to buy a piano but are not yet ready to purchase the Pianola Piano—the piano of the future.

Grands and Uprights of Leading Makes at Prices that Will Surprise Those Who Are Judges of Quality.

This collection of pianos stands alone and unique among all similar offerings. Persons who had supposed they would never be content with anything short of an absolutely new piano have changed their minds after inspecting this collection. There are several reasons causing owners to part with instruments so entirely satisfactory:

1. The desire to replace a piano which they were unable to play with a piano which every member of the family could play.
2. Persons who were about to purchase a Pianola decided that they would prefer an instrument combining Pianola and piano in a single case, thus economizing room.
3. The motive which prompts a large class of persons who can afford it, always to own the latest and best article of its kind.

As a result of these and other reasons, we are able to place on sale exchanged pianos from some of New York's best homes, showing hardly any signs of use and bearing the names of the best manufacturers in the country.

Among the most attractive opportunities of this sale we instance the following makes:

Weber, Steinway, Chickering, Steck, Wheelock, Sohmer, etc.

Both Uprights and Grands are included, prices ranging from $130 upwards.

Purchasable on most reasonable monthly payments, graded according to the cost of the instrument.

Second and Last Week of the Special Fall Sale of

EXCHANGED PIANOLAS

AT REDUCED PRICES

LOT I — $150 — $15.00 down, $7.00 per month

LOT II — $175 — $20.00 down, $8.00 per month

LOT III — $200 — $20.00 down, $10.00 per month

The difference in prices represented by these three lots is occasioned by the varying lengths of time the Pianolas have been in use. With each and every one, however, we give the same guarantee that we give with absolutely new instruments.

Some of these Pianolas are so close to being new that our own salesmen would be puzzled to distinguish them from instruments fresh from the factory. A few have only been used for demonstrating in our own warerooms or at Recitals. All have been repolished and put in perfect order.

These Pianolas have all been received in exchange for the new Metrostyle model, and not because there was the slightest deficiency in their playing qualities. This sale affords an opportunity to effect a substantial saving on "The Standard Piano-Player of the World."

Should you buy an instrument at this sale and decide within three months that you would prefer the complete Metrostyle Pianola, the full value of your purchase will be allowed in exchange.

PEACE DELEGATES HERE PRAISING ROOSEVELT

His Stand for New Conference Called Epoch-Making.

COMMENT OF A FRENCHMAN

Fitting That Successor of Washington Should Lead and Successors of Lafayette Aid Movement.

The delegates of the Interparliamentary Union, who on Saturday presented to President Roosevelt the resolution adopted at St. Louis, arrived in New York last night in two special trains from Washington over the Pennsylvania Railroad. The 200 delegates were enthusiastic over their reception by the President, and expressed the opinion that his promise to urge a second peace conference at The Hague would be productive of inestimable good to mankind.

Representative Bartholdt of St. Louis, the President of the union, who drafted the resolution, said that it hardly seemed possible to him that so much could have been accomplished in so short a time, and that he found it difficult to express his gratitude for what had happened.

"No one," he said, "can doubt the outcome of the President's action. The present war in the Orient has made all good people desire some way of preventing such horrible affairs. The President's call for this conference, followed by the ideas put forward there, will result in making it plain how great strides can be taken to decrease the danger of such conflicts.

"I do not say do away with war, but decrease the danger of the outbreak of war. The lawmakers of Europe were shocked by several hideous occurences during their short stay in the United States; but, despite these things, every one concedes that our governmental system reduces such occurrences to a minimum."

Mr. Bartholdt praised William Randal Cremer, who initiated the peace movement, and declared that his presence at the reception in Washington added greatly to the inspiration of the hour.

Mr. Cremer, speaking for himself, characterized the reception as "an epoch-making event."

"Individuals," he said, "may further impede the movement which has now become official, but no man or combination of men can arrest it."

A. George Cochery, ex-Secretary of the French Treasury and President of the French delegation, said:

"A century ago our countrymen fought with Washington to make the principles he stood for prevail in America. Then we fought in France to make them prevail in France. On Saturday at the tomb of Washington we bowed, with all Europe, before these principles. It is right that the successor of Washington should lead and the successors of Lafayette aid in making these principles prevail, and right that the representatives of all nations should join in causing all nations to adopt these principles for international intercourse; and there is no power that can prevent their ultimate adoption."

Count Albert Apponyi, Privy Counselor of Hungary and President of the Hungarian delegation, declared that the union's resolution calls for the application of the fundamental idea of democracy to international affairs. The peace movement, he said, was irresistible.

Vladimir Ritter von Gniewosz, Chamberlain of the Austrian Emperor and President of the Austrian group, said that the development of the form and power of international political organisms would be slow, but sure.

August Beckman, an author on political and economic questions and President of the Swedish delegation, maintained that the movement of the union marked the beginning of that "long period in which international jurisprudence will be developed by a system of international organization as national jurisprudence has been developed by a system of national political organization. Hereafter the true standard of greatness among nations will be estimated not by their territory or poulation, but by the ideas advocated."

Dr. Albert Gobat of Switzerland, General Secretary of the Interparliamentary Union, and Marquis San Giuliano, President of the Italian delegation, did not come to New York with the rest of the party, but will remain for a time in Washington. It was said that several of the foreign delegates would remain in this country in order to attend the fifteenth annual session of the Universal Peace Society in Boston next week. Most of them, however, will sail for Europe within the next few days.

To-day the National Civic Federation will tender a luncheon to twenty-three of the members, and to-night at the City Club Mayor McClellan will receive those who are still in the city.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The members of the Interparliamentary Union, who have been in Washington for several days, left to-day for New York. Dr. E. Delbert of Paris, one of the French group, has lost his letter of credit for 1,200f., his return ticket to France, and a sum of money. He discovered the loss as he was leaving a theatre last night.

SNEEZE BETRAYED HIM.

Jewelry Customer Pulled Out Handkerchief, Ring Came with It.

If Benjamin Hirshbeck had not sneezed he would not have been accused of stealing a diamond ring. He went into Tiffany & Co.'s store Saturday afternoon, and asked to see some rings. He looked at a number, and it is alleged that he liked one so well that he placed it in an inside pocket of his coat.

Pretty soon Hirshbeck had to sneeze. He just could not hold it back any longer, and when he pulled his handkerchief from an inside pocket, the clerk says, the ring dropped out. A detective was called in, and Hirshbeck was arrested.

In the Jefferson Market Court yesterday Hirshbeck said that some time ago he was sent to Blackwell's Island for drunkenness, and while there the doctors gave him morphine. This, he added, caused him to become a morphine fiend, and this in turn caused him to steal the ring. He was held for a further hearing to-morrow.

PLANTS POISONED CHILDREN.

Imitated Elders in Gathering Shrubs and Nibbled the Flowers.

Poisoned by a wild plant of which they ate while at play, two little children are lying in a critical condition in the Bradford Street Hospital. They are Annie Tuckman, five years old, and her sister Minnie, three years old, of 145 Christopher Street, East New York. The doctors say that the plant contained a virulent poison.

The two little girls went to the woods to imitate grown-up people, who were gathering shrubs to use in the decoration of their homes in honor of the Jewish holidays. They chewed the ends of some of the plants, and had just reached their home when Minnie was seized with convulsions. Annie was taken with a similar attack a few minutes later.

DR. PARKHURST ILL FROM COLD.

Unable to Preach at Madison Square Church Yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst was unable to leave the house yesterday, and the assistant pastor, the Rev. W. W. Coe, conducted the service at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Coe announced that Dr. Parkhurst was suffering from a severe cold. It was said after the service that there was no foundation for the report that Dr. Parkhurst was seriously ill, and that he merely had a bad cold. Mrs. Parkhurst was present at the morning service.

SOUTHERN SLEUTH HERE FOR FIREBUG PRISONER

Another Arrest After a Series of Incendiary Fires.

SETTING FIRES BECAME FAD

Many Buildings in Florence, S. C., Burned Because, It Is Said, Building Contractors Needed Work.

Detective Arthur P. Glover, from Florence, S. C., a tobacco centre of some 7,000 inhabitants, went down the bay here with two Central Office detectives yesterday and boarded the schooner Salisbury, just in from Port Royal. There he arrested a negro, Jim Brown, who is accused of having been concerned in at least one of a number of incendiary fires which have wiped out Florence warehouse and other property valued at $1,000,000.

According to Glover, there has been a "firebug epidemic" in Florence. Explanations for the fires are various. In one case, Glover says, a tobacco firm had a long lease on the warehouse; the crop turned out poor and the warehouse went up in smoke. In other cases, Glover says, the explanation was that the builders needed work, and that if a building were burned the builders would find more work right away. Among the buildings destroyed by the firebugs were the Tobacco Stemming Company's mills, the Peedee tobacco warehouse, the Dixie warehouse, and the Cottonseed Oil Company's mill.

The detective said that setting fires has almost become a fad in Florence. A negro and a policeman have already been arrested on suspicion at Florence, and the authorities have the name of another man whom they intend to arrest soon. The negro Brown is charged not only with a guilty part in one fire, but with felonious assault. All of the suspects, though, are regarded merely as tools of contracting builders.

Brown, according to Glover, was seen going to the Dixie warehouse just before the fire there started. Deputy Sheriff Howell and a posse were hidden inside. Brown was ordered to stand still, but did not. Some one shot at him as he ran, and the negro, it is said, returned the fire and hit a man.

Brown was traced to Wilmington, Del., Charleston, S. C., and Port Royal. There he shipped on the schooner Salisbury as steward.

NO PUSHCART STRIKE.

Peddlers Will Wait for Conference Arranged by Mayor.

There was a largely attended meeting of the Greater New York Peddlers' Association yesterday afternoon and evening at 63 Forsyth Street and many speeches were made to the effect that the peddlers were the victims of the trust that rents pushcarts. They were positive, they said, that "the trust" had obtained false licenses and that there are too many pushcart men in the business. The more radical proposed that they strike at once and leave the trust with carts and no one to push them.

President Swartz pointed out that the Mayor had appointed a commission to meet with a committee of the peddlers on Friday evening at the East Side Civic Club, and that the Mayor's committee would include such representative men as Magistrate Cornell, Police Commissioner McAdoo, Commissioner Woodbury, and Dr. Darlington. Their interests would certainly be protected and their wrongs righted. It was further urged that "the trust" might find men enough to push the carts while they and their families were starving. It was then voted not to strike to-day, but to wait for the results of the conference.

WILL TEST MONO-RAIL.

New York Capital Back of a Baltimore Inventor.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 25.—As the result of a conference here to-day of prominent men, including J. Coleman Drayton, John H. Ostrup, a noted engineer; A. Norvale, President of the Municipal Bond and Security Company; Henry A. Seymour, and George L. Upshur and S. G. Frosell of Philadelphia, it is said that the patent of E. L. Tunis of this city will be purchased by the American Mono-rail Company of New York, which will employ his model as the basis for the construction of a road.

A five-mile track and trolley poles for the testing of the mono-rail will be erected between Baltimore and a point on the Patapsco River within the next two months. An actual line, over 100 miles, carrying passengers and freight, will, it is said, be in active operation as soon as the necessary rails can be laid and the requisite cars constructed.

There are wealthy interests backing the scheme, and the proposed construction of the line will not be delayed by lack of funds.

SHOOTERS FREED IN COURT.

No Evidence of Harm from Duel in the Street.

Owing to the inability of the police to find any one who had been hit by the flying bullets or to find any evidence on which to hold them, Magistrate Mayo in the Tombs Court yesterday morning discharged Alphonse Littita of 141 Macdougal Street and James Deffasse of 214 Canal Street, who had engaged in a shooting fray in Harry Howard Square on Saturday morning and had been arrested for disorderly conduct.

At the time of the shooting several hundreds of people had gathered in front of the Criminal Courts Building, but although the shooting between the two men lasted for a few minutes, no one was hurt, and the bullets did no damage.

WELCOME ARMENIAN CHURCHMEN

Here with Plea for Better Conditions in Turkey.

St. Chrysostom's Chapel, at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, where the Armenians in this city hold their church services, was crowded yesterday afternoon at the service of the Armenian Apostolic, or National Church.

The Armenians were present to welcome Mgr. Sahak Ayvadian, Armenian Archbishop of Persia and India; Dr. Jean Louis Melikow, who represents the Armenians of the Caucasus, and Archbishop Horsep Sarajian of the Armenian Church in America, who are in America as delegates of the Supreme Patriarch of the Armenian Church to present a petition to the powers of the world asking them to use their good offices to improve the conditions of the Armenians in Turkey.

Women's Tailored Suits To-day at Thirty Dollars.

There is so much dash and beauty about these exceptionally jaunty Tailored Suits that they will unquestionably be sought with great eagerness.

In reality they are composite Suits, for they reflect with sprightly grace the best of the season's varied fashions. They embody the best points of the finest models, in other words.

For instance, they have the style sleeves of one model, the swagger vest of another, the collar effects and embellishments of another. And so on. Consequently you obtain a most harmonious and striking blending of fetching effects.

These Suits are Made of the Finest Broadcloths, in Black and Seasonable Shades of Blue and Brown.

There is a gracefully plaited Zouave effect over air-tight vested blouse of Couleur de Cuivre broadcloth; plaited tight-fitting back and postilion peplum; novelty full sleeves with gauntlet cuffs. Trimmings of peau de soie, han some embroidered braid and novelty brass buttons; lining of heavy taffeta; 19 gored side plaited skirt, "hanging full" style and with foot kilts.

Specially priced at..... $30.

Sale of High Grade Cigars from Trujillo & Company a Big Success.

Smokers who are accustomed to high grade cigars will need no introduction to the famous Trujillo & Company's output of Key West Clear Havana Cigars.

Saturday morning we placed on sale 100,000 very choice cigars from this celebrated factory. The demand was instantaneous and enormous, the results were most gratifying.

Values such as these are very unusual and it is only because we purchased the entire surplus stock of their Key West factory at a very low price that even we are able to announce a sale of this kind.

It is positive that high grade Key West (Cuban made) Clear Havana Cigars were never offered at a price within one-third of that we quote.

A glance at the following table of brands, sizes and prices will give you some idea of the importance of this event. The choosing to-day will be as good as it was Saturday, because of the immense quantity for sale.

A STATESMAN'S LETTER.

Judge PARKER'S statesmanlike, virile, and convincing letter of acceptance lifts the Democratic campaign once more to the high level of the gold-standard telegram, or very near it. The incident of the telegram, extraordinary and startling, was altogether unique. It could not be repeated and nothing like it could happen again in the canvass. If in the quiet days that followed Democrats have felt that the battle lagged and that their lines were being beaten back here and there by the impetuous onrush of the confident foe, their apprehension and the reaction that caused it were but natural. The letter of the candidate ends that phase of the campaign. It stirs, it moves, it inspires, it gives the needed forward impulse. If the Republicans, who are insolently exulting over a victory they feel to be assured, are not moved by it to re-examine the basis of their premature confidence we have erred in our judgment of its force and validity.

It is the letter of a strong man, a man confident of the rightness of his views and sure of his strength at every point. Yet Judge PARKER'S equipoise is diametrically the opposite of President ROOSEVELT'S loud, insistent, blustering arrogation of all wisdom and virtue. Judge PARKER is sure of himself because he is everywhere buttressed about by the Constitution, because he at all times takes for his guidance and support the will of the people. Mr. ROOSEVELT speaks as one who disdains all help, all counsel, and relies upon the sufficing resources of his own mind and will. It is in this aspect that Judge PARKER'S letter commands unqualified approval, and on rereading evokes new praise and admiration. It is a letter to be read not once but many times. The voter will be repaid.

Americans admire courage, and of courage there is an abundance in the letter. To the truculent challenge of President ROOSEVELT, daring the opposition to say authoritatively that they intend to revoke Pension Order No. 78, Judge PARKER calmly, firmly makes reply: "I accept the challenge and declare that if elected I will revoke that order." The President is answered. He is answered, too, upon the point that the issuing of the order was a usurpation of power. Judge PARKER declares that he should feel it necessary to invite the co-operation of Congress in establishing such a pension policy; Mr. ROOSEVELT did the whole thing himself. We mistake the temper of the American people if they do not feel instinctively that the feet of one of these men are in the paths of danger, the feet of the other in the way of safety. Again the President is answered tellingly in respect to the applicability of the common law in cases involving inter-State commerce. In his speech of acceptance Judge PARKER expressed the belief that adequate remedies against trust abuses were to be found in the statute and common law, to which Mr. ROOSEVELT with the jaunty air of one who catches an adversary tripping observed that there was no Federal common law. Of course, everybody knows that the individual States got the common law by inheritance from England, while the United States inherited nothing, having only such institutions and powers as were conferred by the States. Equipped with this elementary fact, and with little else, the President ventured into a discussion of the matter, and gets the information, conveyed with grave politeness, that the Supreme Court has decided that common law principles, in the absence of statutes covering the case, may be applied by Federal courts in inter-State commerce actions. The incident teaches that even though one can brandish the big stick like a Hercules, he should choose his adversary with great circumspection when he feels like having a dispute on law questions.

It is a genuine pleasure to read Judge PARKER'S sound, bold, and thoroughly Democratic observations on the tariff. The reform of the tariff "should be undertaken at once, in the interest of all the people." Here, at last, is an issue, a programme of action. The candidate omits nothing. The structural principles of the tariff reform argument are all there. The plundering of the consumer through the imposition of duties that force him to pay high prices for goods sold for lower prices abroad; the burden upon the manufacturer, whose cost of production is raised by senseless duties upon raw imported materials, thus diminishing his ability to find a foreign market for his surplus above the home demand; the need, pointed out by McKINLEY, of finding a broader market for our manufactures, now become a problem demanding "our urgent and immediate attention," and the gross bad faith of the Republican Party in enacting exorbitant duties under cover of the pretense that they were intended to serve as a basis for the negotiation of treaties of reciprocity which the Republican Senate has refused even to consider. Judge PARKER is fully justified in his belief that if the popular will is unmistakably expressed at the ballot box, the Republican Senate will not dare to defy and override it by resisting a revision of the Dingley tariff.

No part of this remarkable paper will engage the serious thought of the American people more deeply and generally than the paragraph treating of our foreign relations. We have lived for a century secure in our "splendid isolation." We are no longer isolated, we have assumed new responsibilities, and dangers once unthought of command us to take counsel of prudence. Not only have we acquired remote possessions, bringing us within the sphere of foreign interests and rivalries, but our recent attempts to invade foreign markets have excited the apprehension and the jealousy of powerful peoples. "It is essential, therefore," says Judge PARKER, "more than ever to adhere strictly to the traditional policy of the country as formulated by its first President, and never in my judgment wisely departed from, to invite friendly relations with all nations, while avoiding entangling alliances with any. Such a policy means the cultivation of peace instead of the glorification of war, and the minding of our own business in lieu of spectacular intermeddling with the affairs of other nations. It means strict observance of the principles of international law and condemns the doctrine that a great State by reason of its strength, may rightly appropriate the sovereignty or territory of a small State on account of its weakness."

That is the highest note of the letter, the culmination of its broad statesmanship. It is the note of prophetic vision, the foreseeing of peril, and the wise provision of sufficient remedies against it. But the whole document is of statesmanlike quality. Only a nation with a profligate's carelessness of the future, a nation already decadent, could fail to give heed to these words of magistral wisdom. Mr. ROOSEVELT may be the victor in this contest, though from this time on the current will run against him. But if he is elected, Judge PARKER'S letter ought to be the Bible of his faith, his daily guide and counselor throughout his term of office.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

President ROOSEVELT has seized a happy moment to announce his intention to invite a reconvening of The Hague Conference of 1899 in order to consider the plans then brought forward and to entertain other suggestions that may be made. The assembling of the Interparliamentary Union at St. Louis, the action of that body, the visit to the White House, the direct and urgent request to take this action serve to give timeliness to the announcement, while the action itself will, we think, command the approval of intelligent opinion in this and in other countries. Assuming, as we must, that preliminary discussion of an informal nature has insured us against rebuff, the invitation is clearly an effort in a desirable direction.

Probably Mr. ROOSEVELT and Mr. HAY entertain no illusions as to the limits of practical progress in this direction. If it be true, as stated by Congressman BARTHOLDT in presenting the delegation, that the reference of the Venezuela matter to The Hague Tribunal really saved that organization from fatal neglect and abandonment, it is also true that the result of such reference was deeply disappointing to the United States and to the friends of peaceful methods. It was an almost grotesque and wholly illogical outcome of a proceeding intended to foster peace and restrict war that the principle should be announced that claimants using force to collect their claims are entitled to precedence over those more moderate and pacific. The application of this principle, curiously inconsistent with the spirit in which the tribunal was created, to the first case of importance referred to it, was in effect an encouragement to violence. In a civil case before the domestic courts of any civilized State a complainant who should commit, or even threaten, assault and battery against a defendant would either lose his standing entirely or would be mulcted in damages as an offset to whatever was due to him under the contract in question. At The Hague Tribunal, in an analogous international case, it was held that assault and battery strengthened a claim, which must be paid out of the revenue of a possibly insolvent debtor before law-abiding, decently behaving creditors could get anything.

Nor must it be inferred because the United States Government, which suffers both in material interest and in its self-respect as a party to this proceeding, now proposes the extension of the work of The Hague Conference, in which The Hague Tribunal had its origin, that it is prepared to overlook such an absurd miscarriage. On the contrary, the reconvened conference may offer an opportunity to guard against the recurrence of such mishaps by more clearly defining the principles the tribunal shall observe in the future.

It will, of course, be suggested by the skeptical that it is inopportune to press the conference idea at a moment when the Czar of Russia, the original proponent, is engaged in a singularly needless war arising from resistance to pretentions of his which certainly would never have borne discussion. But it may be that this fact would give opportuneness to the movement, for it would, in a way, compel discussion, if not of that senseless war, at least of the principle it violates. If the Russian Government has been sounded on the subject, and will accede to the invitation of the United States Government to renew a project of its own initiation, its representative at The Hague would almost inevitably be led to discuss propositions tending at least toward peace. Nor is it impossible that the time might arrive, during the sessions of the conference, or during the consideration of the plan for reconvening it, when the way could be opened to negotiations for the cessation of hostilities. If Port Arthur falls and the Russian armies are withdrawn to Harbin, and if Japan, in substantial control of the province of Manchuria, pauses to fortify her possessions during the Winter months, there will be an interval in which the voice of reason may make itself heard.

In the meanwhile the course of the President in this matter, if it has been prudently entered on, as we do not doubt it has, must commend itself to all, and especially to those who have found occasion for apprehension in the arbitrary temper he has shown in certain international affairs. The evidence of that temper is, unfortunately, too plain to be ignored. But so far as the disposition exists, movements of this sort and the discussion he also proposes of general arbitration agreements cannot but tend to curb it, we may suspect that he does not purpose putting a bridle upon himself, but every formal recognition of the authority of public opinion must nevertheless have that effect. The operative force of all such movements lies in the fact that they help to make responsible officials stop and think. The President's most pronounced opponents will not deny that when he really does that his country is the safer for it.

DEVELOPMENT IN IRON AND STEEL.

The statistics of the iron and steel industry as compiled in the 1904 Directory of the American Iron and Steel Association will be found a little confusing if they are not considered in the light of the changes which are taking place in this trade. For example, within the last three years the blast furnace capacity of the United States has increased a little less than 3,000,000 tons—from 24,800,000 to 27,675,000, whereas in 1903 the pig-iron production was only about 18,009,000 tons. This would seem at first glance to indicate that there is a material excess of furnace capacity over the consumptive requirements of the country; but at the present time there are seventeen new blast furnaces building in different parts of the country, and during 1905 it is probable a good many more will be built. The explanation of this is not that money is being wasted in unproductive furnace plants, but that to effect only a small economy in fuel or labor it pays to build as many new and up-to-date furnaces as can make satisfactory arrangements for ore. Each of these new furnaces is likely to relegate to the scrap pile two of the "blast pots" which have been kept up in the expectation that periodic booms would permit them to be run profitably for longer or shorter periods at uncertain intervals. Hence furnace capacity, which includes every stack not actually dismantled, is apt to be misleading. Very few furnaces are now built which have not a good reason for being.

Of rolling mills and steel works there are now in the United States 572, with 15 building. The capacity of plants of this character has increased in three years from 23,200,000 tons to 26,000,000 tons. The most interesting feature of the steel development is the rapid increase in the number of open-hearth furnaces for the production of basic steel. Within the past three years the number of these has increased from 403 to 549; 25 are now building and 17 more are projected, from 8,300,000 to 11,300,000 tons, of which about 82 per cent. is basic. The crucible steel industry, while much smaller than the Bessemer or basic open hearth steel business, is also growing rapidly, its output having increased from 175,000 to 226,000 tons.

Those who cannot divest themselves of the impression that "the bottom has dropped out" of the iron business may study these figures with profit.

A NOVEL RUSSIAN.

It is by "the stairway of surprise," to borrow a phrase of EMERSON, that the foreign student of Russian affairs arrives at a conception of the real condition of that puzzling country. No contrast could be more striking than that between the late Russian Minister of the Interior, as he was known to the world, and his successor, Prince SVIATOPÓLK-MIRSKY, as he presents himself in his recent public utterances.

A student of "the needs and conditions of the people," experienced in three provinces; as much opposed to "ultra conservatism" as to "ultra radicalism"; a believer in the usefulness of the local representative bodies, the zemstvos, and in their development; earnestly desirous to give to the lower classes of Jews "larger opportunities for life and work"; friendly to the press; finally a believer in "conscience and decentralisation" as the "basic principles" of a policy which "if it were interpreted in a liberal spirit should give tranquillity, progress, and development to the interior of Russia."—this is the self-drawn portrait. It makes one rub his eyes and ask if he be dreaming. All friends of Russia and of humanity will profoundly wish that it be true and that the Prince may have all success in the pursuit of his lofty aims.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—A highly valuable—because highly amusing—contribution to what used to be the malaria-mosquito controversy has been made in The Scientific American by one R. N. BURNS of Great Falls, Mon. Living where he does, Mr. BURNS is almost or quite excusable for arriving on this battlefield something like a year after all sounds of conflict ceased with a conclusive victory for the side against which he would have fought had he come betimes, but he has insisted on making his little charge, nevertheless, and it must be admitted that he shows fully as much heroism as did any of the vanished army of doubters and deniers. His weapon is a spear of sharpest logic. The mosquito explanation of malaria, he says and nobody on earth can contradict him—rests upon the contention that every human victim owes this malady, if he has it, to the bite of a mosquito that some days before had bitten another human victim of the malady who had been bitten by another infected mosquito; and so on back to a beginning of things that must have antedated malaria. This, according to Mr. BURNS, brings the mosquito-malaria theory—he still thinks it a theory, observe—into violent collision with a terminal impossibility of the most absurd sort and shatters it into pieces so small that burial would not be worth while. He's right—it does—admitting, that is, as most folks would, that every such series of alternating causes and effects must have had a beginning somewhere and sometime. The only trouble—for Mr. BURNS—with his argument is the extensiveness of its application, and its success, when applied as he applies it, as a destroyer of beliefs which even he, we are sure, is not prepared to abandon. Take, for instance, hens. He would confess that every hen he knows or has heard about was preceded by an egg, and that egg, in turn, by a hen, and he wouldn't worry a bit about the origin of the first of either; certainly he wouldn't question the accepted notion as to the present invariable relation between hens and eggs. But he does it in the case of malaria mosquitos—insists on knowing how the first mosquito who carried malaria to a human being got the malaria to carry, if, as contended, she could only get it from a human being who had already been bitten by an infected mosquito. Moreover, hearing no reply to his impassioned question, Mr. BURNS triumphantly declares that he and all of us are thrown back to the old ideas of bad air, stagnant water disturbed soil, and "fomites." Poor, dear Mr. BURNS! hapless victim of logic, of which a little is probably more dangercus than the same quantity of any other kind of learning! Why, oh, why, is it that he and so many others, living in a world where absolutely no demonstrable beginnings of things are or ever seem likely to be discoverable, will insist on assuming, as the starting point of every argument, that everything had a beginning?

—Having often in mind, thanks to our foreign critics, the charge that with Americans the dollar outbalances everything else, it is not unnatural that we have noted with some care the way in which our newspaper neighbors "handled" the dispatches about the accident to the train which bore into equal peril a distinguished financier and a distinguished ecclesiastic? The injury or death of either would have been a matter of much moment in their respective fields, and this fact was, of course, instantly appreciated by the men who wrote the "stories" of the incident and by the others who put headlines over the accounts and otherwise prepared them for publication. The opportunity was presented, therefore, for showing in a fairly conclusive manner whether or not it is a fact that with us—the press being more or less representative of the country—money is first and other things far behind. So far as our observations have extended, the "feature" of this case, as presented in the newspapers, was the presence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, while that of the Wall Street notability was brought in with a subordinating "also." To be sure, this was not always the order of precedence, but the exceptions are almost rare—especially in the morning papers. For reasons which are hard to guess, the afternoon papers, considerably more often than the others, saw first the danger of the financier and exclaimed at it more than at that of his reverend guest. So far, therefore, as the newspaper treatment of the accident proves anything, it proves that, at least in public expression, Americans ascribe importance to other things than money and can manifest interest in the other things even when the pecuniary welfare of many thousands is very seriously involved. The exact extent of the proof we would not like to decide.

—In bequeathing his brain for coldly scientific examination by the Cornell physiologists, Dr. GEORGE S. CONANT of this city set an example that is not likely soon to have much imitation. Nobody who can—and will—reason on a subject of this sort will think of denying that the action was based on sound sense united with a self-forgetting desire to increase the available supply of a kind of knowledge extremely valuable to the human race, but the thought of "dissection" in general is still strongly repugnant to the vast majority of human beings, and few indeed of us can confront without a shrinking horror that of going ourselves through any part of the process which instinct and tradition has caused to seem so sinister and frightful. Yet the old feelings are dying out, very slowly, but still appreciably, and doing it, too, despite the present tendency to ascribe to the living body a much greater importance, and to give it much greater respect, than it received in the days when any post-mortem investigation of its mysteries, no matter how commendable the motives, was a crime visited, when detected, with the severest penalties. Nowadays it is probable that only consideration for the feelings of surviving relatives prevents a considerable number of men and a few women from doing what Dr. CONANT did—that is, from serving their kind, even after death, to such extent as is within their power. It is a service most cheaply and easily rendered, when viewed apart from the complexities of life, but such viewing is enormously difficult in all ordinary cases. As it becomes easier the physiologists will secure more of the "material" most valuable to them and now hardest to get. So will their labors be lightened, or rather be made more productive, and problem after problem that now puzzles them will be solved. Those who feel themselves least capable of following the example of men like Dr. CONANT should be the first to recognize the generosity and wisdom of his course.

—Southern "feuds" have originated in many ways and often from trifles amusingly small, but quite without precedent, probably, is the one which has started in a mountain village of North Carolina over a lecture delivered in Ohio by a young woman who has been trying to improve the condition of the mountaineers. To the young woman herself or her activities as a teacher and missionary nobody seems to have made any objections; indeed, she seems to have been popular; but when she tried at her home to raise money for her school by describing conditions, social and other, in the mountains, her statements, accurately or inaccurately reported, drifted back to their subjects, and fierce war resulted. Some took sides with the teacher and others against her, and the ever-convenient guns began to pop. The list of dead and injured is already long, and doubtless the young woman's hasty flight will be far from ending the quarrel. It seems a pity, particularly as killings so caused do little toward proving that what the young woman said about mountain barbarism was false or exaggerated.

THE EMBATTLED MISSIONARY.

Dubious Ethics of Spreading Christianity with Bayonets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest and pleasure your editorial entitled "The Embattled Missionary." I think it contains a good deal of truth and not a little political wisdom. It also states some facts connected with our attempts to spread a knowledge of Christianity in Oriental lands which it would be well for the churches engaged in missionary enterprises to heed and ponder. When any sect, in its zeal for the prosecution of its peculiar form of the Christian religion, provokes the antagonism and creates a mistrust of its avowed objects in the minds of the rulers of a country in which it is operating it cannot, to my thinking, accomplish any good, but on the contrary it may do serious harm. Lying at the very foundation of any national civilization there must be, before anything else, a firm degree of order, and a proper respect for the authority of the Government, otherwise there can be no comfort in its social organism, and no enlightenment among its citizens. Better the tyranny of monarchical Russia or Turkey than the anarchy of the Nihilists.

Genuine Christianity to my mind can never be spread by abetting armed revolution and intensifying racial hatred. On the contrary, if it fails to exert its power to soften sectional and religious antagonisms it is false to its true mission. I am, of course, not aware of the true state of affairs respecting the American missions in Turkey. All I know I glean from the newspapers, and they naturally reflect the prejudices and politics of their correspondents. But it is quite apparent that whatever may have been the teaching and actions of the American schools and colleges and churches in that country they have been of such a nature as to provoke the hostility and suspicion of the Turkish Government. As you well say in your editorial, if they were left to themselves the rulers of Turkey would "drive the missionaries out altogether."

I do not think such a feeling could have been created without grave cause, for it is only natural that the American propagandists should sympathize with the Armenians, who are nominal Christians, in their struggles against the Turks, who are devout Mohammedans, and consequently the vilest of heretics in their eyes.

Some people, I know, think that civilization can be promoted by the sword. That, in fact, it is incumbent on those nations possessed of superior wisdom and strength to hold in subjection weaker and less advanced races, having in view their elevation to a higher moral and intellectual level. This, I am inclined to think, is a fatal mistake. The end cannot rise above the level of the means used in its prosecution, whatever may be our ultimate design. If we sow brutality we cannot reap spirituality. The more militant an age is, to my mind, the less civilized it becomes. The more warlike a people, the more barbarous they are.

But whatever may be our views respecting the possibility of spreading higher political views and surface education among backward people, and establishing liberal systems of government by means of long range artillery and armored battleships, there can be to my mind no possibility whatever of spreading a knowledge of true Christianity by any such brutal methods. For they are in distinct opposition to the fundamental principles of the Christian faith and the system of ethics which its Divine founder lived to illustrate and died to consecrate. The only weapons which are of any avail in promoting a genuine knowledge of the religion of the cross are those spoken of by Saint Paul in one of the loftiest passages in his Epistles; viz., the sword of the spirit, the whole armor of righteousness, the redeeming force and fire of love, and purity, of brotherly kindness, and heroic self-sacrifice. These are forces which leave no trail of blood and broken hearts and desolated hearths in their rear; no sound of weeping women and curses of mutilated men struck down in the prime of their manhood by the bullets of foemen against whom they had no antipathy.

When, therefore, any body of men calling themselves ministers of Jesus Christ call upon their Government to support their establishments in pagan lands by bayonets and battleships I at once begin to question the genuineness of their faith. They may be learned in the philosophy of the schools, and wise in the ways of the world, but in my opinion they are altogether blind to the spiritual teachings of the Saviour of mankind. They turn the religion they profess to teach into contempt, and make a mockery of the Divine wisdom they pretend to adore! I question if the morality of the pagan people they profess to be anxious to convert to Christianity is on so low a level, and marked by so strange an inconsistency, as their own, while to them may be truly applied the saying of Jesus, "First take the beam out of thine own eye, and then thou canst see clearly to take out the moat which is in thy neighbor's." RIVERSIDE SMOKE NUISANCE.

What West End Association Is Doing to Abate It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "A Lover of the West Side," in your to-day's issue, writing as to smoke nuisance on Riverside, asks: "Where are the West Side Association and the State Board of Health?"

As an active member of the West End Association, to which I think the writer refers, I would say for the gentleman's information that this matter of the smoke, acrid fumes, and blasting nuisance on the Jersey shore has been before our association for over a year, and our special committees have now brought the matter into the courts in New Jersey through the helpful co-operation of an aggrieved Jerseyman, and while many difficulties still hamper our progress toward obtaining sorely needed relief to our much-oppressed and disgusted residents on the Riverside, the prospects are fairly good for our obtaining a fair decision in the premises.

If your correspondent will take the trouble to call on our worthy Secretary, Mr. Sheppard, at 100 Broadway, and inquire as to the present status of this controversy, I feel assured he will learn much of importance and value and come away well assured of the useful work being accomplished by the West End Association.

First Suggested Judge Herrick.

From The Cooperstown Freeman's Journal.

The name of Hon. D Cady Herrick as the Democratic candidate for Governor was first suggested by the former editor of this paper, S. M. Shaw, who about three weeks ago wrote Judge Parker, Senator Hill, Judge Herrick, and Walter H. Bunn on the subject. Senator Hill replied that the suggestion of Mr. Shaw would be laid before the Democratic leaders at their gathering in New York. The acquaintance of Judge Herrick and Mr. Shaw dates back to the time when the Judge was a scholar in the old Cooperstown Seminary.

NOT SOCIAL EQUALS.

No Inconsistency in Kentuckians' Presence at Negro Fair.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am much surprised to see in the TIMES—usually so just—a criticism of the city and county officials of Lexington, Ky., who attended the carnival of the Colored Fair Association. The point of THE TIMES'S criticism is a charge of inconsistency. It is argued that "the magnates of Lexington" should, therefore, invite their black friends home to luncheon, or to dinner, and consider such invitations proper. The article closes with a question—"but why not?"

I can tell you why not. Public functions differ from private functions. A "Northerner," even a bachelor editor who dwells in hotels, and calls it home where he keeps his bootjack, might see a distinction between meeting people in public and inviting them to one's home. If not, take my word for the fact that this distinction exists for those who have homes and family circles. It has always been the custom of Kentuckians to encourage the festivities of the colored people. At weddings, "baptizings," Christmas festivals, and all the functions that fill the negroes with pride, it has never been unusual to see white friends, kindly and interested, more or less amused, and assisting substantially in the finances.

This was never understood on either side as social equality, but as the kindness of the superior to the inferior; in a word, the feudal relation. We might visit our old nurses in their homes, sit down and talk with them, write to them, but we did not—nor did they—ever think of invitations to dinner. It is these outré and cruel ideas that bring discord into the relations between white and black. If the negro is taught by certain Northerners to demand social equality, we shall be less able to extend kindness to them, for we, too, are free.

TO INSURE PURER WATER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Aug. 14, 1903, in a letter by me and published in The New York Commercial as a comment on the slight agitation by that paper in reference to the pollution of river water, &c., I stated some means for the further avoidance of the same, and now take occasion again, the opportunity for which presents itself in your clear editorial in this morning's issue on the subject of "Final Disposition."

Your summing up, by saying, "It is a matter deserving the serious attention of the heads of Government," hits the point. The secret lies in what the writer has long advocated and which can easily be carried out.

1. All articles or particles of articles of an inflammatory nature, such as wood, paper, rags, that cannot be put to commercial use again should be burned in all households.

2. All ware made of glass and metals of every description should be collected minutely and melted.

3. Garbage and refuse of that character should be incinerated.

Households or establishments that will not or can not dispose of matter mentioned in above Paragraph 1, and all such matter left by the individual for the city to look after: The city as well as all communities should erect furnaces at convenient points, and for articles under Paragraph 3 erect incinerating plants.

If conditions were as they have been and are as they now appear, what will they be when this civilization gets much older?

One can find on the highways and in almost all vacant lots, as well as in virgin streams, all manner of refuse which should have no place there or anywhere else.

This absolute and necessarily urgent matter, if intelligently managed, would be the means of cleansing and purifying the face of the earth.

"PURGATION BY FIRE."

St. Loe Strachey Defines the Unionist Free Trade Tactics.

From The London Chronicle.

The editor of The Spectator (Mr. J. St. Loe Strachey) contributes to the August number of The Nineteenth Century an article in which he defines the position of Unionist Free Traders in relation to the present political situation. By Unionist Free Traders Mr. Strachey means Conservatives and Liberal Unionists who intend to remain Unionists as well as Free Traders, for they are opposed equally to home rule and to protection.

Unionist Free Traders are, he says, determined to organize themselves on a strictly Unionist basis. They "mean to keep themselves separate from the party of their late opponents, the Liberals, in order that when Mr. Chamberlain's policy has been defeated, as it inevitably will be, at the next general election, they may be ready to help reconstitute the Unionist Party on a free trade basis."

Mr. Strachey argues that "it is admitted by all who think clearly and speak honestly that home rule is not before the country." He does not believe that the Liberal leaders can be expcted to stand in a white sheet and openly abandon home rule, but holds it to be clear that "they have no wish whatever to put it before the cause of free trade, or to force any one to choose between the Union and free trade."

Unionist Free Traders mean to make their free trade views effective by voting for free trade candidates irrespective of party. "They mean, that is, to give the coup de grace to protection." Mr. Strachey is of opinion that if the overthrow of both Chamberlainism and Balfourism is as overwhelming as the Unionist Free Traders can make it, an immense number of Conservatives and Liberal Unionists now under the glamour of Mr. Chamberlain's policy will be thoroughly disillusioned. When the glamour of a promised victory has departed they will find it by no means difficult to throw over the Chamberlain policy, and "will long to return to saner and safer views."

The sum and substance of it is that Unionist Free Traders must work to insure a crushing victory for free trade. "Only after it has been purged in the fires of a general election can the Unionist Party be reunited."

HIS FORTUNE.

From The Somerville (Mass.) Journal.

I used to wish I might be rich,
With all the joys that riches bring;
I thought if wealth were only mine
I should not lack for anything.
I saw myself a billionaire,
With all alert at my command,
Eager at once to do my will,
If I but waved my hand.

I am not rich in stocks and bonds,
Those dreams have never been fulfilled,
Yet greater happiness than mine
No human being ever thrilled.
I would not change my lot to-day
With any one I ever knew,
Yes, rich am I beyond my dreams,
Because, dear, I have you!

REV. FARLEY'S PLAN TO REVIVE GREGORIAN MUSIC

Boy Choirs to Replace Soprano and Contralto Singers.

POPE'S WISHES CARRIED OUT.

Commission's Report Now the Law in New York Parishes—Establishment of Conservatory of Music Urged.

The commission appointed by Archbishop Farley, in response to the wishes of Pope Pius X., to take steps to eradicate abuses which have crept into the musical part of the liturgical functions of the Roman Catholic Church, made public its report yesterday, which was read in all the churches of the New York Diocese, where hereafter it will constitute the law relating to such functions.

The duty of carrying out the views of the Pontiff was intrusted to a commission of clergymen and laymen appointed by the Archbishop on his return recently from a visit to Rome, which comprises the following members: The Rev. James H. McGean, rector of St. Peter's Church; the Rev. James F. Driscoll, rector of St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie; the Rev. Anthony Lammel, rector of St. Joseph's Church; the Rev. John A. Kellner, rector of St. Gabriel's Church, New Rochelle; Prof. Joseph Bruneau, Dunwoodie; the Rev. John J. Hughes, Church of St. Paul the Apostle; the Rev. John B. Young, Church of St. Francis Xavier; James Ungerer, organist, St. Patrick's Cathedral; Edmund G. Hurley, organist, Church of St. Paul the Apostle; Bernard E. Johnston, organist, Church of Immaculate Conception, Yonkers, and the Rev. Dr. John J. Kean, rector of the Church of the Holy Name.

"It is evident from careful study of the instructions of the Holy Father," says the commission, "that

(1) He requires the Gregorian music to be restored in every church to its highest place of honor during the liturgical services, and that especially the proper of the mass and the antiphons, &c., of the vespers be rendered according to the same.

(2) That in the ordinary or common of the mass, and for the psalms of vespers, while the Gregorian is to be preferred, the Palestrinian, or even the modern style of music may be used, provided the latter be strictly religious and ecclesiastical in character and the music correspond with the words of the liturgical text without omissions, inversions, or vain repetitions.

(3) That the music be such as not to attract too much to itself the attention of the hearers, so as to become a source of distraction from the divine service to which it must be entirely subservient as an aid to devotion.

(4) That boy choirs take the place of soprano and contralto singers in our churches. "Whenever it is desired to employ the voices of soprano and contralto, these parts must be taken by boys, according to the most ancient usages of the church."

The following are declared to be abuses to be eliminated wherever found:

1. The singing of pieces in a language other than Latin during a liturgical function; for example, during high mass and vespers, and between the requiem mass and the absolution.

2. Adaptations of Latin words to songs, arias, or concerted pieces borrowed from operas or other secular sources.

3. The use of masses in which the Kyrie, Gloria, &c., are divided into separate complete movements not necessarily having musical connection with one another, or in which are interspersed long organ preludes or interludes.

4. The use of compositions in which the words are transposed, omitted, or unduly repeated, and in which rests are interpolated between syllables of a word.

5. The use of a music whose style in either the vocal part or the accompaniment is suggestive of the concert or the theatre.

6. The vesper psalms composed "di concerto," that is, in several complete and independent movements.

7. The use of those settings of the "Tantum Ergo" in which the first verse and the second are in contrast; for example, the one to slow, the other to quick movement.

8. The accompaniment of the organ to the preface, the Pater Noster, Ite missa est, during high mass.

9. Long interludes or intermezzos, especially of a profane character.

10. The omission of any part prescribed to be sung at high mass or vespers. Hence the proper is to be sung in Gregorian chant or else recited recto tono by one or several voices until the choir is trained to sing it correctly. Where the proper vespers cannot be sung because of the inability of the choir, the complete liturgical vespers of the Holy Name or the Blessed Virgin should be given. The psalms are generally to be sung in Gregorian chant, but the modern music may be employed if composed after the manner of psalmody, that is, one side responding to the other. If time permit, a motet appropriate to the day or feast may be sung after the proper offertory has been rendered in Gregorian.

11. The spirit of the Church and the very nature of things forbid that persons who do not believe with us be members of the ecclesiastical choir. The incongruity of an unbeliever in Christianity singing "Credo in Jesum Christum" is obvious; the contradiction implied in having those who believe not in the real presence singing the "Tantum Ergo" is self-evident. Furthermore, even professing Catholics whose lives are in conflict with their belief should be excluded; for, in the words of the Holy Father, "only those are to be admitted to form part of the choir of the Church who are of known piety and probity of life, and by their modest and devout bearing, during the liturgical functions, show that they are worthy of the holy office they exercise."

12. "It is strictly forbidden to have bands play in church, and only in a special case and with the consent of the ordinary will it be permissible to admit a number of wind instruments, limited, well selected, and proportioned to the size of the place—provided the composition and the accompaniment to be executed be written in a grave and suitable style, and similar to that proper to the organ."

The commission recommends that a catalogue of the modern masses and motets be prepared, that music be taught systematically in all Catholic schools, that organists and choir directors take courses of lessons in the Gregorian chant, and that, if possible, a conservatory for church music be organized under diocesan control.

Referring to the commission's report, Archbishop Farley, after declaring that it shall form for the Diocese of New York the law pertaining to music at all liturgical functions, says:

"To some persons a few of its provisions may appear difficult of observance; if temporary exemption in particular cases be requested, the reasons presented will receive my careful consideration, and a special dispensation, where deemed necessary, will be granted until such time as these regulations can be complied with.

"The quality of the music in our services will not suffer by the exclusion of certain compositions so long in favor with many to the detriment of devotion."

FARLEY DEDICATES CHAPEL.

Archbishop Consecrates Home of St. Matthew's Parish.

Archbishop Farley dedicated yesterday the little chapel of St. Matthew in West Sixty-seventh Street, near Amsterdam Avenue. The parish is an offshoot of the parish of the Blessed Sacrament, of which the Rev. Father Taylor is the pastor.

The dedication and consecration exercises were very simple. Archbishop Farley, assisted by his secretary, the Rev. Father Lewis, and the Rev. Father John J. Hughes of the Paulist Fathers, went about the church sprinkling it with holy water and pronouncing the Papal blessing. Every section of the church was gone over, and then the ground on which the church was built was blessed. An address by the Archbishop to the congregation followed.

WASHINGTON WATER ROW.

Federal Germ Sleuths Waging War on Health Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The summary way in which the health authorities of Washington rejected the offer of the bacteriologists of the Department of Agriculture to purify the water supply of the city from typhoid infection has led to an interesting scientific duel. The bacteriologists are keeping tab on the health office in its efforts to protect the children in the public schools from typhoid fever.

A system of boiling the water in all the schools for drinking purposes has been adopted, and the Government scientists have pounced on the boilers used and declare that they are quite as deadly as the typhoid gems that the health officers are trying to circumvent. Thus far no serious consequences have followed the use of the boiled water, but the schools have been open only one week, and it is hardly time for the ordinary school boy or girl to have taken enough poison into the system to show the symptoms of lead poisoning.

The Government germ sleuths have obtained two of the wash boilers that have been in use in the schools to prepare drinking water, and have begun an experiment on lead poisoning from water boiling. The contents will be analyzed to determine the amount of arsenic dissolved out from the solder, and a calculation made to show how long the average human being could drink such water before being poisoned.

CHARLES WAGNER TALKS OF GOD IN NATURE

French Evangelist Speaks Twelve Times in Philadelphia Church.

OVERFLOW MEETINGS HELD

Author of "The Simple Life" Says Every Man Can Carry Night or Light to His Fellows.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25. — Charles Wagner, the French evangelist and author of "The Simple Life," found his first Sunday in this city a busy one. He spoke at Bethany Presbyterian Church to leaders, Sunday school, Bible Union, Brotherhood, or congregation no fewer than twelve times.

At every service the attendance was larger than usual because of Mr. Wagner's presence, but it was especially large at the one in the morning, beginning at 10:30. Not more than half of those who sought admission could be accommodated in the church auditorium, and an overflow meeting of 1,800 persons was held in the Sunday School Hall. At each Mr. Wagner delivered a discourse, the subject and its treatment being substantially identical.

It was the thirty-ninth anniversary of the admission of Bethany into the Presbytery, and the Rev. Dr. William Patterson, the chief pastor, was present for the first time since his Summer vacation, which followed a severe illness. John Wanamaker, who took active charge of all that pertained to the special features of the day, introduced Mr. Wagner, speaking of him as the man who believes that the real thing is larger and finer, more full of happiness, than any other thing on earth.

"I am shaking hands with Pastor Wagner," he concluded. "May I do it for you? May I?"

The congregation responded with a hearty affirmative, and Mr. Wagner exclaimed in loud tones: "I shake hands with all of you in the person of Mr. Wanamaker," nodding and smiling in the direction of the audience.

They Mr. Wagner stepped to the desk and began his discourse, saying, in part:

"The ancients were wise in seeking God in nature. Every one who has a heart for beauty, for majesty, for grandeur, must fall on his knees under that blue sky, before that immense sea, before the mighty storms that rage, with thunder and with lightning, over and around us. Every man must find behind that exterior of nature the grand unknown Creator, who has made all that is. But there is an old fight, an old struggle between the human heart and nature.

"He who has no eyes for the blue sky and the roseate morn and who has no love for nature is dead. But man has always been seeking to penetrate more deeply the meaning of nature, and against exterior nature he has had a mighty battle. Nature has been to him as a dark wall, through which he has striven to discern the something beyond.

"If you love the sky, it will come down to you. That it should come down to us has been the old prayer, the old cry of the human soul. It has been heard, and God has come down to us. In Christ, God has been translated into human language; in the conscience and soul of that Fellow Man all that is most precious, all that is worthy to be worshipped by us, has been brought near to us—in our practical life, in our prayer, in our suffering, in our death.

"There is a double revelation in the world in which we live. There is a revelation of shadow, of night, of destruction, of badness, and of hatred, and there is a revelation of light, of right, of happiness, of hope, and of love.

"You can be the messenger of light or the messenger of death. You can be the messenger of the rebellion against the Word of God if you have no love in your heart. Language is nothing without love, without deeds. You can be the messenger of despair, of discouragement, of grief, of sadness for your fellow-men. And in this world there are too many messengers of night.

"Be warned. Put into your hearts this fact—that you can be the messenger of light for your fellow-men, and take care.

"But now let me tell you some more beautiful and hopeful truth. You can be a messenger of light. If you have watched the sun rise you have seen that you were at first in darkness and everything about you was veiled; the tops of the hills and the mountains were in shadow. Then slowly the first light began to appear and to spread out, and then by and by came the sun, the rising sun, gliding the skies with crimson and gold and every leaf and every tree and every church steeple and the tops of the hills and of the mountains shared in the glory of the sun, and became as it were houses of light, reflecting light upon all around them.

"You can, if your heart is standing in the light of God—you can become a light for those whose lives are in darkness, and, seeing you, they will have seen the Father smiling upon them and encouraging them."

After the sermon Pastor Wagner held a reception and more than 100 women and men thanked him to refute his autograph. He will leave for Washington to-morrow to be the guest of the President.

IRISH FINANCIAL COUNCIL.

Reform Association Plan for Administration of Ireland's Affairs.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The report of the Committee on Organization of the Irish Reform Association, which was adopted at a meeting presided over by Lord Dunraven at Dublin on Friday, was issued to-night.

The report outlines an important scheme for the devolution of Irish government in finance and local business. It suggests the constitution of an Irish financial Council composed of twenty-four members under the Presidency of the Lord Lieutenant, and with the Chief Secretary for Ireland as Vice President; twelve members to be elected by groups of existing Parliamentary constituencies and twelve to be nominated by the Crown; one-third of the members to retire every three years.

The functions of the Council will be to administer the $30,000,000 expended annually on Irish services, Parliament, however, retaining a controlling power, enabling the House of Commons to reverse the Council's decisions.

The report further suggests that a statutory body should be created, consisting of Irish representative peers and Irish members of the House of Commons, in addition to the proposed financial Council, and to which should be delegated all private bill legislation affecting Ireland and any other Irish business that might be referred to it by Parliament.

The report concludes with suggesting the submission of its proposals to a royal commission.

LUNA PARK'S SEASON ENDS.

Its Bands of Music Serenade Other Coney Island Resorts.

At 11 o'clock last night Luna Park, Coney Island, closed its gates for the season of 1904. Promptly on the hour all the electric lights in the park were turned off, and a few minutes later the various bands employed at the resort emerged and proceeded to serenade everybody on the island.

First of all, the police station was visited, where "Mr. Dooley" was rendered in honor of the Coney Island police commander. At each place visited the first tune played was "Auld Lang Syne," and when the bands left Dreamland, the last place they visited, they struck up in unison "Home Sweet Home."

Mr. Fiske Passes Typhoid Crisis.

It was announced yesterday that Harrison Grey Fiske, the theatrical manager, who has been ill with typhoid for two weeks, had passed through the crisis of the disease. The real nature of Mr. Fiske's illness was kept a secret for the sake of his mother, Mrs. Lyman Fiske, who is visiting friends in the country and did not know until yesterday that her son was ill.

HURLED "KITTY" AT CAPTAIN.

That's Why a Bit of Evidence Was Missing in Gallagher's Raid.

Capt. Gallagher of the East Twenty-second Street Station told in the Yorkville Court yesterday how he led his men through an abandoned cellar into an alleged gambling house at 133 Third Avenue. With the exception of Joseph Mundle, the reputed proprietor, who was held for court under $500 bail, ten men said to have been patrons of the game were discharged.

About 3 o'clock Sunday morning Capt. Gallagher and Detectives McMullen and Evans made their way through a dark basement adjoining the building to an interior courtway. Through a window, according to their testimony, they saw a group of men seated around a table playing "stuss." One of the men, they said, gathered in money and threw it into a beer glass that was used as a "kitty."

When the prisoners were arraigned Magistrate Flammer wanted the beer glass produced.

"We didn't save the pieces," said Detective McMullen.

"What do you mean?" inquired the Magistrate.

"Now that you have raised the question I will be compelled to inform you that the 'kitty' was hurled at my head," replied McMullen. "Somebody, I don't know who, fired the glass at me after the lights were turned off."

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

Cotton Trade the Brightest Spot—A Rising Tendency in Grain.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"The week's trade reports are not materially different from those of a week ago. The textile industries are more hopeful, but the metal branches are stationary.

"The grain trade has been fairly active and firm, with a rising tendency, the trade recognizing more thoroughly the fact that the United States will not be able to give much assistance to European countries, all of which have suffered from the drought.

"India promises well, and Australia will be an important factor if the country remains free from extreme climatic changes. The trouble with Russian supplies will be the bringing of them to shipping ports, owing to the deranged railway facilities.

"The cotton trade is the brightest spot in our industrial life. The American crop is coming to the market so quickly and liberally that it already gives considerable relief to the cotton famine in Lancashire. The Indian and Egyptian crops promise well, so spinners and manufacturers will soon find plenty of material for the execution of large orders for yarns and cloth, to which further additions have been made this week.

"In the wool and woolen trades the feature is the progress of the London auctions of colonial wools, all good qualities realizing a 5 per cent. advance. Reports from Yorkshire speak more hopefully of the progress of trade.

"Iron and steel reports are varied. The west coast is still in a depressed condition. South Wales complains of the dumping of German steel, American competition at present being less in evidence."

CHAMBERLAIN IS ENCOURAGED.

Thinks the Colonies Are with Him—Sharply Attacks Rosebery.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Times tomorrow will publish a letter to the editor from ex-Colonial Secretary Chamberlain in which he sharply characterizes the attitude of Lord Rosebery in respect to the fiscal question and vigorously condemns him for sneering at the motives and intentions of the British colonies in supporting a policy of preference with the mother country.

Mr. Chamberlain briefly reviews the position of the colonies in regard to imperial preference and concludes by saying:

"There are none so blind in England as those party politicians who will not see in the manifestation of colonial opinion an encouraging proof of the desire of the colonies to meet the mother country half way."

The Times says editorially:

"It is gradually dawning on most people that the policy proposed by Mr. Chamberlain is not so much a fiscal heresy as a political question of the very first importance. There is a political and imperial aspect to his proposals which transcends all the rest, and only when that fact is fully grasped can the purely fiscal issues be viewed in their proper light."

KAISER DIRECTS OCEAN LINE.

One of the Biggest Shareholders in the Hamburg-American Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—In connection with the appointment of Capt. von Grumme to a position in the Hamburg-American Company I learn that Emperor William is one of the biggest shareholders in that concern, and that he has, in fact, for several years been taking an active part in directing the affairs of the company.

Director Ballin has done nothing without consulting his Majesty. The latter decides what new liners shall be built and how big and of what speed they are to be.

The appointment of Capt. von Grumme will facilitate the intercourse between the Emperor and Herr Ballin.

PEACE IN URUGUAY.

Foreign Governments Expected to File Heavy Claims for Damages.

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 25.—Confirmation has been received here of the report of the conclusion of peace between the Uurguayan Government and the revolutionists under Gen. Munoz.

In explanation of the Government forces surprising the insurgent camp, it appears that notification of the recent rupture of peace negotiations was communicated to Fernandez, a revolutionary political leader, but not to those under arms, and up to the moment of the unexpected attack by the Government forces the commanders of the rebels had not been informed that a rupture of negotiations had taken place. The fact becoming known that the revolutionists were not actively hostile led to the resumption of conferences, with the result that terms of peace were agreed upon.

There is general rejoicing here and in Uruguay over the outcome. It is expected that claims will be presented by diplomatic representatives of foreign Governments for damages and losses to foreign residents to the amount of several million dollars, and the financial outlook is consequently gloomy.

BRITISH PRIMATE AT BIG OPEN-AIR SERVICE

Imposing Procession at Mount St. Alban's, Washington.

FIVE BISHOPS TAKE PART

Combined Choirs of Episcopal Churches and Marine Band in Vestments—25,000 Persons Present.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The Most Rev. Thomas Randall Davidson, Archbishop of Canterbury, made an appeal for Christian unity at the open-air service held in the cathedral grounds at Mount St. Alban's this afternoon. Not since President McKinley was present at the erection of the Peace Cross on the same spot after the war with Spain have so many people gathered at that spot. The crowd was estimated at 25,000.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the British Ambassador, Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, with Mrs. Davidson, Gen. and Mrs. Chaffee, and Mrs. Hitchcock had seats to the right of the platform and joined heartily in the service.

At 3:30 o'clock the top of the first processional cross was sighted coming over the hill at the head of a long line of men and boys, the combined vested choirs of the Episcopal churches in Washington, followed by the Marine Band, also in vestments. After the choir came the clergy, and then the visiting Bishops, including Bishop Nelson of Georgia, Bishop Brent of the Philippines, Bishop Ferguson of Africa, Bishop Doane of Albany, and Bishop Satterlee of Washington. Behind them was the Archbishop's party, his chaplains, his crucifer, and in the rear the Archbishop, in the brilliant red vestments of the Primate of All England.

Awaiting them on the platform were prominent laymen, including J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, Secretary Hitchcock, and President Gilman of the Carnegie Institute, and clergy from the various Protestant churches in Washington.

The long procession to the tune of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" made its way to the seats reserved for the various bodies represented. On the platform with the Archbishop sat the visiting clergy, the Bishops, and the Archbishop's Chaplains. The versicles and opening prayers were read by Bishop Nelson, Bishop Ferguson read the Psalm, and Bishop Brent the lesson.

The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Albany. He deprecated the Continental idea of the Sabbath, and said that if people were not more appreciative of a Sunday, which should be a holy day as well as a holiday, the time would come when commerce would step in and make of it a working day like the other six.

Bishop Satterlee presented Archbishop Davidson, who in his speech said:

"It is delightful for me to be allowed in the name of the Saviour to greet you here—here at the very pivot and centre of a National life which for 130 years has had Christ's blessing as its watchword, and for more than 40 years has everywhere striven to make the word good.

"A vision rises before our eyes to-day whereunto this thing, with all that it implies, may grow. It has been given to us English-speaking folk in the manifold development of our storied life to realize in practice more fully than other men the true meaning of liberty, the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free.

"Be it ours to recognize that such knowledge is in itself not a heritage only, but a splendid and sacred trust. The trust must be determined and daily used, used amid all the changes and chances of life to the glory of God and the immeasurable good of men."

After the Archbishop's blessing the services closed with the recessional, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

MIRSKY'S PROMISE TO JEWS.

New Russian Minister Says He Will See Justice Is Done Them.

VILNA, Sept. 25.—Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, recently transferred from the office of Governor General of Vilna to that of Minister of the Interior, before departing for his new post yesterday, delivered an address to members of the Jewish community. He said he was well acquainted with the wants of the Jews, and would know how to approach the important Jewish question, which would shortly come up for serious consideration, with a full knowledge of the problems it presented.

He expected the Jews on their side to have perfect confidence in Government measures. Jews might rest fully satisfied that, having been called to the fount of justice by the side of the Emperor, he would see that justice was always done them.

The public utterance by Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky on Friday of his hope to improve the condition of the Russian people and particularly to afford to the poorer class of Jews in Russia larger opportunities for life and work is regarded by Jacob H. Schiff as perhaps the most important utterance made by any man so high in authority in Russia since the present reactionary régime was inaugurated in that country in 1881.

"Prince Mirsky," said Mr. Schiff yesterday, "has long been known as a man of high character as well as of tolerant, if not liberal, tendencies, and both his appointment to the most important and most influential Ministry in the Russian Government as well as the public expression he has just made of his ideas of what need be done to promote the welfare of all classes of the Russian people give promise that the long period of reaction under which Russia and her people have suffered so terribly is nearing an end."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Barometric conditions are very much unsettled to-night, with six poorly defined centres of depression scattered over the country. They have caused local showers over all districts, except the slope and Central Rocky Mountain region and the Southeastern States. Temperatures have fallen in New England. There will be showers Tuesday from the Northwestern States eastward through the lake region into Western New England. On the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts the winds will be light north to northeast.

Steamships departing to-morrow for European ports will have light to fresh north to northeast winds, with fair weather, to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair to-day and Tuesday; light north winds, becoming variable.

New England—Partly cloudy to-day and Tuesday; showers Tuesday in west and north portions; light to fresh north to northeast winds.

Eastern New York—Fair to-day; cooler in extreme south portion; Tuesday, partly cloudy, showers in the interior; light north to northeast winds.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES'S thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	—Weather Bureau.— 1903.	1904.	—TIMES. 1904.
3 A. M.	49	62	66
6 A. M.	48	61	65
9 A. M.	53	62	69
12 M.	56	74	76
3 P. M.	62	75	74
6 P. M.	62	73	72
9 P. M.	56	70	71
12 P. M.	56	69	69

THE TIMES'S thermometer is 6 feet above the street level; that of the Weather Bureau is 256 feet above the street level.

Average temperatures yesterday were as follows:

Printing House Square	70¼
Weather Bureau	68
Corresponding date 1903	55
Corresponding date for last 26 years	64

The thermometer registered 62 degrees at 8 A. M. yesterday and 72 degrees at 8 P. M., the maximum temperature being 75 degrees at 1 P. M. and the minimum 61 degrees at 6 A. M. The humidity was 84 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 88 per cent. at 8 P. M.

DR. SAVAGE DEFENDS ADAM.

Agrees with the President That Home Is the Greatest Thing.

The Rev. Minot J. Savage, pastor of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue, preached his first sermon yesterday since his return from Europe. His subject was, "Home Again." In the course of his remarks he said:

"President Roosevelt is right when he speaks about race suicide as a dangerous thing, if it be dangerous. I do not share with him the fear, because I believe that nature, which is God, is stronger than human fashions, impulses, or whims. I have no fear that the race will die out.

"I agree with the sentiment President Roosevelt expresses, which he has illustrated in his whole life, that the home is the great thing in the world. I have never thought it was a calamity for Adam to be turned out of Paradise, to speak of the story for a moment as though it were historical.

"I think it would have been the worst thing that could have happened to the race if he hadn't eaten the apple, and been sent adrift into the wide rough world to create new conditions and to develop himself in the process."

IN THE SHOPS.

There are any number of pretty and inexpensive things in silk and cotton and charming all-cotton goods, heavy and soft, in beautiful firm colors in the way of drapery materials this year. For comparatively little money the woman with artistic instincts can have very fine portières and window hangings. These are all of regulation width, 50 inches. Among the newest of these are art nouveau tapestries, the designs rather large and on the lines which the name implies, and also in new art colors. There are blues and greens, red browns and greens and various other good combinations of color. One pattern which is attractive and suggests liberty fabrics is in soft olive greens and the red brown, something in the nature of a vine with fruit in the greens and a bird with the appearance of a dove in the red brown. Descriptions of designs are always flat, but the reality of this is very good. The tapestries range in price from $2.50 to $5.

***

Oriental tapestries are also of the silk and cotton, pretty things, copies of the handloom Aubussons. They are largely silk, some in brilliant colors, and others more quiet and in moderately small designs. They range up to $3.50 in price.

***

Charming things in plain colors are what are known as the crinkled tapestries, a soft crinkle running lengthwise and the colors rich. They have body, hang in soft folds, and have a silk face and beautiful lustre. These are $2.75. There are also figured crinkled silks that are beautiful, the same plain colors, but the surface of the material cut into small diamond-like designs. These are $2.50.

***

In a lighter weight material are the Shaikl tapestries, made after the style of the Shaikl silks with an uneven surface, little irregular ridges, as in the silks, running across the material. These are in very soft and beautiful plain colors in soft artistic shades, and cost $1.75 a yard.

***

Figured velours for hangings and furniture coverings come in all designs and colors and cost $3.75 a yard. Single-faced silk armures are charming in distinctly French designs, coming in many pretty light shades to go with French styles of furniture, soft rose pinks, &c. They are $2.25 a yard.

***

Cotton armures with a silk finish are very pretty in soft colors and small conventional figures, and cost only $1.25 a yard.

***

Old-time reps are appearing more and more, and are in delightful colors. The rep is fine and the cheaper qualities cost $1.25 and are exceedingly pretty, while the silk reps are $2.25.

***

For the woman who likes silks the taffetas for drapery linings are a delight. They are $3 a yard, 50 inches wide, and in all beautiful colors. They are very soft silks. This is an idea for the woman who wishes something in a gown, coat linings, &c., which could be cut to better advantage from the wider silks.

***

Domestic gobelin tapestries are made after the French tapestry designs—charming things, of course—and they cost $2.50 a yard. They are used either for furniture coverings or for hangings.

***

But for the woman who likes the soft colors that are to be seen in the new art weaves there are some charming things to be found in the verdure tapestries. They are beautiful, the soft woods colors blending, shades of greens with browns running to a deep wood red. They range in price from $1.50 up to $3.50.

***

Many new and original designs are to be found in the lace draperies, Irish point, the Renaissance, and Brussels made in France and Switzerland. The Irish points are always popular with many people because in them there is more effect for the money than in any other drapery. They are always in white or ivory, and range in price from $3.50 to $26, with many new and original designs this year.

***

For the Renaissance one may pay much or little, according to the purse; the difference is shown in the amount of the handmade lace in the border and edge. The curtains may be bought as low as $4.75, and from that up to $75. The Renaissance is a cream-toned curtain. The heavy Arabian draperies are always in a deep ecru net and edge.

***

For a fine curtain there is nothing much prettier than a Brussels lace. These, with their point lace designs and delicate running paterns, are charming in a room furnished in light tones, though many people like them equally well with the deeper colors. They range in price from $4.75 to $45.

HAPPENINGS AT LENOX.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who have been at the Hotel Aspinwall, have gone to Williamstown, Mass., from where they are to make a driving trip through Vermont.

Mrs. Richard Gambrill of Newport will be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster this week at Bellefountaine. Mrs. Foster will give a series of dinners for her guests.

Count and Countess de Alte are spending their honeymoon at the Hotel Aspinwall.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Reiman Duval and family, who have been in Lenox, have returned to New York.

The Committee on Steam Boilers, named by the English Admiralty in 1900, has completed its report. Admiral Sir Compton Domville, Chief Commander of the English Navy in the Mediterranean, as President of th this committee, has addressed his final report to the Admiralty, accompanied by the following letter:

H. M. S. "Bulwark," at Rapallo, 12th June, 1904.

Sir:

I have the honour to submit, herewith, to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the final Report of the Boiler Committee, of which I am the President. Although I have not been present at the experiments carried out during the last two years, I have received from time to time all the reports, and they show the great care and pains taken by the Committee to obtain correct results.

(2) With reference to our previous Report, I am compelled to say that my experience with the Belleville boilers on the Mediterranean Station has been very favorable to them as a steam generator, and it is clear to me that the earlier boilers of this description were badly constructed and badly used. We have had no serious boiler defects in any of the ships out here, and the fact that two ships are about to be recommissioned with only the ordinary annual repairs being undertaken shews that their life is not so short as it originally supposed. However, the second commission of these ships will be a very good test of the staying capabilities of their boilers.

(3) In conclusion, I cannot express too highly my opinion of the work done by my colleagues on the Committee.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) COMPTON DOMVILLE,
Admiral and Commander-in-Chief,
President of the Boiler Committee.

The Secretary to the Admiralty.

The preceding letter, being written by an Admiral who has the highest responsibility of the greatest naval force united at present under one leader, praises the excellent practical results of the Belleville boilers in active service on sea. This is the best answer to the attacks against these boilers, which for ten years have been in use in the English Navy.

RIPPLE OF REPARTEE SPLASHES AMEN CORNER

Smith of Tammany Chaffs the Governor and Luther Little.

OFFERS TO PAY WHOLE BILL

Doesn't Want to See Republicans So Downcast—Mentions Shipbuilding to Odell—Those Five P's.

The political reporters were gathered in a compact wedge for the prying out of news—that somehow stuck fast to its sources—in the "Amen Corner" at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night, when Luther B. Little, editor in chief of the Republican Party in the State and expert pinochle player, loomed up, handed out the latest bulletin from Governor-Chairman Odell, and then subsided into blissful silence, repose, and a cigar. Suddenly there was a brisk step in the corridor, and Thomas F. Smith, the Secretary of Tammany Hall, appeared.

"Well, have you Republicans decided to shut up shop to-morrow after Judge Parker's letter is out?" asked Smith, with an arch glance toward Little.

"No decision has been reached on that point yet, Tom," said Little, wearily. "What is your proposition?"

"Tell you what we'll do," said the Tammany Secretary; "you just make up your bill of expenses for running your campaign to date, send it around to Tammany Hall, and we'll send you a check in full so you can close up shop feeling easy."

"Sounds like a good proposition, that," came in a dry voice behind Smith. Governor-Chairman Odell had quietly come up behind the gathering.

"Well, if you want to take it up," said Smith, "send your bill right around to Fourteenth Street. Only remember, Governor, only legitimate expenses are to be put in. No Shipbuilding bonds you know."

"We'll think it over, Smith," said the Governor-Chairman, settling himself into a vacant seat in the corner. "But things are running easy with us now, you know, and we feel good."

The Governor-Chairman puffed away steadily on his cigar for a minute.

"Say, Smith," said the Governor-Chairman then, "that's a great sign you have put out just above the Hoffman House, that one lighted by electricity and showing the shell of peas—Peace, Prudence, Parker, Prosperity, and Progress."

"Like it, Governor?" asked Smith, brightening.

"Yes," said the Governor; "looks to me like a general notice to all hands to shell out. Either that or you are trying to work a sleight-of-hand on the community."

"Mighty little we could get you to shell out for us from here, anyway," said Smith. "We are going to get some more signs out around Madison Square in a few days, Governor. Held off until now because we wanted to let you have a few good nights sleep before the campaign opens."

"Things are so easy with us, Smith, that I sleep well every night," remarked the Governor-Chairman, as he thought again.

"Say," he said, finally, to the newspaper reporters, "why don't you throw away all of the chaff that comes from the Democratic camp and print what comes from the Republican side, get right down to the grain, and print a story on the political situation as it actually exists."

"Just what we want to do, Governor," said a couple of the reporters. "Tell you what we'll do. You give us the result of your poll of the State, and then if Smith will give us the result of the first Tammany poll of the city we'll tell just what's going to happen. Will you do it?"

"Guess I'm safe in promising my poll if Smith will promise his," said the Governor.

"Can't give you ours," said Smith, "because I know the result would give you nervous prostration, Governor."

"There you are," said the Governor. "Here I have been working to give the newspapers the true story of the situation, and my efforts go for nothing. Such is the reward of the conscientious Chairman."

About that time the hall attendants began to lower the lights.

FESTIVAL BOOTH CROWDED.

Real Sunshine and Luscious Fruits for Jewish Fall Holiday.

There was a crowd yesterday afternoon at the Jewish festival holiday exercises held in the Jewish Religious and Industrial School, 120 Columbia Street. Word had gone forth to the effect that the largest succah, or booth, on the east side had been built back of the school. Early in the morning the people began calling to see the booth and partake of the fruit, cake, and wine. The visitors kept arriving until evening, and will continue their calls through to-day.

The booth is capable of holding 300 children at one time, but it seemed yesterday afternoon after the exercises in the big hall up stairs as if there was not a time when there were not more there. The yard had been roofed over in arbor fashion. The sunlight could pour in through the woven thatch, heavily laden with clusters of grapes, lucious pears, and apples, all typical of harvest time. Before the refreshments, gifts of friends of the school, were served the children were gathered in the hall, to listen to addresses in Hebrew, German, and English, in which they were told of the significance of the festival.

After the singing of hymns of thanksgiving and prayer the Rev. Dr. Philip Klein told of the religious aspect of the exercises and Congressman Goldfogle spoke. He said that though the Jews had been locked up for centuries in narrow city streets yet they had not forgotten their love of nature, and came back as far as they could to the customs of the fathers in seeking the open air for their harvest festival.

With towering tenements on every side there were still air and sunshine in the booth where Superintendent Michaelson, Mr. and Mrs. Krauss, Mr. and Mrs. Steindler, Mrs. Kronfeld, and Dr. Bruder distributed fruits and sweets to the pupils, and the people sat down in the open to partake of the bounty that had been provided by the parents of the school children.

MEXICAN CONSUL DEAD.

Many of Dr. Navarro's Eighty-one Years Were Crowded with Events.

Dr. Juan N. Navarro, the Mexican Consul General at New York, died at his home, 251 West Forty-fourth Street, on Saturday night of apoplexy. Dr. Navarro was stricken on a New York Central train last Wednesday morning as the train was pulling out of the Albany station for this city.

Dr. Navarro was born in Morelia, Mexico, in 1823, and was graduated from a medical college in the City of Mexico. When war was declared between the United States and Mexico Dr. Navarro enlisted in the Mexican Army, and before the end of hostilities attained the rank of Colonel. In the attack on the Convent of Cherubusco he was captured by the Americans and was held as a prisoner for many months.

After the war Dr. Navarro resumed the practice of his profession and was made a professor in the Medical College in the City of Mexico. Later he was elected a Senator, and when Mexico was invaded by the French he was appointed Surgeon General of the Mexican Army. He was captured by the French, but escaped from prison. At the end of the trouble Dr. Navarro was appointed Consul General at New York and assumed the duties of the position in 1863.

Obituary Notes.

ASSERSON—SWIFT.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Miss Pauline Swift, the second daughter of Capt. William B. Swift, United States Navy, was united in marriage yesterday to Dr. Frederic A. Asserson, Assistant Surgeon in the United States Navy. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Edmund Grindel Rawson of the Presbyterian Church of this village at 12:30 o'clock at Capt. Swift's Summer home in Church Street. The bridegroom is the son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Peter C. Asserson.

HEIR TO $125,000 FEARS TO RETURN TO RUSSIA

Fortune Awaits Aronowitz, Maybe Term in Army, Too.

HE EARNS $12 A WEEK NOW

Thought He Was Disinherited When News Came That Father Had Died, Leaving Him Share of Estate.

Morris Aronowitz, who earns $12 a week as a machinist, has good reason to believe that there is a fortune of $125,000 awaiting him in Russia, and yet he is in a serious quandary as to whether to return to his native country to claim it. Aronowitz has never become naturalized, and, as he is only twenty-three years old, fears that he would be forced into the army if caught in Russia before the war with Japan is over. He came to this country eight years ago and lives with his wife and little daughter at 153 East Fourth Street.

Aronowitz formerly lived in Kishineff, and his father was well to do. The son, however, wanted to marry the daughter of a poor man when he was only fifteen years old. He would not listen to his father's objections to his youth and the girl's poverty, and, feeling himself badly treated, ran away to seek his fortunes in America. He settled on the east side, and when he was seventeen years old had money enough to send for his bride to be.

Morris Gilman, who the husband had known in Russia as his father's friend, surprised the young couple by a visit. He said that Aronowitz, Sr., had died and left Morris a share of his estate that would be $125,000. The man furnished proof that he was qualified to speak.

Aronowitz had not written to his father or any of his family in the eight years he had been in the United States and was naturally surprised that he had not been disinherited. Of equal cause for surprise was the amount of the estate. Gilmann told him that his father had added largely to his means through a contract with the Russian Government for carrying overland mail. In the event of his dread of the army overcoming his desire for his heritage Gilmann said his brothers were willing to settle with him for $50,000.

Not long ago, Morris Gilmann, who the husband had known in Russia as his father's friend, surprised the young couple by a visit. He said that Aronowitz, Sr., had died and left Morris a share of his estate that would be $125,000. The man furnished proof that he was qualified to speak.

F. W. RHINELANDER DEAD.

He Was President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Special to The New York Times.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Frederic W. Rhinelander died suddenly of heart failure here at the Red Lion Inn this morning at 1:30 o'clock. Two weeks ago he arrived at the inn with his sisters-in-law, the Misses Skinner. He was in good health at the time. Yesterday afternoon he complained of feeling ill, and early in the evening he was attacked with heart failure.

Frederic William Rhinelander, President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, was seventy-five years old and a member of the old Rhinelander family, which traces its ancestry from Philip John Rhinelander, who owned a castle on the Rhine. He was a brother of William Rhinelander and a near relative of Miss Serena Rhinelander. He was graduated from Columbia in 1847, was a member of the Knickerbocker, Down Town, and South Side Clubs, and took an active interest in municipal, religious, and civic works. He married Miss Skinner, who died some years ago.

Mr. Rhinelander had returned from Europe recently with his son, Frederic W. Rhinelander, Jr., Vice President of the West End Foundry Company. He leaves two sons and a daughter, Miss A. K. Rhinelander.

REAR ADMIRAL GILMORE DEAD.

Had Been Abroad for His Health, Returned Only Wednesday Last.

Rear Admiral Fernando P. Gilmore, retired, United States Navy, died in a private sanitarium at 23 West Sixty-first Street yesterday morning. Admiral Gilmore's death was due to Bright's disease, which he contracted in the Philippines, and as a result of which he was retired two years ago. The Admiral, with his wife, spent the Summer at Aix-les-Bains, France. The change did not do him any good, however, and while in Paris several weeks ago he became so ill that it was thought best to return to the United States. They reached New York on Wednesday last.

Fernando P. Gilmore was born in Ohio Aug. 15, 1847, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1867. Although not graduated until after the close of the civil war, Admiral Gilmore was a veteran of that conflict, having been one of the officers of the yacht America when that vessel sailed out of Boston Harbor in her unsuccessful attempt to overhaul and capture the Confederate ship Tacony. He was on duty with the various squadrons until 1886, when he was Naval Inspector of the steel cruisers built in the period from that year till 1890. In 1889 he was made a Lieutenant Commander, and in 1895 a Commander. In the Spanish war he commanded the monitor Monadnock, and later the supply ship Glacier. When his health failed Commander Gilmore was promoted, and retired as a Rear Admiral.

Admiral Gilmore in 1900 married Mrs. Lydia E. Sears, who survives him

DEATH OF COLIN HUNTER.

Well-Known Painter of Sea Subjects Was Born in 1841.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Colin Hunter, the artist, is dead.

Colin Hunter was one of the best known English painters of sea subjects of the latter part of the nineteenth century. Unlike that of Mr. Brett, his work did not consist chiefly of seascapes, but of pictures of incidents of seashore life, such as representations of fishermen and fish markets.

He was born at Glasgow in 1841 and was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1884.

Henry Horace Crocker Dead.

Henry Horace Crocker, a former member of the Stock Exchange, died yesterday at Barnstable, Mass., where he had spent the Summer. Mr. Crocker was born in Boston in 1863. He graduated from Harvard in 1874. Soon after graduation he went into business in this city, and later became a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Several years ago, on account of failing health, he retired from business. He was a brother of Prof. Francis B. Crocker of Columbia. The funeral and interment will take place in Boston, where his ancestors have lived since 1630. He was a member of the Union, University, and Raquet Clubs.

LOUIS FLEISCHMANN DEAD.

Funeral of Baker-Philanthropist Will Be Private.

Louis Fleischmann, whose career as a soldier, baker, and philanthropist was outlined in THE TIMES of yesterday, died at 6 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 4 West Seventy-seventh Street. He was stricken with apralysis two and a half years ago, and had a second stroke while on a recent visit to the Catskills.

He leaves a wife, Mrs. Wilhelmine Fleischmann, and six children, Charles, Russell, Anne, Otto, Josephine, and Raoul.

The family, realizing that because of Mr. Fleischmann's many charities there would be a crowd at a public funeral, have decided to have the funeral at his home and not to make public the time of the services. None but the immediate members of the family will be present. The interment will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Bishop Potter was a close friend of Mr. Fleischmann, and if he is in town at the time of the funeral will be asked by the family to officiate at the burial services.

HONORS EVEN AT ST. LOUIS

New York Nationals Wind Up with Pittsburgs To-day, and Americans Play at Cleveland.

Only three games were scheduled to be played in the American League yesterday, the Western teams of the National League being now in the East. At St. Louis, in a double-header, the home team and the Washingtons played two 1 to 0 games, and the honors were divided. At Chicago the Philadelphia Athletics sustained another shut-out, the score being the same as on the previous day—4 to 0. The New York Nationals wind up their series with Pittsburg to-day, and then play four games with Chicago. The Americans, after finishing the series with Cleveland to-day, will go to Detroit for three games. Brooklyn plays Chicago to-day and then meets St. Louis for four games. Summary yesterday follows:

Quakers Could Not Hit White and Were Shut Out by Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—A base on balls, a base hit, and Green's three bagger gave the home team two runs in the third inning, and two singles, a stolen base, and Callahan's double added two more in the fifth. Two singles and a base on balls filled the bases for the visitors in the first inning, but White kept them from scoring by excellent work and perfect support.

WILL CHALLENGE NEW YORKS.

Brush Issues Statement Which Brings Out Owner Farrell of Americans.

Frank Farrell, owner of the Greater New York Club of the American League, announced last night that he and Owner Taylor of the Boston Club, the champion baseball team of the world, would issue a joint challenge to the New York National League Club for a series of games for the world's championship with either of the two clubs in the event of their finishing in the lead, and in accordance with the agreement entered into by the Schedule Committees and ratified at the annual meetings of the two major organizations. This action of Messrs. Farrell and Tayler was precipitated because of the statement issued last night by John T. Brush, President of the New York National League Club, in which he termed the Greater New Yorks as a minor league organization.

In his statement Mr. Brush practically declares that the New Yorks will not play a post-season series with the winners of the American League pennant, or with the leading club of any other league. He says there is nothing in the constitution or playing rules of the National League which requires its victorious club to submit its championship honors to a contest with a victorious club of a minor league. He further says the club that wins from the clubs representing cities of the National League—the eight largest and most important cities in America—in a series of 154 games, is entitled to the honor of champion of the United States, and when the present season of the New Yorks is ended they will be contented to rest upon their laurels.

The stand taken by President Brush will undoubtedly be a disappointment to nine-tenths of the people who patronize the game in this city, and is likely to have an injurious effect on the future popularity of the New York Club. If the Greater New York, Boston, or any other club should win the American League championship, not one of the reasons set forth in Mr. Brush's statement, from a sportsman's point of view, would hold good if the Polo Grounds representatives refused to play the new champions of the American League. Before Mr. Brush became so prominent in baseball the wise men who governed the National League had no hesitation in pitting its strongest team against the leader of its formidable rival, the American Association, and the contests between the Detroit and St. Louis teams in various cities were witnessed by immense crowds. This has even been the case since the American League came into existence, for the Chicago, St. Louis, and Philadelphia teams have indulged in Spring and Fall games, and last year President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg Club, winner three times of the National League championship, eagerly accepted the offer of the owners of the Boston Club, the American League champions, to play a series of games for what was generally recognized to be for the world's championship. The Bostons won, but never a word was uttered by Mr. Dreyfuss in explanation of his team's defeat; in fact, he announced that if Pittsburg was successful this year that team would again meet the winner in the American League.

To class the American League among the minor organizations certainly shows poor judgment on the part of President Brush. With the pick of the National League players in its ranks, and with a powerful circuit of cities, the American League is rated by baseball critics throughout the country equal, if not stronger, in playing strength to the older organization.

KRAMER DISAPPOINTS CROWD.

Champion Cyclist Objects to Ruling and Refuses to Start.

The 5,000 spectators who visited the Vailsburg bicycle track at Newark yesterday were much disappointed, as Frank L. Kramer, the American National cyclist, refused to ride in any of the professional events. Announcer Burns told the spectators that Kramer was not satisfied with the ruling of the referee and the National Cycling Association authorities, who had refused to disqualify John Bedell for his riding in the five-mile race of the previous Sunday. Kramer said he would not ride if the same man was to referee again, and the management refused to appoint another. "Willie" Fenn, Kramer's team mate, also refused to ride. Marcus Hurley of the New York Athletic Club, winner of the world's amateur championship in London a few weeks ago; Oscar Goerke, and Iver Lawson, the trio who recently returned from London, were all at the track, but Goerke was the only one of the three to take part in the races. He rode in the ten-mile amateur event, and won from scratch.

During the ten-mile race A. T. Dove, a negro amateur, was accidentally knocked from his wheel. The negro in revenge tried to pull another rider from his wheel, but was restrained and taken to his training quarters by two policemen. Dove broke out again soon after and with an iron bar threatened several of the trainers, when the police were again called on. Dove was locked up. Summary:

ASTOR PLACE AND FOURTH AVENUE

AUTOBOAT WINNER FOR ORMOND RACES

Owner of Vingt-et-Un II. Expects to Take Her to Florida.

CHALLENGER'S POOR SHOWING

Chippewa Club in the Thousand Islands Now Holds Challenge Cup—New Boats Being Built.

W. S. Kilmer, the owner of the Vingt-et-Un II., which won the gold challenge cup on Saturday in the final race in the series of autoboat contests held under the auspices of the American Power Boat Association, felt so gratified with the success of the boat that he bought during the Summer as a pleasure craft for his country home in the Thousand Islands that he practically decided to take the boat to Ormond this Winter for the autoboat races to be held there. Mr. Kilmer was present at the Columbia Yacht Club for the first time on Saturday. In the future races he will probably handle the boat himself, for he is an expert autoboat manager, and has become thoroughly acquainted with the Vingt-et-Un II. since he has had possession of her.

The credit of victory was shared with no less enthusiasm by the designer of the boat, Clinton H. Crane, and the manufacturers of her motors, Smith & Mabley. In fact, this was the boat originally built to compete for the Larchmont Cup, now open only to amateurs, and which was raced for in June by the boats entered by the Smith & Mabley and Hollander & Tangeman firms. The Vingt-et-Un II. won handily, and the cup is now in the custody of the Larchmont Yacht Club, waiting for challenges from amateurs.

The amateur interest in motor-boat racing has not grown so rapidly as had been predicted early in the season. Practically all of the boats in the races last week represented different manufacturers' interests, and the amount of talk that was disseminated as a result of business rivalry on the alleged shortness of the course, the failure to make proper measurements, and a host of other minor things, might have formed serious drawbacks to the interest in the races were one inclined to take them seriously. Indeed, one man came to the club primed with an alleged official Government survey of the course, showing conclusively that it was one-third of a mile shorter than the committee claimed it to be.

The protests, however, did find sufficient weight with the committee to order the remeasurement of the Mercedes VI., Vanderbilt's boat; the Mercedes, U. S. A., H. L. Bowden's boat, and the Macaroni, but as the latter is now destroyed, she will cease from giving trouble to her rivals. The Vanderbilt boat was remeasured early in the day, but the committee, while not announcing the figures, stated that the changes would make practically no difference in the result of any of the races.

The Vingt-et-Un II., the Speedway, the Mercedes, U. S. A., and the Marchrene II., a cabin boat, all showed splendid seaworthy qualities. The winning boat stamped herself as a boat that can go against a considerable force of wind and rough water and yet not show an appreciably diminished speed. Her average for the distance miles for the first two days was a trifle over 25 miles, and on the last day, with the water very rough, she did over 24½ miles. While her consistent showing demonstrates that motor boats can now be built for safe usage in rough weather conditions, the opposite view of the case was shown by her sister boat, but of heavier horse power, the Challenger. The latter ran San Jose, Cal., (140 yards,) second; Oscar Schwab, Greenwich, Conn., (140 yards,) third; Charles Schilke, Newark, (140 yards,) fourth. Time—1:49. Lap Prize Winners—Rosini, 2; Schwab, 1.

Half-mile Consolation, Professional.—Won by Menus Bedell, Lynbrook; John Bedell, Lynbrook, second; E. F. Root, Boston, third. Time—1:03.

Cycle Races at Guttenberg.

In the cycle races of the New Jersey Division of the Century Road Club of America held yesterday at Guttenberg, C. Hanson carried away most of the honors. Hanson started from scratch in the one, two, and five mile events and won all three. Summary:

One-mile Handicap.—Won by C. Hanson, (scratch;) C. Todd, (20 yards,) second; F. Miller, (20 yards,) third. Time—2:37.

Two-mile Handicap.—Won by C. Hanson, (scratch;) F. Peterson, (scratch,) second; C. Todd, (75 yards,) third. Time—5:43.

Five-mile Handicap.—Won by C. Hanson, (scratch;) G. Hidley, (400 yards,) second; M. Dresnan, (500 yards,) third. Time—14:28.

Novelty Race.—Won by F. Peterson, F. Miller second, G. Egan third. Time—4:40.

Half-mile Consolation Race.—Won by F. Blatz, W. Davis second, G. Mesmin third. Time—1:16.

Quick Repairs to Vanderbilt Cup Car.

C. H. Tangemin said yesterday that in order to put the damaged ninety horse power automobile owned by William Wallace in condition for the Vanderbilt Cup race on Oct. 8 it will be necessary to take a wheel and several other fixtures from one of the sixty horse power Fiat machines. Mr. Wallace's new ninety horse power car, which he recently entered for the Vanderbilt Cup race, was badly damaged by running into a tree early in the week near Boston, while into a tree early in the week near Boston, while Mr. Wallace was trying to avoid colliding with a wagon. The repairs are being made as hastily as possible, and it is expected that the machine will be ready next week to make a trial trip over the Long Island course.

Frank Croker, who has entered the seventy-five horse power Simplex, has already taken his car over the course two or three times. The machine is now undergoing some slight alterations at the factory where it was made in this city. The car will be raced without any carriage body, simply showing the chassis, or frame, with the motors. The car is being lightened in every possible way.

The Racing Committee of the A. A. A., having the Vanderbilt Cup event in charge, will meet at the rooms of the Automobile Club of America next Saturday evening to make the drawings for positions and arrange all the final details of the race.

CIGARS UNITED

THERE is not a penny of waste—useless profit or in-between expense attached to the cigars we build our business on. There is but one rehandling between the smoker and where the tobacco grows. Cigars 30 to 50 per cent better in quality is the result of this direct method and the reason of our existence and success. As an example we recommend for this week

FLOR de VALLENS CIGAR
(Clear Havana—Reina Victoria Size)
$7.00 Box of 100. $3.50 Box of 50. 7 Cents Each.

A single cigar, a box or a thousand at the same rate—that's our way, you know.

This cigar is made by skilled Cuban cigarmakers in Key West, of carefully selected leaf grown in the Vuelta Abajo District of Cuba, where the world's best tobacco grows.

In no other way than through the United System could you secure cigars of this size and quality for less than $11.00 by the hundred. The United System price is 7 cents each over the counter. Have a box sent to your house or office to-day.

Delivered prepaid by the hundred to any address in the United States on receipt of price. Remit to Flatiron Building, New York.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD FOR 3 JUMPS STANDING

Louis Mang Covered 35 Feet 10 Inches at Mohawk Games.

RAY EWRY MADE FORMER MARK

Figures for Three Standing Jumps, with Weights, Also Surpassed by the Winner.

Louis Mang of the Mohawk Athletic Club of the Bronx made a new world's record for three standing jumps of thirty-five feet ten inches at the games of the club, held on the grounds of the Mott Haven Athletic Club, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street and Lincoln Avenue, yesterday, beating by an inch and a quarter the former record of thirty-five feet eight and three-quarter inches, made by Ray C. Ewry of the New York Athletic Club at Celtic Park, Long Island City, on Sept. 7, 1903. Mang's performance is also better by an inch than the record for three jumps, with weights, made by W. S. Lawton at San Francisco, Cal., on May 13, 1876.

There were five other events yesterday, chief of which was a mile run, which was won by W. C. Bailey from the 20-yard mark, with Fred Seeley, (40 yards,) second. R. J. Doody, the scratch man, was unable to catch the leaders, and finished third.

The Mott Haven Athletic Club also held its monthly games at the same time, the events of the two clubs alternating. The best race was the mile and a half run, in which J. J. Donavan and J. P. Devlin, each of whom started from the 40-yard mark, made such a runaway of the event that all the other competitors dropped out. Donavan won by a few yards. The summary follows:

MOHAWK A. C. EVENTS.

50-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by H. L. Abbott, (13 feet;) F. Englehart, (scratch,) second; J. T. Bunt, (12 feet,) third. Time—0:05 1-5.

BELDAME IN THE HANDS OF THE HANDICAPPER

Great Filly's Engagements for Remainder of the Season.

CHAMPION HAS WON $75,470

$15,000 Hindoo Stakes and Oriental Handicap Are Features of Gravesend's Last Week.

As champion of the turf, with her right to the title firmly established by her remarkable record of victories won in the nearly six months that she has campaigned this season, Beldame will encounter the hardest tasks that have been set for her through the remainder of the season. She now practically is in the hands of the handicapper, and if she keeps her stake engagements at the important meetings left of the year's racing, she must take up the weights that her brilliant performances require in the eyes of the official handicapper. At Gravesend this week Beldame is in two stakes, both handicaps, while at Morris Park her engagements are of the same character, the great filly not having been nominated in the chief weight-for-age event of the meeting, the Woodlawn Vase, two miles and a quarter. Beldame's first stake of this week at Gravesend comes on Thursday, in the Oceanview Handicap, for three-year-olds, at one mile and a sixteenth, and though a number of fairly good colts are entered for that race, the interest of horsemen in the allotment of the weights will rest chiefly on the effort of the handicapper to bring together Beldame and Hamburg Belle, the filly that as a two-year-old was ranked the best of 1903. Beldame's second engagement at Gravesend is in the Oriental Handicap, at one mile and a quarter, for all ages, to be run on Saturday, and as the champion is as fresh and vigorous now as she was when she began the racing season, it only remains for the handicapper to suit the owner in the matter of the weights for Beldame to run in one of the two races.

The champion now has run fourteen races this season, beginning with the Carter Handicap on April 15, and has won twelve times at all distances from six furlongs up to a mile and three-quarters, her only defeat having been when she was third to Irish Lad and Tobeggan in the Metropolitan Handicap, and when she was second to Hermis at Brighton Beach in the Summer for the Futurity Handicap. Only four of her twelve victories were in filly stakes, and one a purse for fillies and mares, all the others having been won against all-comers, and the best of the number being the Saratoga Cup, the Brighton Cup, the September Stakes at Sheepshead Bay, the First and Second Specials, and the Carter Handicap.

In money Beldame has earned in her two years on the turf $75,470, her winnings as a two-year-old being $21,945, won in three victories and one second and one third, while she was twice unplaced.

Beldame's winnings for 1904, in the colors of Newton Bennett, amount to $53,525, putting her well forward with the season's biggest winners, though two colts of her age each has won more, J. R. Keene's Delhi being credited with $75,910, earned in ten races this season, and J. A. Drake's Ort Wells being credited with $49,135, earned in eleven races. Both of the colts, however, came in for the big prizes offered for three-year-olds, while Beldame's chief winnings were earned against older horses. Only two other horses of the season have won more than Beldame this season, both of these being two-year-olds—H. B. Duryea's Tanya, winner of the Futurity, with $55,235 to her credit, and Tanya, with $54,215 as the sum of her earnings.

The big features of the week's racing, which will end the fall meeting at Gravesend, are the $15,000 Hindoo Stakes, to be run to-morrow, and the O

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Last Week Was One of Confused and Inconsistent Movements.

Stocks Showed Weakness, but Bonds Improved — An Interesting Speculative Position Disclosed.

In the stock market last week there were two declines for each advance, but in the bond market there were more than two advances for each decline. Among the seventy-seven stocks which moved a point or more twenty-six closed lower; and among the thirty-nine bonds which enjoyed a similar range there were only eleven declines. At first glance there might seem to be an inference that investment buying was continuing in the face of speculative selling, but the reasoning is defective, for the present bond market takes its character from bonds scarcely less speculative than shares. It is necessary to conclude that the situation is somewhat confused in the interim between harvesting and selling the crops. When the fruits of the soil are turned into cash and become current in trade it is hardly too sanguine to expect a continuance of recent good feeling. Among the dozen most active properties there were seven declines, four advances, and Southern Railway closed unchanged. Union Pacific advanced 2⅝ and Missouri Pacific declined 1. These were the only properties to alter a point upon sales of 2,564,293 shares in a total business of 3,483,689. Each of the Steel stocks moved an eighth. Altogether, these facts illustrate the often noted characteristic that the movement is free only when it is upward, and that the opposition to the fall is almost invincible. Whether this support is due to improving conditions or to the brute force of money and manipulation is the interesting question presented by the markets just now.

The speculative character of the bond market appears from the variety of bond which is most active. At the head is Consolidated Tobacco 4s, of which 4,528 were sold at a loss of three-quarters. Next come Union Pacific convertibles, with a total of 3,295 against 1,580 for the previous week. Unusual interest attaches to this issue because of its relation to the balance of power in the Union Pacific finances. If it is to be preserved unaltered these bonds cannot be allowed to float about unprotected where railways are sometimes burglariously bought over night. Oregon Short Line participating 4s also sprang into sudden activity, 588 being sold against 93 for the previous week. Here is said to be a good place to look for the first signs of the adjustment of the Northern Securities dispute. The collateral for these bonds is Northern Securities stock, and the bonds are entitled over and above their regular 4 per cent. to any cash dividends upon the collateral in excess of the stipulated 4 per cent. It is difficult to see how a matter in litigation can be adjusted without taking the court into consideration, but continued activity and strength in these bonds would not be consistent with the idea that there was not something progressing and not generally known. The volume of business in Steel 5s was large, 2,338, but the Rock Island issues were most less active, and did not fully hold their r cent advance.

ONE SUMMER HOME'S WORK.

Fifty Children Who Were Helpless Made Fit for School.

The Summer home maintained throughout the season at Long Branch by the Montgomery Street Branch of the Guild for Crippled Children of the Poor has closed, and the fifty children who spent the warm months there have been taken back to their parents to remain until Oct. 3, when the school at 20 Montgomery Street will be reopened.

The children were received at the Long Branch home on June 24. They were cared for there by trained attendants, and had the most nourishing food and all kinds of amusements. That their time might not be spent without profit, teachers visited the home twice a week, giving lessons in chair caning, basketry, sewing, and fancy needlework. As a result of the tender care bestowed upon them some of the children, who were practically helpless when they reached the home by the sea, have recovered their health and strength, and will be able to attend the public schools. Mrs. N. Steinberg has been in charge of the Summer home, as head of the Guild's committee. She has been assisted by Mrs. James Leopold and Mrs. Edward E. Wise.

Bishop Andrews Dedicates Church.

The new Methodist church at Prospect Avenue and One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street was dedicated by Bishop Edward G. Andrews yesterday morning. Impressive services marked the event, and an address was delivered by the Bishop. About $25,000 has already been spent on the foundations and basement of the church, which are now completed, and it will take about $40,000 more to complete the structure.

ANOTHER PROP FALLS FROM UNDER ALLIANCE

Probability of Bricklayers Going Out Made More Remote.

PLASTERERS MAY SETTLE

Mass Meeting to be Held to Discuss Terms — Great Dissatisfaction Among Idle Carpenters.

Now that the nine bricklayers' unions in Manhattan and the Bronx have cast a decisive vote against consolidation, there is a belief that a quietus has been put on the hopes of the leaders in the Building Trades Alliance of drawing the bricklayers into the building war. The bricklayers have been working alongside the new men employed under the arbitration agreement and classed by the alliance as non-union men. For some time efforts have been made to get the bricklayers to vote against working with these men, but only one or two unions voted in the affirmative.

If consolidation had taken place it would have been easier to bring the bricklayers into line, and a last attempt would have been made to get them to stand by the Building Trades Alliance.

President Charles L. Eidlitz of the Building Trades Employers' Association in discussing the matter said last night that there would have been more likelihood of the bricklayers becoming involved in the present strike if the vote had been for consolidation. He added:

"It is safe to say that the bricklayers will now attend to their business. As to working with non-union men, as they call the new men, they have worked with them without protest both this year and last, and will continue minding their business."

It was said yesterday that the Plasterers' Society, from which the ornamental branch has seceded, and the employers were nearer a settlement. A mass meeting of the Plasterers' Society will be held to-morrow night, at which the German branch of the union will submit a proposition made on behalf of the employers. At a meeting of the Germans on Saturday night James Thompson, President of the Employing Plasterers' Association, was present, and said:

"We would like to have you back at work, and I am sure you would like to be back, but you can only come back under the arbitration agreement. As you know, we are not against organized labor, and will continue to employ union men. If work can be resumed we can promise that the arbitration agreement, which must be accepted first, will be modified if you wish, as it no doubt is capable of modification in some respects."

Forty-five delegates have been sent by the Plasterers' Society to the annual convention of the international association, which begins in Philadelphia this morning. The convention will be asked to take some action in reference to the situation in this city.

The practical certainty that there will be no strike of the bricklayers has had a demoralizing effect upon the thousands of idle carpenters. Some of them are getting about a dollar a day from the relief fund, and an application has been made to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters for $50,000. This would not last very long, however.

BRONX SAUSAGE POISONING.

Dr. Reibling Dead—Mrs. Walsh Dangerously Ill—Police Puzzled.

Dr. Albert Reibling, a dentist, who lived at 2,397 Cambreling Avenue, in the Bronx, is dead after a peculiar illness, and a Mrs. Clara Walsh, who lived at the same address, is dangerously ill and has been removed to the Fordham Hospital, suffering from a malady that resembles exactly the disease to which Reibling succumbed. Mrs. Walsh told Coroner Berry that a few days ago Reibling bought a quantity of bologna sausage, which both ate, and that the following day they became very ill. She added that Reibling and she had a disagreement a few days previous, and that now she thinks it significant that he would not allow her to call a physician after they became so ill.

The day after they became ill, she said, Reibling insisted that both eat more of the sausage, and that the day after that he once again insisted that more of the sausage should be eaten. During his illness Mrs. Walsh said that Reibling repeatedly told her he was tired of living, but that it was not until Saturday night that she attached any significance to the remark. Then she called in Dr. Post of 2,121 Bathgate Avenue, who diagnosed the illness as ptomaine poisoning. Soon afterward Reibling died.

Coroner's Physician Reigelman performed an autopsy on Reibling yesterday, but failed to find any trace of the more common poisons. The police are trying to find out where the sausage came from, but have been unsuccessful so far. None of it remains in the house.

COURT CENSURES POOR LOSER.

Magistrate Crane, However, Fines Prisoners Taken at Pistol Point.

Fourteen negroes were fined $3 each in Harlem Court by Magistrate Crane yesterday morning on charges of disorderly conduct in the rooms of the Manhattan Republican Club, a colored organization, at 7 Lawrence Street.

Detectives McEvoy and Black, who arrested them at pistol point, were called to the place on the complaint of Leroy Turner of 508 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, a colored youth, who claimed that he had been cheated out of all his money in a crooked "crap" game, and then thrust out without excess of ceremony.

In court yesterday, all the prisoners declared that the alleged quarrel was merely a political argument in which two factions had taken sides, and, as happens often in politics, the discussion became just a little exciting.

Magistrate Crane gave no credence to Turner's story of having been cheated in the club rooms and roughly treated. He disposed of the youth's complaint by saying.

"Any man who loses his money and then crawls deserves to lose it, and his word is not worth a cent."

He thought the detectives' story strong enough, however, to fine the prisoners.

TURKS WERE PLAYING POKER.

But Man Has Right to Entertain His Friends, Magistrate Holds.

Seven Turks who were arrested early yesterday morning for playing poker in a room at 219 West Twenty-fifth Street were arraigned later before Magistrate Pool in the Jefferson Market Court and discharged. The men were arrested by Detective McAdams of the West Twentieth Street Station, who said a woman living in the house next door told him a gambling house was being conducted by one of the Turks.

Only one of the men, who was charged with being the keeper of the house, was tried. He said that it was in his own room that the game was being played, and the Magistrate discharged all with the remark, "I know of no law against a man entertaining his friends in his own home."

Burned Oil Bark's Crew Here.

The Ward liner Saratoga, in yesterday from Nassau, brought to port Capt. Beeman and ten members of the crew of the bark James A. Wright of Philadelphia, which was lost at Harbor Island on Sept. 8. The Wright sailed from Philadelphia on Aug. 18 with a cargo of crude oil, and when off Harbor Island, owing to a strong set of the current, drifted ashore, caught fire, and became a total loss. The crew managed to save their effects, and made their way to Nassau, where the American Consul secured passage for them on the Saratoga.

LA BRETAGNE BRINGS FRENCH LABOR DELEGATES

Here to Study American Industries and Trades Unions.

UNDER OFFICIAL AUTHORITY

Count de la Vaulx, the Continental Aeronaut, Comes to Interest Americans in Balloons.

The French liner La Bretagne, in yesterday from Havre, had among her passengers the delegation of French labor men who have been sent over by the French Government to study labor conditions in America and incidentally to take in the St. Louis Exposition. The delegation is in charge of M. Albert Metin, Professor of Political Economy in the Colonial and Naval Cadets Schools, and the representative of the French Ministry of Commerce. The delegation is composed of the following:

L. Benoist, Technical School of Shoemaking, Nice.
H. Buisson, a Director of Le Travail, Cooperative Union of Painters and Glaziers, Paris.
H. Dugue, Federal Union of Ironworkers, Havre.
A. Fouclause, Director of the Co-operative Union of Musical Instrument Makers, Paris.
C. Gignoux, Director of the Co-operative Union of Printers and Typograhs, Nimes.
E. Hyolet, Hatmakers' Union, Paris.
M. Jaquet, National Union of Post and Telegraphers, Paris.
J. Le Blanc, National Federation of Engineers, La Valois.
J. Malbranque, National Union of Railway Workers, Amiens.
Charles Rousseau, Director of the Union of Painters, Puteaux.
E. Martin, member of the Wool Spinners' Union and a member of the State Superior Council of Labor.
Charles Vuicte, Director of the Co-operative Union of Industries of Precision, Paris.

A. Manoury of the Central Union of Co-operators of Paris, who is a member of the Jury of Awards at St. Louis, met the delegation. After two days in New York the Frenchmen will visit in succession Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Quebec, and Boston, returning to New York about Oct. 20. Ten days will be spent in St. Louis. Concerning the mission to this country, Prof. Metin said yesterday:

"Our object in visiting America is to visit and study the most important of your industries, meet the leaders and members of the labor organizations, and generally speaking, to get in touch with American democracy. The delegation may be compared with the delegation from England brought over by Alfred Moseley, but unlike it it is under the auspices of the French Government. On our return each member of the delegation will write a report of his observations, which the Government will have printed."

Speaking of Prime Minister Combes, Prof. Metin said:

"The Prime Minister has the support of the labor element in the national Legislature. In France the Government is more closely allied with labor than in any other country, and the Socialists are now preparing to introduce an old-age pension bill for the benefit of aged laborers."

Count de la Vaulx, the French aeronaut, was another of La Bretagne's passengers. He comes for the purpose of interesting American capital in his balloons. On the pier yesterday the Count talked of his 2,000-kilometer journey from Paris to Kiew, in Little Russia, which journey he made in 31 hours, and also of his flight across the Mediterranean, which latter voyage was made under the auspices of the French Government. The trip across the Mediterranean required 42 hours, despite the fact that the distance was only 250 kilometers. In explaining this Count de la Vaulx said that the rules of the flight required him to take a certain course, from which he was not to deviate, and it was therefore necessary to keep the balloon in the prescribed course that was responsible for the long time required to get across the sea. The Count has two styles of balloons, one for traveling over land and another for voyages over water. The land balloon has no motor, and the bag is round like an ordinary balloon, while the water balloon is equipped with a motor and has an egg-shaped bag. Count de la Vaulx also discussed his flight from Paris to Hull, England, a feat never before attempted.

Also on Le Bretagne were four naval officers who have been assigned to duty on the cruiser Troude, which vessel is now in this port; Baron Liebig, and Count Perotti de la Tocca, the French Vice Consul at San Francisco.

La Bretagne brought 2,020,025f. in specie.

CHILDREN SAVED AT FIRE.

Firemen Rescue Them with Ladders at Grand Street Blaze.

Fire that started early last evening in the cellar of the five-story tenement at 413 Grand Street drove all the tenants into the street in alarm and caused a property damage of $3,000. Owing to the start the blaze had when the firemen reached the scene a second alarm was sent in.

The fire started at the foot of a ventilating shaft and smoke quickly filled the house. Tenants became alarmed and rushed down and out by way of the stairs. On the second floor lived Jacob Lederman, his wife, and five children, from twelve to two years old. Visiting the Ledermans was Ellis Schwartz, his wife, and three children of Boston. Mrs. Lederman says they became alarmed and ran into the street, forgetting for a time their children. The men of Truck 18 put up a short ladder and took down that way those of the eight children that had not had presence of mind enough to run down the stairs. None was hurt.

BLEW OUT THE GAS AND DIED.

He Had Lived in Ireland and Staten Island and Used Lamps.

Patrick Hawley, a clerk in a Ninth Avenue grocery store, was found dead in his room, at 128 West Sixty-third Street, yesterday morning, having been asphyxiated by gas.

Hawley emigrated to this country a short time ago, and unfortunately spent much of his time working in Staten Island and living at a house where lamps were used. A week ago he came to Manhattan and took a room in the boarding house kept by Mrs. George Flock at 128 West Sixty-third Street. Hawley had never been a gas jet or used gas before, and when he retired last night he thought the light ought to be blown out as candles are in Ireland.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

Brass Beds de Luxe

A Remarkable Exhibit at Equally Remarkable Prices— For One Week

A "Flint Quality" brass bed whether one of our lowest priced beds at $20.00, or one especially designed and built to order costing $300, is the Standard of Metal Furniture Excellence.

Every detail from selection of Materials, through the forty processes of manufacture, particularly the brazing, finishing and rigid adjustment of the parts, and the critical inspection of the finished product is directed by our Experts.

Flint brass beds are the aristocracy of bed room furniture.

The new designs are now on view and for sale. We have manufactured on a sufficiently extensive scale to enable us to sell these beds at one-fifth to one-third less than beds of equal quality have ever before been sold.

Persons who heretofore have thought a desirable brass bed could not be purchased under Sixty Dollars, will be interested in several of our new, heavy post all brass beds at $20.00, to $50.00.

Appearance and Quality

In the purchase of a brass bed it is wise to be quite as thoughtful of quality as appearance. If the quality is not in the bed the good appearance will not last.

Polished, Satin or Polet Finishes, as desired and widths from three feet to four feet six inches at one price, in each design.

The Famous "Flint Quality" bedding is also specially priced with equal attractiveness.

Our factory facilities enable us to make to order promptly and at moderate cost both beds and bedding to meet special requirements.

The New Fall Overcoats

Since comparison determines the relative merit of things, compare our overcoats with the ordinary ready-made kinds. It will serve to give you a very high opinion of Vogel Brothers overcoats. First compare our stock as a whole—the vastness and variety of it. We present 82 new and distinct Fall overcoat models, whereas few stores show more than a tenth of that number. Then compare garment for garment—in the Vogel Brothers overcoat you'll note the shapely shoulder, the snugfitting collar, the coat front that always holds its shape; all of these are features which are lacking in ordinary ready-made overcoats. Our prices range from $10 to $28.

At $12. Top coats in the new shades of Oxford gray, brown and tan coverts—also black.

At $15. Silk lined medium length overcoats of rich black unfinished worsteds.

At $15. Cravenette overcoats of Oxford gray—50 inches long.

EUROPE SKEPTICAL ABOUT PEACE CONGRESS

President's Promise Not Taken Seriously by British Papers.

SEE HOME POLITICS IN IT

State Department Soon to Communicate with the Powers—Conference May Be Called Early Next Year.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt's announcement that he will call a second Hague conference has not set this part of the world afire. The announcement is ignored in editorial comment by most of the London papers, and where discussed is not treated seriously, but rather as a bit of political play incident to the Presidential campaign.

The Paris correspondent of The Times says:

"If any such suggestion comes before the war is over the belligerents might see in it disguised mediation. If on the other hand it is only put forward after the war is over, it will probably lead to little more than pious aspirations such as those that figured so prominently at the last Peace Conference.

"If President Roosevelt will read over the confidential reports from the United States delegation to The Hague he will find abundant evidence that the best of friends, even when they meet to promote the cause of peace, are not always in agreement.

"It would, in fact, be a rather risky experiment to assemble another convention with universal peace as its object before the powerful rulers of the world prove they have peace not only on their lips, but in their hearts, and until they cease to act upon the old adage, 'Si vis pacem, para bellum.'"

PRESIDENT SOON TO ACT.

Formal Call May Be Issued Early in the Coming Year.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Foreign Office has received no official intimation from Washington of the intention of President Roosevelt to call a second Peace Conference at The Hague. It states that if such an invitation is extended undoubtedly Great Britain will be represented.

It is suggested, however, in official and diplomatic circles that the moment for a peace conference is not opportune in view of the war prevailing in the Far East and the unwillingness of the belligerents to bind themselves to any act which would restrict their operations. The officials and diplomats expressed the hope that the President when he extends the invitation will fix a date so that the meeting will occur after Japan and Russia have arranged for peace.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt's announcement of his intention to call a second peace conference attracts much attention here.

The Foreign Office expresses itself generally as sympathetic toward the idea if the President's propositions are confined to practical, tangible measures without attempting anything like general disarmament or an adjudication of difficulties which touch the sovereignty and honor of States, or would be involved in any scheme of compulsory arbitration. The Foreign Office emphasizes the fact that Germany regards The Hague Arbitration Court as an institution capable of further development along practical lines.

Among the foreign embassies here it was learned that the idea of an international peace conference during the Russo-Japanese war would be considered inopportune by Russia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt, in his announcement on Saturday to the delegates of the Interparliamentary Union that at an early date he would invite the nations of the world to send delegates to a second peace conference at The Hague did not indicate in his address the probable time of his issuance of the call. It can be stated, however, that he will not await the conclusion of peace between Japan and Russia, both signatories to The Hague convention. It is his present intention, in about six weeks, to bring the matter to the attention of the nations of the world, with a view to ascertaining their desires as to the time and place of holding the second conference. These preliminary inquiries will be made through the Department of State.

As soon thereafter as the replies received shall warrant, the President will issue his formal call for the conference, which probably will be early in the coming year.

CORTELYOU SEES PRESIDENT.

Reports as to the Campaign's Progress, Especially in New York.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Chairman Cortelyou of the Republican National Committee arrived here from New York late this afternoon, and was in conference with President Roosevelt until midnight regarding the political situation. He gave the President a résumé of what is being done in the various States, especially in New York, and his opinion of the present condition of political affairs. Mr. Cortelyou declined to make any statement regarding his talk with the President, except in the most general terms. He will leave for New York to-morrow.

Mr. Cortelyou's mission here was of a personal as well as of a political character. His family is expected to return to Washington shortly, and he came partly to arrange for their homecoming.

THE POPE ISSUES A PROTEST.

Churches in Rome to Make Atonement for Free Thinkers' Congress.

ROME, Sept. 26.—The Pope has addressed to Cardinal Respighi, his Vicar General, a protest against the Congress of Freethinkers held here last week, and the Vicar General will invite all Catholics to attend a service of atonement, to be held in all the basilicas of Rome on Thursday. In his letter the Pope says:

"A new cause of bitterness has been added to the many anxieties which, especially in our times, accompany the government of the Universal Church. We have learned with infinite sorrow that it is asserted that the cultivators of free thought have met in Rome, while the painful echo of their speeches is unfortunately confirmed by their grim designs. Intelligence is the noblest gift the Creator has granted us, but it becomes sacrilegious when subtracted from dependency on the Almighty or rejects the direction and comfort of Divine truth."

Continuing, the Pope says the insult was rendered the more grave by the Freethinkers' meeting in Rome, the city which had been destined as a depository of faith, thus taking from Rome its designation as the tranquil, respected See of Christ's Vicar.

"We therefore," the Pope adds, "will make ours the offense offered to God, gathering in our heart all its bitterness."

The Pope recognizes that even on this occasion God sent comfort through the manifestation of filial affection received yesterday from the 1,000 members of the Catholic Association of French Youths, but he wishes to have in Rome a solemn function of atonement for the outrage to Divine Majesty and for the vindication of the honor and good name of the city.

GENERAL RECIPROCITY—LODGE

Favors Policy Which Would Benefit the Whole Country.

NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 26.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was the guest of the Newton Club at a dinner to-night, and in a speech following the dinner advocated a policy of reciprocity that would bring compensation to the United States for concessions made, and not prove inimical to American interests. The others present included Congressman Butler Ames and Congressman Samuel L. Powers.

"Every one," said Senator Lodge, in the course of his remarks, "is in favor of reciprocity or any other policy which will enlarge our foreign markets, provided that such reciprocity or other similar policy does not involve greater sacrifice than the proposed enlargement of the foreign market is worth. But because I favor reciprocity under these conditions, I do not promise to support any scheme of legislation or any treaty that any one chooses to label reciprocity.

"Either the Democrats do not favor reciprocity or they do not favor a reduction of duties, because the two together are impossible and incompatible. I should be glad to vote for a reciprocity treaty with Canada or any other country which was beneficial to our business interests, and not injurious to American industry, agriculture, or labor. But there is no use in shutting our eyes to the practical difficulty which the history of these treaties discloses.

"I think we should consider very carefully whether the true way to improve our foreign markets is not by general legislation which will bring a general reciprocity and which shall bear equally on all parts of the United States, and if successful, bring benefit to the whole country."

PICK COTTON BY MOONLIGHT.

Georgians Work Double Shifts Because of Scarcity of Labor.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 26.—To save the fast ripening crop of this section the planters have put laborers to work picking cotton by moonlight. These scenes of activity in the cotton fields at night were necessitated by the scarcity of labor from which the South is suffering.

The pickers are worked day and night, taking a rest during the hottest part of the day. A prominent planter has declared after a visit through the cotton States that the labor problem will cause much cotton to go to waste in the fields. The crop in this territory is very large and in splendid condition, only a few fields having been touched by the boll weevil.

CARNEGIE FOR RACE EMPIRE.

Believes That This Country, Canada, and England Will Unite.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Sept. 26.—A Canadian Associated Press cable from London says:

Denying a statement in a letter from Francis Wayland Glen, that he favored Canadian independence, Andrew Carnegie says in a letter to The London Daily Mail:

"Whenever Canada makes a change I think it will be her destiny to annex the United States as Scotland did England. After this is accomplished the motherland will be glad to unite with her then united children."

Carnegie denies that he favored Canadian independence. He declares that, on the contrary, he is a race imperialist, holding the belief that it is almost as criminal for Canada and the United States to remain separate as it would be for Scotland and England. British imperialism was forecast by the Motherland to mean destiny.

Glen, who lives in New York, sent a letter to Ottawa papers. Among other sensational statements was one charging Canadian politicians with having asked Carnegie to furnish money for election purposes.

MEN RETURN, UNIONS IGNORED.

Nine Thousand Go Back to Harvester Works and the Pullman Company.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Nine thousand men returned to work without union regulations of any sort to-day, when the three Chicago branches of the International Harvester Works and the Pullman Company reopened their shops after a shut-down of two weeks. The men not only returned to their former places as individuals, but they also agreed to reductions in pay of 10 to 20 per cent.

The International Harvester Works announced that the plants would be operated on a basis of 57½ hours a week, instead of 54, with no increase in wages. The men accepted the ultimatum of the company without any serious manifestation of discontent, and all of the old employes who could obtain work accepted the new regulations. To-night a call was issued for a special meeting of representatives of all unions having members employed by the International Harvester Company to consider the conditions at the three plants, but the general belief is that the men will remain at work under the new conditions.

FOURTH ARMY FORMING TO STRIKE KUROPATKIN

Russians Expecting Another Great Flanking Coup.

KUROKI TO CROSS HUN RIVER

Japanese Attempt to Seize Kaou-Tou Pass—Czar's Reorganization Plan Pleases the St. Petersburg Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 26.—The cause of the extreme deliberation in the Japanese advance on Mukden was explained by a dispatch received from Gen. Kuropatkin this afternoon, which indicates that Field Marshal Oyama has not yet concentrated his forces. Fresh troops are constantly arriving at Bentsiaputze, while others, which recently reached Liao-Yang, are marching up the Tai-Tse River to Sian-Chan, (about sixty miles southeast of Mukden.) These reinforcements presumably come from Japan.

It is now evident that as soon as the fourth Japanese army at Sian-chan is sufficiently strong the Japanese intend to resort to their favorite flanking tactics, move a formidable array against Kuropatkin's left and compel the evacuation of Sin-tsin-tin, (sixty miles east of Mukden.) They are evidently reconnoitring the ground over which the Sian-chan army will march up and cross the river.

In the meanwhile Gen. Kuroki is trying to seize and cross the Hun River far east of Mukden. Thence he will move down the river and co-operate with the Fourth Army from Sian-chan, while Gens. Oku and Nodzu engage Kuropatkin's attention south of Mukden. The attacks on Da Pass and San-lung-ku on Sept. 20 were the first symptoms of this vast flanking movement.

Kuropatkin now reports that Japanese scouts have been encountered near the Hun River, half way to Mukden, trying to seize Kaou-tou Pass, ten miles northeast of Bentsiaputze, in order to clear the way to Fushun, and that Oku's and Nodzu's outposts have been engaged in skirmishing with Cossacks near Inpu, between Bentsiaputze and the railroad.

After reviewing the troops at Odessa the Emperor will go to Kishineff and bid farewell to the Fourteenth Division, famous for its passage of the Danube under Gen. Dragomiroff. The latter, probably will attend the ceremony. Gen. Dragamiroff is greatly enfeebled in health, which may render impossible his going to the Far East as Chief of Staff of Grand Duke Nicholas, should the latter be appointed.

The reorganization of the forces in the Far East by the appointment of Gen. Grippenberg, commander of the Third Army Corps in the Province of Vilna, to command the Second Army, has been received with much satisfaction by the press.

Even the Novoe Vremya, which has been urging the promotion of Gen. Kuropatkin to the rank of Commander in Chief, recognizes the impossibility of confiding the vast host now to be assembled to the commander of the forces actually in the field. Other papers warmly indorse the motives for the formation of the Second Army and the evident determination to prosecute the war with increased vigor.

The Sviet, whose editor, M. Kamaroff, formerly was a Colonel in the army, and therefore peculiarly fitted to appreciate the significance of the new departure, says:

"Hitherto Gen. Kuropatkin has been chief of all the land forces in the Far East. Although enjoying the fullest independence, as a matter of fact he was appointed in the character of the Viceroy's assistant. Nevertheless, all the responsibility was his. Now he will share it with Gen. Grippenberg, and both will be under the guidance of a Commander in Chief."

The name of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, Inspector General of Cavalry, early in the war was on everybody's lips as likely to be made Commander in Chief, and it continues to be reported that he will be placed in command of the Russian forces in the Far East, but no paper here ventures to publish the rumor, pending an official announcement of his appointment.

MUKDEN, Sept. 24, (Delayed.)—The Japanese do not appear to be moving, but it is believed that they will begin a general advance within a day or two. They are continually receiving reinforcements.

Russian scouts who penetrated beyond Bentsiaputze saw large encampments of Japanese, and a strong column is reported to be forming northwest of Liao-Yang. A thousand Japanese are daily crossing the Tai-tse River over three bridges which have been built above the railroad.

MAY DASH FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Russian Naval Organ Admits Chance for Czar's Ships Is Small.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 27, (Tuesday.)—The naval organ Kotlin to-day publishes an article predicting that Rear Admiral Wiren will attempt to break out of Port Arthur with his ships and return to Europe.

The paper admits that the task of escaping from Admiral Togo appears to be hopeless if one takes for comparison Admiral Cervera's attempt to get away from Santiago, but adds that Wiren's men, unlike the Spaniards, have had plenty of war experience.

Plenty of Coal at Port Arthur.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Telegraphing from Che-Foo, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "Photographs received from Port Arthur which were taken as late as Sept. 14 show that piles of coal stacked on the Tiger's Tail at the beginning of the war are still there."

RUSSIAN LACK OF DISCIPLINE.

Disclosures in Papers Seized in Abandoned Headquarters.

LONDON, Sept. 27, (Tuesday.)—The Daily Mail's Liao-Yang correspondent says:

"The discovery in abandoned Russian headquarters here of a number of documents and orders from Viceroy Alexieff cashiering officers for abandoning positions and for drunkenness, &c., and censuring officers for lawless treatment of Chinese, waste of ammunition, and other offenses, proves an amazing lack of discipline in Gen. Kuropatkin's army."

SIGSBEE EXACTED APOLOGY.

Outrages Committed Against Our Consulate at Carthagena.

COLON, Sept. 26.—The American Consulate at Carthagena, having twice recently been besmeared with mud, Rear Admiral Sigsbee, with his flagship, the Newark, was ordered to proceed to Carthagena and investigate the circumstances. The gunboat Newport, Commander Mertz, joined the flagship on Sept. 16.

In a communication to the Governor, Luis Patron, Admiral Sigsbee says in part:

"I find your expressions of regret for the acts of indecency on behalf of yourself and your Government satisfactory, but that sufficient publicity has not been given to them. I suggest additional precautions to prevent a recurrence of such incidents and fuller publicity of the Government's expressions of regret, in order to avoid a friendly visit assuming a more difficult feature."

Gov. Patron complied by reiterating his regrets.

SENATOR GORMAN CONFIDENT.

Tells Maryland Leaders the Campaign of 1892 Is Being Repeated.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 26.—Frank Furst, a leading Democrat of Baltimore, returned to-day from New York, where he talked with Senator Gorman concerning the political outlook. "I was delighted," said Mr. Furst "to find the Senator well satisfied with the situation, and confident that Judge Parker will win.

"Mr. Gorman said that the campaign this year reminded him very much of the compaign of 1892. In that year there was much apathy on both sides, the candidates being Cleveland and Harrison, and the politicians were all at sea as to the outcome of the election. Cleveland was elected by a large majority after a very quiet campaign. The Senator says that the people this year are quietly studying the issues, just as in 1892, and he feels that the politicians will be surprised by the outcome."

Gen. L. Victor Baughman, Maryland member of the National Committee, and one of Mr. Gorman's closest lieutenants, also returned from New York with encouraging news of the Democratic situation.

"The Democratic managers at headquarters," he said, "are aware of the efforts—mind, I only say efforts—of the Republican committee to secure contributions of money from large corporations. These efforts do not seem to be meeting with success as formerly, for the large business concerns are perfectly satisfied that Judge Parker's election would bring no disaster to the country, and many of them decline to contribute."

WRECK VICTIMS PRAISE COX.

University Student Plunged Through Car Window to Warn Others.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Victims of the New York Central Railroad wreck at Lyons yesterday morning are talking about the courage of James Cox of Holyoke, Mass., a student and athlete, who was on his way to the University of Michigan.

When the sleeper was ditched Cox plunged through the window, and, seeing the approaching freight train, ran along the overturned cars, smashing windows with a stone and warning the terrified passengers of their danger. By sheer strength Cox dragged several passengers from the cars before the freight struck the wreck. He was uninjured and proceeded on his way.

PROFESSOR A SUICIDE.

Philadelphia High School Teacher Shoots Himself on the Street.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—Eugene W. Manning, Assistant Professor of German in the Central High School, shot himself at Seventeenth and Buttonwood Streets, tonight. No reason is assigned for the act except that the Professor suffered from insomnia.

Prof. Manning with his fourteen year old son Eugene boarded with Mrs Newman at 103 Green Street. He left his boarding house about 8 o'clock to-night saying he was going for a walk. He had gone only two squares when at the Seventeenth Street entrance to Baldwins locomotive works he drew a revolver and shot himself in the mouth. The bullet penetrated the head through and through causing instant death. He was identified by a letter addressed to Eugene W. Manning, Ph. D., 638 Green Street.

Prof. Manning was fifty years old and a graduate of Cornell University. He came to the Central High School last year and began his second term this month.

SHERIFF OUTWITTED MOB.

Negro Thought to Be Assailant of Mrs. Boggan of Patton, Penn., in Jail.

EBENSBURG, Penn., Sept. 26.—John Gabin, a negro whose appearance tallies exactly with the description of the assailant of Mrs. Thomas Boggan of Patton, Penn., was arrested to-day at Hooversville, Penn., near Johnstown, Penn., and hurriedly removed to the Ebensburg jail by Sheriff Lenhart and deputies.

Hostile demonstration were made at Johnstown, but the officers outwitted the crowd and safely landed their prisoner on the Ebensburg train. At Ebensburg a crowd of 500 shouted "Lynch him!" Early in the day the Commissioners of Cambria County offered $2,000 reward for the capture of Mrs. Boggan's assailant.

SLUMP IN CHICAGO WHEAT PIT.

Report That Big Holders Were Unloading Causes Break of 4 Cents.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Under the weight of heavy realizing sales the wheat market here broke an even 4 cents to-day, the December option selling off to 110½. The low point on May was reached at 111½. The declining tendency was accelerated by the execution of numerous stop loss orders.

The principal factor in causing the sharp break in prices was the intimation that several big holders were quietly disposing of their lines. An increase of nearly 2,000,000 bushels in the visible supply and surprisingly heavy primary receipts were minor factors. The market closed practically at the low point, final quotations on May being at 111¾. December closed at 110¾.

CAR AND WAGON CRASH; THREE ARE BADLY HURT

Lighter Vehicle Crumpled Like Paper Against Elevated Pillar.

ONE MAN CUT FROM WRECK

Faints as Axemen Finish—Girl and Conductor Hurled to Street—Police Seek Motorman.

Several persons were injured, three seriously, last night when a north-bound Third Avenue car pushed a laundry wagon into an elevated railroad pillar between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, and then plowed through the wagon. Those seriously injured were Joseph Smart, the conductor of the car, who was bruised and cut and got a fractured skull; Joseph Freund, twenty-seven years old, of 221 East Thirteenth Street, whose left leg was cut and who was hurt badly in the groin; Nora Burke, seventeen years old, of 720 Third Avenue, who was badly bruised on the right side and otherwise hurt. All were removed to Flower Hospital.

Antonio Osso of 204 East One Hundred and Seventh Street, the driver of the wagon; M. B. Fishbone of 25 Allen Street, and a child whose name was not learned were slightly injured. Other passengers were badly shaken up.

The car was in charge of Motorman Daniel O'Donnell. The laundry wagon was just ahead of the car and going in the same direction. The passengers say that the car was going at a lively rate of speed and that the motorman clanged his bell. Osso started to turn the wagon east from the track, and just as the horse cleared the tracks and the wagon had started to turn east the car struck it behind with full force. The wagon was jammed into the pillar and the car crumpled it up like so much paper.

The car was of the combination variety. Conductor Smart was riding on the footboard and he was swept off into the street, landing on his head.

Freund was on the third seat from the front. The force of the collision threw him from the car, and he fell between the footboard and a wheel hub. Miss Burke, who had been sitting near Freund, was thrown over him and against the wagon, from which she bounded to the street. Freund was caught in such a manner that he could not extricate himself and was suffering excruciating pain as he called for help. Thomas McCusker of 343 East Thirty-third Street, who is powerfully built, was passing, and, seeing Freund's condition, went to help him. He found, however, that he could not aid the man without an axe. One was procured in a near-by laundry, and McCusker set to work cutting away the wreckage. He was aided in a few minutes by Firemen Scanlon and Falls of Truck 2 in East Fiftieth Street, who had been summoned on a still alarm. Freund fainted just as he was released.

A hurry call was sent in for an ambulance and also for the reserves of the East Fifty-first Street Station. An ambulance arrived from Flower Hospital, four minutes after the call was sent in, with Drs. Taylor and McDuffie.

Freund and Conductor Smart were found to be in a very serious condition, and Miss Burke was unconscious. After several minor injuries had been dressed, the three worst hurt were hurried to the hospital. It is thought that the conductor cannot recover, and it is doubtful if Freund survives.

Driver Osso was thrown from the seat of his wagon to the street and received a slight scalp wound. Big baskets full of hotel laundry were scattered about the streets.

The cars were blocked for about fifteen minutes. In the excitement the motorman got away, and Detective O'Neill was sent to the car barn to arrest him.

SENATOR HOAR IN A STUPOR.

His End Thought to be Only a Question of a Few Days.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 26.—The following bulletin on Senator Hoar's condition was given out at the Senator's residence this morning:

"The Senator slept all night and is in a stupor this morning. He did not take food or medicine during the night. The end is not immediately expected."

The sick man has failed gradually since last Friday, and there have been indications that his mind was being affected by the increasing weakness. Gen. Hoar, however, said that the Senator might live several days.

Dr. Warren R. Gilman, who is attending the Senator, gave out a statement, saying that "unless some extraordinary change for the better takes place he cannot live very long."

The members of the family are now in constant attendance at the bedside, as they were a few weeks ago when the end seemed near.

STURDY FIREMAN ASKS REWARD

Wants Salvage for Saving Tug, Alone, in Fierce Storm.

TRENTON, Sept. 26.—Because he succeeded in steering the steam tug John Hughes past the rocks of the Delaware Breakwater and beaching her after the rest of the crew had abandoned her, Fireman John Rinovitch has filed a claim for salvage in the United States District Court.

On the night of Sept. 12 the tug was lying moored to the iron pier at Lewes, according to the bill, when the terrific wind and rain storm that did damage along the coast came up. There were on board at the time the mate, the Chief Engineer, Second Engineer, two firemen, two deckhands, and the steward. The heavy seas badly damaged the tug by pounding her against the pier, and when two of the three hawsers that moored her to the dock parted the mate ordered all hands ashore. The order was promptly obeyed by all but Rinovitch.

Rinovitch, according to the bill, succeeded, with the utmost difficulty, in steering the craft past the stone breakwater, and after five hours of exertion, lasting from midnight until 5 o'clock in the morning, he succeeded in beaching the tug. She had four feet of water in her hold. He started the steam pump, and while engaged in pumping out the water the Captain, mate, and Chief Engineer arrived.

But for his work, the claimant declares, the tug, which is less than a year old and worth $45,000, would have been a total wreck. Rinovitch makes no specific claim, but asks the court to award him a fair amount for his services.

VESUVIUS STILL VERY ACTIVE.

Eruption on the Pompeii Side Becomes Threatening.

NAPLES, Sept. 26.—The eruption of Mount Vesuvius continues, and although it has somewhat decreased, it is still most imposing and its vividness has been augmented by the breaking away of the crust around the crater, which is being re-ejected with shakings, rumblings, and explosions, making it appear as if the whole mountain would be rent from top to bottom.

The funicular railroad restaurant has been damaged by the flow of lava. On the Pompeii side the eruption is very threatening, and a great quantity of ashes is being ejected.

MRS. SAGE SPRAINED ANKLE.

Wife of Financier Is Confined to Her Bed as Result of Fall.

Many friends of Mrs. Russell Sage called yesterday at her home, 632 Fifth Avenue, having heard that she was dangerously ill as the result of a fall a week ago.

It was said at the residence that Mrs. Sage had suffered a fall, spraining an ankle, a week ago, but that she was sitting up in bed, and would soon be able to walk.

CLOSES BOSTON THEATRE.

Mayor Orders the Lyceum Shut Until Alterations Are Made.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Just as "The Parisian Widows" were executing a song and dance at the Lyceum Theatre this afternoon the curtain was rung down, and the manager stepped forward and announced that the theatre had been closed.

The license for this variety theatre expired in August, but had not been renewed because the Superintendent of Buildings was not satisfied with the exits and fire escapes. Hence the Mayor to-day ordered the place closed, and it will remain closed until changes have been made.

GOT $1,200 HORSE FOR $36.50.

Now Busoid Wants to Hold on to Stray Purchase.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 26.—A horse which Fred Busold of West Orange bought at auction for $36.50 is now said to be worth $1,200. A horse was found in West Orange, running at large, three months ago, by Charles Ferguson. Ferguson thought he recognized the animal as belonging to Alexander Willis of West Orange, but Willis denied ownership and the horse was thereupon taken to the pound.

After it had been in the pound for about a month the poundkeeper advertised it for sale, and Busold bought it. A few days ago he heard from I. C. Hedden of Central Avenue, East Orange, who said that one of his horses was missing. He wanted to recover the animal, but as yet he and Busold have reached no agreement.

WOMEN MUSTN'T SMOKE.

Magistrate Sustains Unwritten Law Barring Practice in Public.

Cigarettes may not be smoked by women in the public streets, according to an unwritten police law, which was sustained yesterday in the Jefferson Market Court when Tabot Norton was fined $2 for abusing Bicycle Policeman Rensselaer.

Norton was riding in an automobile with two women and another man on Fifth Avenue, near Thirty-fifth Street, Sunday evening, when Rensselaer saw one of the women, said to be Mrs. William Orr, an actress, of the Waldorf-Astoria, smoking a cigarette, and ordered her to stop it. Talbot, who at the police station said he was "Frederick Smith," a broker, of 123 East Sixty-third Street, resented the policeman's interference.

Police Commissioner McAdoo yesterday expressed himself as greatly pleased with Rensselaer's conduct in making the arrest.

PARKER ODDS SHORTEN.

Big Bet in Brooklyn Made at 2 to 1—Still Larger One Rumored.

The first big bet on the outcome of the election so far reported in Brooklyn was made last night in Fred Schumm's restaurant, on Fulton Street, opposite the Borough Hall. There was a group of politicians and sporting men in the place discussing the campaign, when John T. Nelson, who is in business as a stock broker in Manhattan, entered and joined them.

Mr. Nelson was trying to get down a bet of $500 to $1,000 that Judge Parker would be the next President of the United States, when Walter Van Buren, a local horseman, came in with a party of friends. He accepted Mr. Nelson's offer of a bet and put up $3,600 against $1,800 that Roosevelt would beat Parker in the country, Mr. Schumm being the stakeholder.

Another bet of $5,000 to $2,500 on Roosevelt was said to have been made in Schumms' late last night, but the names of the bettors could not be learned.

PUNISHES MILITIA COMPANY.

Alabama Governor Musters Out Men Who Failed to Protect Negro.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 26.—The military court which met at Huntsville to investigate the conduct of the infiltary company of that city in not protecting the negro Horace Maples from the hands of a mob on the night of Sept. 7 reported to-day to the Governor that the company was inefficient and should be mustered out of service. Acting Gov. Cunningham approved the findings.

The testimony of the night jailer showed that the soldiers acted as though they were frightened. He testified that when the mob broke into the jail some were in the closets, some under the bed, and others on the floor smoking. The court in its conclusion declared that there were sufficient men and ammunition to protect the negro, "if they had been intelligently and courageously commanded and used." The testimony of Capt. R. T. Hays that he was wounded by glass from a window broken by a bullet coming from the mob is discredited.

KENTUCKY JUDGE POISONED.

His Condition Critical, but Others Out of Danger—Arsenic in Food.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., Sept. 26.—News of an attempt to poison the family of Judge William May of Salyersville, Magoffin County, has just reached here. Arsenic was used and the meal was eaten without the family discovering anything wrong.

BRITISH DIPLOMAT FINED BY MASSACHUSETTS JUDGE

Third Secretary Gurney's Plea of Immunity Disregarded.

STATE DEPARTMENT ACTS

Said to Have Called on Bay State Authorities to Secure to Englishman Immunity Provided by Law.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 26.—Hugh Gurney, Third Secretary to Sir Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador, who has been spending the Summer here, was fined this morning for contempt of court and for violating the speed law relating to automobiles, by Special Justice H. C. Phelps, in the Lee District Court. Mr. Gurney was charged with running an automobile through the streets of Stockbridge Sunday at a greater speed than ten miles an hour.

Mr. Gurney, when arraigned in court, positively refused to plead, holding that as he was the Third Secretary to his Britannic Majesty's Ambassador he could not be arrested or held for the offense charged. Special Justice Phelps said he did not recognize "international law" in his court, and informed the defendant that he must enter a plea.

Despite this statement, Mr. Gurney continued in his refusal. Then a fine of $25 was imposed for contempt of court, and another fine of $25 for violation of a town ordinance.

Mr. Gurney did not have in his possession sufficient money to pay the fine, and was paroled in the charge of the officer, Deputy Sheriff Noble of Stockbridge, who had made the arrest. The officer accompanied Mr. Gurney to Lenox, where the money was secured.

Mr. Gurney immediately notified the State Department, in Washington, of the act of the Massachusetts courts, and the President was notified.

Justice Phelps said to-day that he found nothing in the Massachusetts common law which exempted any one from breaking the laws of the State, and he acted accordingly.

JUSTICE LIABLE TO FINE.

May Also Be Imprisoned for Violating Law Relating to Diplomats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Notice of the action of Special Justice H. C. Phelps at Lee, Mass., in fining Hugh Gurney, Third Secretary of the British Embassy, was received at the State Department, in a telegram from Mr. Raikes, First Secretary of the Embassy, who is at Lenox.

The department immediately transmitted this telegram in substance to the Governor of Massachusetts, with the suggestion that he do whatever might be necessary to secure the diplomatic immunity of Mr. Gurney.

It is believed at the department that the matter may be far more serious than the local officials at Lee seem to regard it.

The action of the local Justice in refusing to recognize the official position of Mr. Gurney and his claim to exemption from arrest and punishment by the local authorities, is contrary to international usages that obtain in such cases, as well as in violation of the United States statutes. In declining to plead before the Justice, Mr. Gurney was clearly within his rights, and in deliberately refusing to recognize international usage in his court, and imposing a fine upon the accused for declining to plead to the charge brought against him, Justice Phelps is liable to fine and imprisonment.

The law governing matters of this character is clearly defined in Sections 4063 and 4064 of the Revised Statutes, which read as follows:

Section 4,063—Whenever any writ or process is sued out or prosecuted by any person in any court of the United States, or of a State, or by any Judge or Justice, whereby the person of any public Minister of any foreign Prince or State, authorized and received as such by the President, or any domestic or domestic servant of any such Minister, is arrested or imprisoned, or his goods or chattels are distrained, seized, or attached, such writ or process shall be deemed void.

Section 4,064—Whenever any writ or process is sued out in violation of the preceding section every person by whom the same is obtained or prosecuted, whether as party or as attorney or solicitor, and every officer concerned in executing it, shall be deemed a violator of the laws of nations and a disturber of the public repose, and shall be imprisoned for not more than three years and fined at the discretion of the court.

It is further provided by law that the jurisdiction of all cases against foreign Ambassadors, Ministers, and their attachés and domestics shall be lodged in the United States Supreme Court. Section 687 of the Revised Statutes provides that "the Supreme Court shall have exclusively all such jurisdiction of suits of proceedings against Ambassadors, or other public Ministers, or their domestics, or domestic servants as a court of law can have, consistently with the laws of nations."

This statute is based on Section 2 of Article 3 of the Constitution, which declares that "in all cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers, and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction."

In such cases the usual method of procedure is for the authorities whose laws have been violated to report the violation to the State Department, which department brings the matter to the attention of the Ambassador or Minister immediately concerned for such action as the case may require.

There have been instances where the offending parties were sent home in disgrace as the result of their violations of local law and regulations, at the instance of the State Department, but it is not competent for the local authorities or the authorities of the State to try to punish the offender.

It will remain for the Governor of Massachusetts to take initial action in this case, which will require prompt redress.

The last important precedent occurred in 1902, at the picnic resort of Bay Ridge, near Baltimore, when Dr. George, an attaché of the Swiss Legation in Washington, was arrested by a Deputy Sheriff on the charge of being a pickpocket, and was searched and otherwise treated in a humiliating manner by the local authorities.

The State Department secured his release at an early moment through the Governor of Maryland, who also caused the dismissal of the offending deputy and extended an apology for the incident. Though the Swiss Minister might have pressed for further punishment he accepted what had been done as sufficient, but the matter was deemed of such importance that he could not give this notice to other Governments unless the Swiss Federal Council had formally considered the case and expressed itself satisfied.

Sir Henry Mortimer Durand this afternoon received a telegram from Lenox, telling of the arrest of Mr. Gurney and saying that the matter had been referred to the State Department. The Ambassador took no action in the matter, nor does he expect that it will be necessary for him to do so. He expressed confidence to-night that the State Department will take whatever action is proper. He expects to leave Washington to-morrow morning to return to Lenox, as he had originally planned.

Mr. Gurney has been attached to the British Embassy here as Third Secretary since November, 1906.

DUBS ODELL A BUCCANEER.

Stapleton Rouses Brooklyn Democrats—Alderman Proves His Loyalty.

Gov. Odell was dubbed a "political buccaneer" at the ratification meeting of the Kings County General Committee, held last night in the Thomas Jefferson Building, Court Square, Brooklyn. Resolutions had been adopted indorsing the entire National and State ticket, and ex-District Attorney James W. Ridgway and Luke D. Stapleton were called upon to speak to the resolutions. It was Mr. Stapleton who applied the name to the Governor, and his words were greeted with tumultuous applause.

When the resolutions indorsing the ticket were presented by County Clerk Edward Kaufmann, Alderman Frederick Brenner arose and, addressing the Chair, said:

"I want to call for a yea and nay vote on that resolution. I have been said to be against these nominees, and I want to go on record."

Clerk Hogan then began the call of the roll of delegates, and before he had proceeded far Assemblyman John McKeown arose and suggested that it would be better if only the roll of the delegates from the Fifteenth Assembly District be called and the rest of the vote be taken viva voce. Alderman Brenner objected, saying:

"It has been begun now, and I want it to proceed."

One delegate observed:

"I could see the finish of any man who voted against those resolutions. He'd be taken out in sections."

The roll call then proceeded. After the passage of the resolutions Mr. Ridgway was introduced and was greeted with prolonged applause. But the greeting accorded to him or to the names of the candidates was as nothing compared with the whirl of enthusiasm that followed his mention of the name of Senator McCarren. For fully three minutes the delegates applauded and shouted themselves hoarse. Through it all the Senator sat with as gloomy a countenance as if he had lost his best friend.

JEROME'S SPEAKING PROBLEM.

He May Stump, but Is Unwilling to be a Simple Advocate.

District Attorney Jerome returned to the city from Lakeville yesterday and had this to say last night:

"I find myself in a very difficult position in this campaign," he said, "as to whether or not I ought to participate on the stump. I never have thought that politicians wanted an absolutely frank and truthful discussion of the issues of a campaign, and I am unwilling to go on a platform as a simple advocate. Should I discuss the situation on both sides, as it now lies in my mind, it would not, I think, be at all satisfactory to the managers of either party, although I believe personally tht it would be helpful to the ticket which I most earnestly desire to see elected.

"Yet I doubt if any of the leaders, trained in the old school of politicians, would agree with me. However, I have not said I would not take the stump in this campaign, for I have not decided."

"Have you been asked to speak?" was asked Mr. Jerome.

"Well—ah—I cannot say I have," he replied. "I have received a letter, one of the perfunctory sort, from a speakers' bureau, asking me to speak, but I don't remember whether it was from the National or the State Committee bureau."

TO PROTECT OFFICEHOLDERS.

Civil Service Reform League Writes to Cortelyou and Taggart.

Letters have been forwarded by the National Civil Service Reform League to Chairman Cortelyou of the Republican National Committee and Chairman Taggart of the Democratic National Committee, asking their aid in preventing the levying of assessments for political purposes upon public servants during the present campaign.

These letters, which were sent by Elliot H. Goodwin, Secretary of the League, call attention to the sections of the civil service law prohibiting assessments for political purposes, and ask that a public declaration be made that each Chairman recognizes the right of every man, whether in public or private employ, to the wages of his labor without molestation. When the replies are received from Chairman Cortelyou and Chairman Taggart, they will be given out by Secretary Goodwin.

CORTELYOU'S TEACHER ILL.

Mrs. Ephraim Hinds of Hempstead Got Him Washington Appointment.

Mrs. Ephraim Hinds, who was the first teacher of Chairman George B. Cortelyou of the Republican National Committee, and through whose advice it was that he first took up the study of stenography, was stricken with apoplexy Saturday night in the old schoolhouse at Hempstead, L. I., where Mr. Cortelyou's education was begun.

Though she is over seventy-five years of age, Mrs. Hinds rallied from the first shock, but on Sunday morning a second shock paralyzed her almost completely. Mrs. Cortelyou, who was a Miss Hinds before her marriage, was notified and hastened from her home in Washington, arriving in Hempstead yesterday.

Mrs. Hinds was not only Mr. Cortelyou's first tutor, but it was through her influence that he went from the New York Post Office to Washington, where he later became a stenographer for President McKinley, and began his rapid rise to National political prominence. At frequent intervals yesterday Chairman Cortelyou made inquiries over the long-distance telephone as to the condition of his old teacher. At a late hour last night Mrs. Hinds still retained consciousness, but little hope is entertained of her recovery. She is surrounded by the members of her family.

LEG CRUSHED BY STREET CAR.

Brooklyn Trolley Victim Now Said to be Dying—Motorman Arrested.

Michael Finnegan, thirty-seven years old, of 131 Liberty Avenue, Brooklyn, slipped last night as he was about to alight from a surface car of the Fulton Street line, at Fulton and Sackman Streets, Brooklyn, and one of his legs was crushed by the wheels.

The man was carried to the sidewalk, and an ambulance summoned from the Bradford Street Hospital. There it was found necessary to amputate the leg, and Finnegan was reported last night to be dying.

The motorman of the car, who said his name was Thomas Grimm, was arrested and locked up at the Liberty Avenue Station on the technical charge of assault.

ACTING CONSUL AT CANTON.

Fleming Cheshire, Who Can't Reach Dalny, Taking Robert McWade's Place.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Fleming Cheshire, Consul at Dalny, has been placed in charge of the Consulate at Canton in place of Robert McWade, removed. Russell Colgrove, Vice Consul at Canton, as an incident of the trouble in which McWade was involved, resigned. Mr. Cheshire has not been able to reach his post at Dalny, and will not undertake to go there until after the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Japan.

It is not unlikely in view of all the circumstances that an appointment to the Canton Consulate will be made in a few days.

SAYS JUSTICE HERRICK KEPT OUT OF POLITICS

Marcus T. Hun, Supreme Court Reporter, Answers Attacks.

RECORD ON BENCH CLEAR

He Aided Committee of Thirteen in Its Efforts to Give Albany a Clean Administration.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 26.—Marcus T. Hun, Supreme Court reporter for New York State, in reply to a request to say what he considers Justice D Cady Herrick's attitude to the management of the Democratic machine in this locality to have been since he accepted the position of Justice of the Supreme Court in 1891, said:

"It is necessary, in doing so, that I refer to the condition of the Democratic Party at the time that Mr. Justice Herrick was elected to that position.

"As counsel for the Commitee of Thirteen of the Citizens' Association of this city, and at one time for the Committee of Fifty, I have, without being a member of either political party, had for the past twenty years a very considerable acquaintance with the details of the administration of the public offices in this city.

"At the time that Mr. Daniel Manning accepted the office of Secretary of the Treasury in President Cleveland's Cabinet, he was the recognized leader of the Democratic Party in this locality. He surrendered this leadership to Mr. D Cady Herrick, who continued in control of the party here until he accepted the position of Supreme Court Justice in 1892. Justice Herrick at that date was not in as easy control of the Democratic political machine, certainly he did not have as unanimous a support from the party workers, as Mr. Manning had at the time he surrendered it.

"Mr. Herrick, however, remained in control, and at the time of his election to the office of Supreme Court Justice the patronage and positions at the disposal of the party were distributed among his supporters, who were then and have continued to be known as the Herrick faction, no one of them having had such distinctive qualities of leadership as enabled him to impress his name upon the organization.

"Since that time there has been, by the opponents of the former Herrick supporters, vehement and continuous clamor and complaint at Justice Herrick's alleged activity and interest in party politics. I cannot recall, in the entire period of Mr. Justice Herrick's judicial career, any instance of his appearing in an attitude of partisan prejudice or activity, and I cannot but believe that it has been the persistence rather than any substantial foundation in fact of this criticism which has led many people to believe that Mr. Justice Herrick has conducted himself in this respect with unseemly or unsuitable ardor.

"It cannot be successfully disputed that, while in control of the local machine, before his election as Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Herrick's influence in his party's councils was in favor of a policy which best subserved the public as well as his party's interests; that it was his refusal to allow others associated with him in the party management or influential in its councils to subserve ulterior purposes which created the antagonism and caused much of the enmity which existed at the time of his going upon the bench.

"It has never been suggested that he has realized pecuniary profit from political power or preferment beyond the strictly legitimate salaries of the public offices which he has held. I speak with much assurance in this latter matter, as my examination of public accounts at various times during the past twenty years could not have failed, as I believe, to afford some earmark or evidence of malversation of public funds in his favor, as it did in the cases of not a few others, had such misapplication taken place.

"How far men who had previously been associated with him in political management may have appealed to Justice Herrick for advice I have no means of knowing. If his advice to them partook of the quality of his aid to the Committee of Thirteen in its struggle to introduce a clean administration of affairs in this city, the public has certainly not been the loser if that advice has been followed.

"To him that committee stood much indebted for services which at the time, for obvious reasons, had no public acknowledgement. I gladly, at this late day, express my grateful appreciation of aid extended by one who has so long been numbered among its unknown friends."

JUDGE HERRICK'S FAREWELL.

Deeply Moved as He Addresses Members of Albany County Bar.

ALBANY, Sept. 26.—In closing to-day's session of the Supreme Court, Trial Term, Justice D Cady Herrick took occasion to bid farewell to the members of the Albany County Bar. Since this was his last appearance on the Supreme Court bench the court room was crowded with attorneys. Before addressing the gathering Judge Herrick turned to the newspaper men present and asked that as a personal favor he be not quoted either in word or substance. During the remarks that followed he was visibly affected, and more than once seemed on the point of breaking down.

When William P. Rudd, President of the County Bar Association, rose to reply, the Judge made a gesture as if to stop him, but Mr. Rudd, who also seemed deeply moved, kept on to the end.

Judge Herrick adjourned court after charging the jury and performing the usual duties of opening the term. Justice Wesley O. Howard will take his place to-morrow morning, but it is probable that the term will adjourn shortly, all but a few cases being put over until next term.

TO NOTIFY JUDGE HERRICK.

Formal Ceremonies Will Take Place Saturday in Albany.

Judge D Cady Herrick will be formally notified of his nomination for Governor at noon next Saturday, at Albany. Francis Burton Harrison, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and the rest of the nominees on the Democratic State ticket will be notified at the same time. The arrangements for the notification were completed yesterday over the long-distance telephone between State Headquarters in the Hoffman House and Judge Herrick's chambers, in Albany.

The speech of notification will be by Prof. Duncan Campbell Lee of Cornell University, who was the Permanent Chairman of the State Convention which nominated Judge Herrick.

The Notification Committee consists of Prof. Lee and the other officers of the convention, a representative from each of the Senate districts of the State, and the members of the State Committee. The local contingent will go to Albany on the Empire State Express, leaving at 8:30 o'clock on Saturday morning.

At Democratic State Headquarters in the Hoffman House yesterday, Chairman Cord Meyer announced that Judge Herrick would take the stump as soon as he had laid down his judicial duties. No dates have been set for the candidate, however. Mr. Meyer said that from now on the campaign work in the State would hum.

New Health Department Boat.

Mayor McClellan has approved the measure authorizing an issue of $67,000 of corporate stock to defray the cost of constructing a new steamboat for the Department of Health. The new boat is for the transportation of patients suffering with contagious diseases. It is to replace the Franklin Edson, which has performed the service for many years, and is now in bad condition.

Derailed Meat Car Blocks the Erie.

Traffic on the Erie Railroad was blocked for over an hour last night, a freight car loaded with slaughtered hogs having jumped the track at Grove Street, Jersey City. No one was hurt.

PARKER COMING HERE TO-DAY.

He Proposes to Conduct a Vigorous Campaign from Now On.

Special to The New York Times.

ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Judge Parker will make another visit to New York, starting at 7:05 to-morrow morning and arriving at Weehawken at 9:30. He will not decide where he will stay until he sets foot on Manhattan, nor exactly how long he will stay.

The campaign is presumed to be fairly launched, now that the letter of acceptance is out of the way, and it is the intention of the candidate, it is understood, to have the Democracy's efforts from now on notable and, if possible, epochmaking in the way of campaigning. About six weeks are left for work, and as Judge Parker has come to be considered the leader of his party, there seems to be a disposition to put the problems up to him.

These congratulatory telegrams on Judge Parker's letter of acceptance were received here to-day:

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.
I congratulate you on your letter and especially on its powerful appeal to that vast majority of American voters who continually deplore the tribute they are paying day after day of tariff-sheltered monopolies.
HILARY A. HERBERT, ex-Secretary of Navy.

New York, Sept. 26.
Accept my hearty congratulations on your letter of acceptance.
CHARLES A. CULBERSON,
United States Senator, Texas.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 26.
Congratulations. Your letter of acceptance bristles with Americanism, patriotism, and goodwill for the old soldiers who made free government possible. Your election will restore to the people the government of Washington, Lincoln, and Cleveland, the greatest patriots of them all.
JOHN C. RILEY.

Elyria, Ohio, Sept. 26.
It is an inspiring exposition of orthodox Democracy.
WILLIAM E. SHARP.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 26.
Accept kindly thanks of an immigrant citizen, who lived over forty years in our Republic, for your splendid letter of acceptance; it is a masterpiece.
RICHARD MECHABELS, Elector.

A delegation of thirty-six Democrats from Poughkeepsie came to Rosemount at 5 o'clock to-day and spent an hour with Judge Parker.

PARKER CONSTITUTION CLUB.

Richard V. Lindabury of Newark Issues Call to New Jersey Lawyers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26.—A meeting of New Jersey lawyers will be held Friday at the office of Richard V. Lindabury, in the Prudential Insurance Company's building, for the purpose of forming a Parker Constitutional Club. Invitations have been sent to all the leading lawyers in the State, and the membership of the proposed club is to be made up of lawyers who are not identified with the Democratic Party organization.

It is understood that the plan of the promoters of the movement is to extend the organization to all the cities of the State, welding together a chain of clubs, with the object of having the completed organization form a strong factor in the campaign for the election of the Democratic candidate.

The movement is to have connection with the regular organization of the Democratic Party, but will become practically a constituent of the executive organization of the Parker independent clubs, recently formed in New York.

TAGGART MAY GO WEST.

National Chairman Likely to Devote His Time to Winning Indiana.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—Reports are in circulation in Democratic circles that Thomas Taggart, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will be in Indiana during most of the month of October, giving his personal attention to the campaign in this State.

Party leaders have agreed that this State must have special attention and that the result here may determine the entire Presidential election. It is agred that there is not a Democrat who has the influence of Taggart in Indiana, and not a Democrat who so thoroughly knows the State from one end to the other. Because of this every pressure is being brought to bear to have Mr. Taggart come here inside of two weeks and spend the rest of October on the ground.

Although Chairman Taggart has desired to stay in this city and conduct the National campaign to the end, it was learned last night that the demand for his special services in Indiana is likely to take him back to his home State for the last three weeks of October. The work of organization has been so thoroughly completed here that it can move along smoothly during the period under the direction of Vice Chairman De Lancey Nicoll and Executive Chairman William F. Sheehan.

It was reported last night that Western headquarters of the National Committee would be opened in a few days in Indiana, and that from there Mr. Tagagrt would direct the campaign not only in Indiana, but for the neighboring States as well.

COWHERD SEES VICTORY.

Declares Herrick's Nomination Has Increased Party's House Prospects.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Congressman Cowherd of Missouri, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, returned to Washington yesterday. Before leaving he said he had given up his idea of moving his headquarters from Washington to New York, so as to be close to the National Committee Headquarters.

"The outlook for the election of a Democratic House of Representatives," he said, "is distinctly favorable. It has brightened very perceptibly since the Democrats of New York held their State Convention.

"Chairman Babcock of the Republican Committee has recently given out a statement to the effect that as matters stand to-day the next House is lost to his party. I do not mind saying that whatever may have been Mr. Babcock's motive in putting out such a statement, he told the simple truth.

"If we can hold the ground already gained we shall win the next House by a comfortable majority, but we are not satisfied with the present outlook to the extent that we shall now rest on our oars. Our committee will do its utmost to bring about not only a Republican reverse, but a Republican rout."

MURPHY MAY BE ORATOR.

Plans to Speak at Fifty-Dollar Dinner to Van Wyck.

Charles F. Murphy may make his début as an after-dinner speaker on Thursday night, when friends of ex-Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck will give a dinner at the Democratic Club in honor of the ex-Mayor's return from Europe on the Baltic, which is expected to arrive to-morrow. When friends of Mr. Van Wyck started to get up the reception and dinner, they approached Mr. Murphy, who took them all by surprise by telling them he would make an address of welcome to the returning ex-Mayor, as well as appearing at the dinner.

While in England Mr. Van Wyck made many visits to Wantage to see Richard Croker, and reports have been circulated to the effect that Mr. Croker regards Mr. Murphy as ungrateful to the Croker regime because the present Tammany leader had kept the "Croker Old Guard" in Tammany Hall out of the councils of the organization.

The dinner to Mr. Van Wyck will be restricted to sixty plates, and will be served in the ladies' reception room of the clubhouse. Fifty dollars a plate is asked of each member attending, but in spite of this the demand has been great.

DEMOCRATS READY NOW FOR PUBLIC CAMPAIGN

A Red-Hot Fight the Last Six Weeks, Says Taggart.

DAVIS TO TOUR HIS OWN STATE

Indiana to Hear Bryan, Senators Blackburn and Stone, Melville E. Ingalls, and C. S. Hamlin.

Party managers at Democratic National and State Headquarters and at Tammany Hall declared yesterday that all records for hurrahing would be broken in the coming six weeks.

"The public part of the campaign now is on," said Mr. Taggart. "For upward of two months we have been working hard getting things in shape for these last six weeks, which now are upon us, and right up to election day it will be a red-hot fight. We are satisfied with the outlook, and yet we cannot be charged with overconfidence, which is worse than apathy.

"The outlook at home is entirely satisfactory to me," he said of Indiana. "Some Republicans are trying to create an impression that I am seeking a seat in the United States Senate and am, therefore, more concerned about the election of a Democratic Legislature in Indiana than in carrying the State for the Parker and Davis ticket. That is all nonsense. I am not a candidate for the United States Senate seat, have no idea of going there, and shall not be a candidate under any circumstances. I am working to carry the State for the National and State tickets and am confining my efforts to that."

Chairman McConville of the Speakers' Bureau said he had received a letter from ex-Senator Davis about his speaking tour through West Virginia. The start will be made from Baltimore on Monday, Oct. 10, after a large meeting in that city, which will be addressed by Mr. Davis, Senator Gorman, ex-Senator Whyte, Senator Daniel of Virginia, and ex-Senator David B. Hill.

Senators Daniel, Hill and Whyte will accompany ex-Senator Davis during his entire trip through the State, and stops will be made at every town along the lines of the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chesapeake and Ohio, and the Norfolk and Western Railroad. On Tuesday, Oct. 11, the party will be divided so that two speakers will appear at Piedmont and two at Kayser, and on Wednesday the forces will be divided again, two speaking at Grafton and two at Clarksburg. On Thursday, Oct. 13, there will be a big meeting at Wheeling, at which all four will speak, repeating this arrangement for Friday night at Parkersburg and dividing to speak Saturday at Huntington and Charleston. On the following Monday morning the entire party will start along the Chesapeake and Ohio Road, speaking from the rear of the train at various towns, and this will be kept up for the rest of the week.

Plans for the Indiana campaign include the thirty speeches which Mr. Bryan is expected to make there, and in addition Senator Blackburn of Kentucky and Senator Stone of Missouri will be sent there. Senator Blackburn will open his campaign on the night of Oct. 13 in Indianapolis, and will speak through the State for ten days. Senator Stone will open at Indianapolis on Oct. 19 and will go through the State for a week.

President M. E. Ingalls of the "Big Four" Railroad also will speak for the Parker and Davis ticket, opening Oct. 7 at Indianapolis. Charles S. Hamlin of Boston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under President Cleveland, will speak at Fort Wayne Thursday night, and will spend several days in the State. Ex-Senator Charles A. Towne will open at Terre Haute to-morrow night, and will spend a week in the State.

The National Committee has arranged for a meeting to be held in Philadelphia on Oct. 8, at the Academy of Music. Admission to the building is the old Continental Hall, and the two buildings will be thrown together. The principal speakers will be Congressman W. Bourke Cockran and Congressman Head of Tennessee.

At Tammany Hall Charles F. Murphy took charge yesterday. "It cannot be said we are beginning our campaign now," he said, "for we are at it here the year round. We already are going so fast they cannot catch us."

ODELL ON CUNNEEN'S RECORD.

Governor Declares Democratic Attorney General Increased Expenses.

Gov. Odell gave out a statement last night tending to show that the expenses of the Attorney General's office had been increased under the administration of Mr. Cunneen, instead of a saving of $56,000 having been made, as asserted in the Democratic platform. In his statement Gov. Odell said:

"As this claim seems to be an attack on my administration, which has extended over a period of four years, I desire to submit some figures from the appropriation bills covering that period.

The expenses under Attorney General Davies, Republican, for the year
1901 were.....$103,093.75
And for the year 1902 were..... 113,380.00

Making a tota of.....$216,443.75

The expenses under Attorney General Cunneen, Democrat, for the year 1903 were.....$118,742.35
And for the year 1904 were..... 112,730.28

Making a total of.....$231,472.63

"Or for the two years an increase of $15,028.88 over the last two years of Attorney General Davies.

"I do not wish to be understood as stating that Attorney General Cunneen has been extravagant, because his estimates were submitted to me and I was informed by him that the amounts named were necessary for the proper conduct of his office. I believe such to be the case, but this testimony is valuable, because it refutes out of their own mouths the statement of great extravagance in the expenditures over that time." If the figures which I have given out are not correct they can easily be refuted."

BRIBE TO CLEAR ALDERMAN.

Member Jury Panel Accuses Counsel for Kratz of St. Louis.

BUTLER, Mo., Sept. 26.—The trial of Charles Kratz, member of the St. Louis Council, for bribery, was continued again to-day by Judge Walter W. Graves, because Kratz is critically ill after an operation for appendicitis.

Before the continuance was granted Charles G. Hunt, one of the summoned jury panel, made affidavit that J. S. Francisco, one of Kratz's lawyers, had attempted to bribe him with $200 to vote for Kratz's acquittal, provided he (Hunt) was chosen as one of the twelve to try the case. Because of this charge Mr. Folk filed motions to have the entire panel quashed.

WHIRLED TO HIS DEATH.

Machinist at Work in Brooklyn Navy Yard Mangled by Flywheel.

While a dozen of his fellow-workmen looked on, Joseph Coates, a machinist, was whirled to death on a flywheel in the machine shop in the Brooklyn Navy Yard yesterday afternoon.

Coates was readjusting a belt which had slipped from a shaft, when his clothing in some manner became caught on the big wheel. He was whirled around several times, and fell to the floor dead, his body badly broken and mangled. Two of the men who were looking helplessly on fainted.

TENSION AT THE AMERICAN.

Woman Stricken in Audience Adds to Excitement of Play.

While the final act of the melodrama, "Her Mad Marriage," was being played at the American Theatre last evening a woman in the orchestra suddenly shrieked and had to be carried from the theatre.

A doctor who was summoned said it was a case of epilepsy. There was no reason to suspect that a "fake" was being perpetrated, except for the fact that a few minutes later one of the actors, appearing in a mock performance of "East Lynne," was supposed to take poison. The curtain on the sham play was rung down, when the stage manager came out and asked if a doctor would volunteer to attend the poisoned man. The doctor who had just attended the "epileptic" immediately went onto the stage.

It was at this point that the thrilling climax of "Her Mad Marriage" occurred. The play involves the trials of a young woman, the daughter of a rich broker, who goes on the stage against her father's wishes. She is the victim of a scheming actor and his woman accomplice, an adventuress of deep, double dye. The villain murders the girl's father in his office, shooting him, just at the moment that an office boy takes a flashlight picture of the old man dozing in his chair.

At the point in the play just after the audience had been wrought up by the "epileptics" groan, a man jumped from a stage box, accusing the heroine of poisoning the villain. Of course that is part of the play; so, too, the subsequent accusations on the part of various others in the audience that the heroine has poisoned the villain. But the office boy suddenly looms up in the top gallery, lets himself down on a rope, rushes to the stage, and produces his proofs of the actor's baseness in the results of his flashlight photograph.

Taken in connection with the apparently real case of "epilepsy," the effect was altogether gruesomely sensational.

CAPT. STREETER HEARD FROM.

"Governor" of His "No Man's Land Has $10,000,000 Claim Against U. S.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—"Governor" William H. Niles arrived in Washington to-day from the Streeter No Man's Land, off the lake front of Chicago. "Governor" Niles is one of the colony of settlers who took title from Capt. Streeter and in May, 1900, defied the authorities with force and arms.

The land in question was formerly the sandy bottom of Lake Michigan. The United States Government has said it does not belong to the Federal power, and the State of Illinois does not claim it. Chicago does not own it, and the settlers have been in the status of the Isle of Pine pioneers who think they are citizens of the United States, but are ruled by a few constables sent down from Havana by the Cuban Government.

"Governor" Niles has come to Washington to file a claim against the United States for $10,000,000 with interest from May 26, 1900, on the ground that the colony was entitled to protection. This suit covers the use of the land since the settlers were arrested and thrown into jail. Capt. Streeter is serving time in the prison at Joliet together with two of his followers for killing a watchman who had been placed on the new land by the adjacent property owners.

ALDERDICE'S BAIL FORFEITED.

Warrant Issued for Man Arrested on Oliver Estate Forgery Charge.

Because he has failed several times to appear in court to answer charges preferred against him in the Alderdice-Oliver case, a warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of James S. Alderdice by Magistrate Pool, in the Jefferson Market Court. The bail of $1,500 on which Alderdice was released was declared forfeited.

Mary J. Oliver, a recluse, died last March at her home, Second Avenue and One Hundred and Seventeenth Street. When her effects were searched papers transferring $180,000 worth of real estate to Mary E. Alderdice, sister of the defendant, were found. The relatives of the dead woman charged that the transfer papers were forgeries. Several suits have been brought against Alderdice, who was arrested on charges of forgery and attempted subornation of perjury. The complainant was Frank P. Sabett of Cottage Grove Avenue, the Bronx.

Alderdice, who is a lawyer at 304 Broadway, residing at 345 Summit Avenue, Jersey City, was held in bail, but failed to appear yesterday on an adjourned hearing.

GREEN GRAVE FOR JOHN DOE.

His Grandson Bequeaths a Fund for That Purpose.

John Doe Taylor, who died on Aug. 1 at his home, 2 East One Hundred and Seventh Street, left a personal estate of more than $37,000, and by his will, filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Office, he provided for a fund to be expended in keeping the grave of his grandfather, John Doe, in proper order. The testator makes provision for the disposition of his own estate and that of his uncle, Daniel Taylor. The Daniel Taylor estate was bequeathed to John Doe Taylor and his heirs, but it was to remain in the possession of Mrs. Mary E. Wadleigh during her lifetime.

In the will filed yesterday John Doe Taylor bequeaths the sum of $10,000 to his sister, Mrs. Sarah T. Abbott, of Grandview, Tenn., and $10,000 to her daughter, Mary H. Abbott. The latter is named as executrix of the will. The sum of $10,000 is left to the testator's niece, Martha A. Powell, of Rosendale, Wis. To a nephew, William T. Abbott, is bequeathed the sum of $10,000. The testator provides that the sum of $15,000 be set aside from the Daniel Taylor estate and given to the town of Sanbornton, N. H., for the establishment of three trust funds of $5,000 each. The income from one of these funds is to be spent by the town of Sanbornton in caring for the little cemetery there where the testator's grandfather, John Doe, is buried.

FOR SCHOOL BOARD HEAD.

Successor to H. A. Rogers Will Be Selected To-morrow.

The Board of Education, at its meeting to-morrow, will elect a President to succeed the late Henry A. Rogers. It is thought likely that the choice will fall upon Frank L. Babbott, who at the time of Mr. Rogers's death was Vice President, and has been Acting President since then. The President elected to-morrow will serve until February, the end of the present term, when the regular election will take place.

The meeting to-morrow will be important, not only because of the election, but also for the presentation of the report of the Committee on Elementary Schools, concerning which Mayor McClellan addressed a letter to the board at its last meeting.

The doctor's office and apartment at The Oakdale, 36 West 35th street, hasn't been in the market for seven years.
Now vacant.

CANNON SAYS PARKER IS INDEFINITE IN PROMISE

Speaker Criticises Candidate's Declaration on Pension Order.

PENSION LAW'S HISTORY

Says Parker Would Have Been "Facing Both Ways" in the Pilgrim's Progress.

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 26.—Speaker Joseph G. Cannon continued his tour of Nebraska to-day. At Hastings this afternoon Speaker Cannon discussed that part of Judge Alton B. Parker's letter of acceptance relating to the President's pension order.

"In Parker's first acceptance by speech," said Mr. Cannon, "he complained of the expenditures of the Government under Republican rule, and Roosevelt came back at him and said:

"'How are you going to cut down these expenditures? Are you for the repeal of that executive order relating to the soldiers?'

"And Parker now comes back in his letter of acceptance, just issued, and says: 'If I am elected President I will rescind that order.'

"And then he goes on and says, 'but after I rescind it, I will use my influence with Congress to pass a bill giving an age service pension to the soldier that performed service in the civil war.'

"I ask, what age, Parker, what age? Will it be 75, 65, 62 years, or what? Indefinite still you are, and probably not sincere, but suppose you are elected President, Mr. Parker, and you use your influence, what will that bring in the meantime? From 25,000 to 50,000 people will have their pensions taken away, while you promise to use your influence to have Congress pass a service pension law without stating the age you propose to recognize.

"Let us read a chapter from the history of pension legislation as it stands on the statute books to-day. There are fourteen bills that have been passed from time to time, and these bills form the pension code. Who passed them? Democrats for the bills, 417; Democrats against the bills, 648; Republicans for the bills, 1,068; Republicans against the bills, none. That's how the record of the vote upon those measures stands.

"Let me ask you, have you ever read Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress'? Great book! Splendid allegory! There was Christian, and there was Faint-heart, and there was Trueheart, and there was Mister Facing Both Ways. I say to you that if Parker had lived then that character in the book would not have been Facing Both Ways, but it would have been Parker."

ODELL MEETS LIEUTENANTS.

Governor Hears Reports of Conditions in the Districts Here.

The Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee was called together yesterday at the instigation of Gov. Odell to meet with him in his rooms at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and go over the political situation in the city. All the members of the committee were present, and the session was a sort of experience meeting, each member of the committee being called upon in turn by the Governor-Chairman to state what he had done to ascertain the real conditions in his district and what he had learned about them. Then a resolution was passed that nobody should give out any information as to what had been discussed except Executive Chairman Halpin. When Mr. Halpin was asked what information he had to give, he said:

"The committee considered the problem which is involved in the shifting of their residences by voters, and it was decided that the leaders should pay especial attention to this phase of the situation. Gov. Odell told the committee of some of the plans that he had worked out."

"Will the committee have a house-to-house canvass made this year?"

"We will be more active this year than heretofore."

Gov. Odell was asked whether he had any reply to make to the statement of Lieut. Gov. Higgins, the Republican Gubernatorial candidate, that if he were the Governor he would not consider it proper for him to act as Chairman of the Republican State Committee. He said that Mr. Higgins was entitled to his opinion about that matter.

"Has what he said changed your opinion as to the propriety of your holding both offices?" was asked.

"Not to-day," was the Governor's reply.

FAIRBANKS IN MONTANA.

Candidate Begins a Four Days' Campaign in That State.

GLENDIVE, Mont., Sept. 26.—Vice Presidential Candidate Fairbanks and his party to-day began a four days' campaign of Montana with speeches at this place. Ex-Senator Carter, who is again an aspirant for Senatorial honors, has joined the party. Under his direction the Fairbanks special train was sidetracked for the night on the prairie east of Glendive, and the speaking exercises took place at 8 o'clock. Notwithstanding the early hour there was a good attendance for a sparcely populated country.

William Lindsey, Republican candidate for Governor of this State, presided, and speeches were made by Senators Fairbanks and Dolliver and Mr. Carter. Senator Fairbanks devoted his remarks largely to the question of irrigation, referring eulogistically to President Roosevelt's instrumentality in securing a National reclamation law and giving ex-Senator Carter praise in this connection.

SOUND PIRATES GET BUSY.

Rob Two Yachts at New Rochelle of Lead and Valuables.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The New Rochelle police are looking for the band of pirates who boarded Commodore Joseph Donovan's yawl Bayonet, the flagship of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, and carried off 2,700 pounds of lead ballast, a fine pair of marine glasses, and a lot of other things to the aggregate value of $300.

The robbery was committed while the yacht was at her moorings near the Glen Island dock. Commodore Donovan's Swedish skipper, Theodore Olsen, reported it to the police to-day. The skipper said that everything aboard the yacht was snug on Saturday night when he left her to go to Brooklyn to visit friends.

The pirates also swooped down on the big cabin catboat owned by John E. Sudborn of the Huguenot Yacht Club, but they did not get anything except the lead ballast. Similar robberies have been reported from several clubs along the Sound recently.

Grand Fall Opening

This opening will consist of an elaborate display of masterpieces from the world's foremost delineators of modish apparel, enabling you to see more real style in

Millinery, costumes and wraps, tailor-made suits and coats, waists, petticoats, corsets, silks, dress goods, trimmings and laces than two weeks' travel abroad would afford, as we have spent months in making our collection for this great style-show. Smart fashions are nowhere else so generously and gorgeously represented as here.

N. B.—Millinery and gowns illustrated in this announcement will be shown during the opening.

A Showing of LAMPS That Compels Admiration

The splendid Fall showing of Lamps is ready. It embraces Lamps that rely on oil, gas and electricity for their illuminating power—that customary triad of things to make light of.

J.W.

And in its beauty and distinctiveness, the collection attests the care and taste with which it was gathered. There are many lamps in it, of which but the single example exists that you see here. And, so marked is the reversion to bygone styles, that you almost seem to be getting old lamps for new—stately Colonial pillars, with the quaint crystal pendants and etched glass dome tops, for instance. The "Mission" Lamps form an important category, too—some in dull brass, with squarish shade of brass and colored glass; others almost crudely fashioned of weathered oak, the bracket for the lamp-shade made with the same primitive wedge construction that one finds in Mission furniture.

J.W.

Then there are the vases of Hampshire and other fine domestic wares, the Japanese and Belgian pottery, and all the rest, mounted as lamps; the splendid showing of Student Lamps—academic in name, but lacking much of their former pristine simplicity, and their savor of the midnight oil. And all the varied forms of Gas Lamps and fascinating French Electroliers, that give you nearly every style from Early Assyrian to the Art Nouveau.

And the collection of Lamp Shades is worthy of attention, too, with its rich mosaics, silk handkerchief styles, glittering crystal domes and other new—or old-new—evolutions.

But the lamps themselves are far more illuminating than a description of them; so come and see them:

Metallic Table and Reception Lamps

Lamps in new styles and finishes, such as Colonial, Mission and Heraldic styles, in Pompeian green and dull brass, old brass and dull gold, carmine, red and Japanese copper, etc. At $6, $7.50, $10.50, $12, $18, to $25.

Lamps made from imported and domestic vases, making styles that can't be duplicated. At $6.50, $9, $10.50, $14, $16.50, $18, to $60.

Student Lamps

A wide variety of these popular Lamps, with one and two lights; from the very plain acorn shape in old brass finish, to the most elaborate heavy cast brass, finished in Pompeian green and dull brass. At $6.50, $7.75, $8.50, $10.50, $15, $18, to $40.

Floor Lamps

Styles ranging from plain wrought iron lamps to the most elaborate lamps of crystal glass, handsomely mounted with cast brass trimmings in dull and light gold finish. At $7.50, $9, $12, $15, $55, to $100.

Basement.

Gas Portable Lights

A large variety of these handsome lights, made with cast brass columns and base; all in the old brass finish. At $3.50, $4, $5, $6.50, $7.50, to $12.

French Electroliers

Figures and Vases in new styles and finishes, holding from one to four lights; covered with handsome colored bead or silk flowered shades; others are covered with large bunches of glass grapes and similar rich designs. At $10, $16.50, $22.50, $25, $35, to $125.

Electric Portable Lights

We are showing a fine line of imported and domestic Electric Portable Lights, with mosaic, cut glass and large glass mushroom dome shades, in the new iced effects; and mounted on handsome standards. At $10.50, $13.50, $15, $18, to $60.

Bent Glass, Metal and Silk Lamp Shades

An elaborate collection of these handsome Shades, that are becoming more popular than ever. All finished with colored glass bead fringe. At $10, $12, $15, $16.50, $22.50, to $35.

Everything Is at Top-Notch

Styles have the snap of newness. Stocks are impressive in their fullness. Every new thing gives pleasure and inspires enthusiasm.

They enjoy the NEW most, who have it first. They miss much who tardily follow.

Fashion is a queen to those who need but to be beckoned—a tyrant to those she is compelled to drive.

New Brown Suits For Young Men

The manufacturers have brought out some very handsome fabrics indeed, this Fall, in the various brown shades, that deserve the immense popularity that they have already secured.

In Suits for young men of fifteen to twenty years, we have a splendid variety of just these popular new brown fabrics.

Particularly stylish are the Double-breasted Sack Suits made of smart brown cheviots, at $12 to $15 a suit.

Men of not more than thirty-six-inch chest measure, can be fitted at quite a saving in price, among these suits.

Second floor, Fourth avenue

Fine Suits For Dressy Boys

The boy or the parent who is not satisfied with the ordinary clothing of the usual store, will be delighted to look over some of these particularly handsome suits. We make special demands on the manufacturers, not only in the way of fabrics, but in the making, at every point.

Here are two groups in particular, made of the finest pure wool fabrics, in some of the handsomest new patterns brought out this Fall. Some of the materials show attractive threads of silk, which bring out the design most beautifully.

The first group is composed of Double-breasted Jacket Suits, with knee trousers, in sizes for boys of eight to sixteen years. They are made of the very handsomest cheviots, serges, and worsteds. Priced at $10.50, $11.50 and $12.50 a suit.

The other group is composed of Norfolk Jacket Suits, with bloomer trousers; also in sizes for eight to sixteen years. They are made of the smartest cheviots and worsteds that we could find. Prices $11.50 and $12.50 a suit.

These are suits that you may perhaps find in the most exclusive stores, but you will find them priced at from $1.50 to $2.50 more than the WANAMAKER prices.

Second floor, Ninth street.

RAINCOATS for Women

There has been a perfect stampede for these smart Raincoats this Fall. In the first place, the styles are very much handsomer than they have been in the past, and then we have been successful in providing many handsome models at exceptionally low prices, and women have shown immediate appreciation.

Prices range from $12 to $25, with particularly handsome styles at $12.50, $16

Men's Neckwear At a Dollar

An Autumn showing as numerous as the "leaves at Vallombrosa"—and as rich as a Berkshire maple in its coloring. We rather fancy the showing, by reason of the variety of choice patterns and colorings, the good shapes, and the quality we offer at so popular a price—$1.

Browns and deep reds lead in favor, with grays, from light to dark shades, a good third. Shapes are four-in-hands, in two widths, 2½ and 2¾ inches, and folded squares, 2½ inches wide, which can be spread out and tied as Ascots.

We recommend the showing to men of taste who want good neckwear.

Men's Furnishings, Broadway and 9th

FALL UNDERWEAR For Men

We have no advice to offer as to what a man should wear in the way of underwear for cold weather. There are almost as many different opinions as there are men. Some have been very comfortable for years with heavy woolen underwear, and they are not going to change for some other man's opinion. Other men who have found themselves catching cold frequently in past Winters, are beginning to believe that there is something in the claim for linen underwear. There are a great many men who prefer the proper weight of cotton underwear; and there are those more luxurious who like the fine silk-and-wool weaves.

Instead of taking sides we provide underwear to suit all these men. We have a superb stock, which, while tremendously large from our point of view, is satisfying to most men.

Here are some hints of the variety in medium-weight Shirts and Drawers.

At 50c each—White or natural color Cotton.

At 75c each—Natural color or white Merino.

At $1 each—Ecru French Balbriggan; also American white or natural color Merino.

At $1.50 each—Gray Merino; shirts with stout or regular sleeves; drawers with short or long inseam.

English ecru Balbriggan; drawers with spliced seats, and short or regular inseam.

At $2 each—I. and R. Morley's Ecru Balbriggan Shirts or Drawers; drawers with spliced seats, and short or regular inseam.

At $2.50 each—English Silver Gray All-wool Shirts or Drawers; guaranteed; unshrinkable. Shirts with short or long sleeves; drawers with spliced seats, and short or regular inseam.

At $3.50 each—Shirts or drawers, of silver gray all-wool; made in England. Drawers with spliced seats and short or long inseam.

We also have a complete stock of Allen & Solly's merino and silk-and-wool underwear.

Also I. and R. Morley's white silk-and-merino shirts and drawers. And American-made blue silk-and-merino underwear in a very handsome quality.

Broadway.

Women's Suits In Smart Fall Styles

It would seem almost impossible to add to the variety that we are now showing, but of course, new styles will continue to come right through the season. The designs change; we have many handsome things today that we will not have next week, and you may like them better than some of those that come later.

Certainly no previous September has seen such a fine showing of smart dresses for women as you will find here today.

Prices of Walking Suits range from $15 to $60.

Here is special word of three attractive groups:

Two styles of Walking Suits, of tweed and cheviot; fitted jacket, with vest of cloth; others with short jackets with flare from belt, with fitted vest. Gored skirts, finished with plaits. Price $21.

Three styles of Walking Suits of cheviot; three-quarter length jackets with vest; others with fitted back and half-fitting front. Unlined plaited skirts. Price $25.

Three styles of Walking Suits, in cheviots, tweed and canvas cloth; three-quarter plaited jacket; short single-breasted jacket; gored and plaited unlined skirts. Price, $30.

Second floor, Broadway.

TAILOR-MADE SUITS For Girls

Here is the same fullness of stocks, and the same smart styles as in our tailor-made suits for women. The variety includes every really attractive style that has been brought out this season, for girls of fourteen to eighteen years. Prices range up to $55.

Here are suggestions of four attractive styles:

At $10—Suits of cheviot; loose belted coats; lined with satin; well cut flare skirt.

At $15—Suits of cheviot serge; loose coat with velvet strap across back; collar and cuffs of velvet; seams piped with taffeta; plaited skirt.

At $18.75—Suits of broadcloth; loose belted coat; trimmings of broadcloth and velvet; plaited skirt.

At $24—Suits of cheviot; long fitted coat with fancy vest in mannish effect; trimmed skirt. Second floor, Ninth st.

The Gentle Art of Being Well-Gloved

It's a subject that interests every woman — particularly now, when new gloves are an essential part of the Fall costume.

The art is easy of acquirement for the woman who makes WANAMAKER'S her glove headquarters. For whatever price she is in the habit of paying for her gloves, she is certain of getting the best possible returns here.

Three splendid lines:

The Reynier Gloves, $1.75 and $2.

The Royale Gloves, $1.50.

The Princess May Gloves, $1—the last two being our own special brands, as well-known as they are well-liked.

Tenth street.

Fancy Tailor Suitings At 50¢, Worth 75¢ a Yard

These are goods of the present season's manufacture, that will sell in the other stores that have them at 75c a yard. When the manufacturer was through taking orders, he discovered that he still had three thousand yards to sell. To close up the matter quickly he turned them over to us at a handsome concession that enables us to offer you this 75c fabric of a most desirable sort at 50c a yard.

They are in attractive mixtures of browns, blue, green, gray and black, with white Scotch mixtures forming undecided checks; with a double-line overplaid; plaid in bright contrasting colors.

An ideal fabric for making Fall walking suits. 45 inches wide.

Look to Your Linens

No need to have any fears as to the flaxenness of these Household Linens. We hate the very idea of cotton in Linens—"union" linens—as much as the farmer hates wild carrots or "jimpson" weed in his fields. The difference is, that we can keep the cotton out, by careful supervision—the farmer isn't so lucky.

J.W.

We are still selling these linens on the basis of contracts placed months ago. Meanwhile linen prices have moved up—hence our regular low prices are as good as bargain offerings to you, as far as money-saving goes. Profit by these, if your linen closet shows gaps:

Table Cloths

Bleached Table Cloths; bordered all round; unhemmed; of best Scotch makes; in choice designs.

MAIDS' APRONS 20 Cents Each

Two thousand, six hundred of them; neatly made up from an excellent quality of lawn, and sold at a price that just represents the cost of the materials!

Aprons are sold pretty close; and still the lowest price for which we have ever sold aprons of equal quality with these, is 25c. Now you can buy five for the price of four.

Three different patterns; all full and ample—new and fresh. The secret of the low price lies in the saving made on the lawn from which they were made up to our order.

The New Carpets

We've had our pick of the choicest patterns from the best carpet manufacturers in America, and it is the fault of our experts if this is not the finest stock to be found anywhere. Here are Wiltons, Axminsters, Velvets, Body Brussels, Tapestry Brussels, and Ingrain Carpets, each of the best quality in the various grades, and in the most satisfying variety of patterns. Nothing that is new or correct is missing from this superb stock.

We have made special efforts this season to gather artistic colorings in the lower grades, some of which it is difficult to distinguish from the finest qualities of carpets. This feature is exemplified particularly in plain and self-colored carpets.

In addition to the regular lines of new goods, there are many specially priced groups of equal quality, but in patterns that came earlier, that are being closed out at decisive savings to the purchaser.

RUSSIAN MURDER PLOTS HATCHED IN GENEVA

Czar's Police Say Conspirators Have Headquarters There.

ARE POWERLESS TO INTERFERE

Series of Political Crimes Organized by Six Men—De Plehve Had Escaped Death Four Times.

ST. PETERSBURG, Tuesday, Sept. 27.—While some of the features of the plot which culminated in the assassination of M. de Plehve, the Minister of the Interior, still baffle the police, the authorities profess to be now perfectly certain that the conspiracy was hatched in Geneva by half a dozen Russians, mostly Jews.

The authorities know the names and addresses of the conspirators, but are unable to take legal action against them owing to the fact that the laws of Switzerland do not interfere with political refugees, and therefore Russian terrorists there are at liberty to continue the work of assassination of Russian Ministers so long as they are able to find emissaries willing to risk their lives, the organizers never venturing to carry out their own designs.

Six men who engineered the de Plehve plot, according to the result of the Russian police investigation, are declared beyond a shadow of doubt to have organized the series of political crimes which began with the assassination of M. Bogdanovitch, Governor of Ufa, on May 19, 1903, and ended with the blowing up of Minister de Plehve on July 28 of this year, the one exception being the murder of M. Bobrikoff, the Governor General of Finland. Gerchunin, whose plot resulted in the assassination of Minister of the Interior Siplaguine on April 15, 1902, now turns out to have been only an emissary of these Geneva terrorists.

For the first time the fact is revealed that M. de Plehve's murder had been preceded by four abortive attempts to encompass his death, which the Deparement of Political Police frustrated in the nick of time by the arrest of the would-be assassins, who were quietly imprisoned. Only one of these attempts has hitherto become public, and that was revealed by the accidental explosion of a bomb in the Hotel du Nord in St. Petersburg.

Sasoneff and two of his acomplices continue to maintain obstinate silence regarding the assassination of Minister de Plehve, although one of the accomplices has confessed that he threw a bomb into the canal on the morning of the assassination. Berstein, the other accomplice, obeying the injunction of the terrorists, refuses to make any statement.

CROWBAR MAKES MISCHIEF.

Causes Short Circuit Racket—Men Knocked Flat, Trains Stalled.

A racket which was heard for some distance shook the elevated structure at Chatham Square just before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and scared into a panic a crowd on the station platform.

The trouble was caused by a workman dropping a crowbar across the third rail. He and his companion were terribly burned and traffic was delayed for about half an hour. The two men were Robert Masters and Thomas Keating, ironworkers. In getting out of the way of an approaching train Masters stumbled on the ties. The iron bar fell from his hands so that the point rested on the third rail and the handle on the sleepers.

The short circuit was accomplished with a bang. Sheets of flame darted from the rail. Both of the men were thrown flat on the tracks. Their clothing was burned from their arms and their faces and hair were scorched. Neither could move, although both retained consciousness.

Detective Howe and Policeman Walcott of the Oak Street Station, who were in the street at the time, hurried to the platform and, driving the crowd back, lifted the two men from the tracks and carried them to the station master's office. While waiting for the ambulance to arrive from the Hudson Street Hospital oil was poured on the men's burns. Both were then taken to the hospital. Masters said that the only thing he remembered was tripping on the ties.

"Then there was a blast of flame in our faces, almost as I dropped the crowbar. I don't remember hearing any explosion, but I suppose that there must have been one."

HEAR YE, ESSEX MARKET BAR.

Magistrates Seek Power to Punish the Contumacious Lawyers.

The city Magistrates, at their monthly meeting at the West Side Police Court last evening, resolved to have a bill prepared providing that they have dignity equal to that given to the Justices of Special Sessions, and authority to adjudge in contempt lawyers who appear before them with imprudent exceptions and dilatory tactics. This is a blow at the Essex Market Bar Association, so called.

Magistrate Ommen, after deploring that condition of affairs which left the Essex Market Court without a Jewish officer, said, in tones full of feeling:

"There are lawyers in the Essex Market Court, fortunately not many but more than enough, who with their interruptions and fearlessness of contempt of court force one to sit there and bear it. There should be a statute to give us the power of the dreaded contempt of court."

Magistrates Mayo and Whitman were of the opinion that there was sufficient power already to make lawyers behave themselves. The chair, Magistrate Flammer, was not positive, and Magistrate Pool agreed with him that the dignity of the court was "not properly upheld under the present laws of the charter of the Greater New York."

EXPERT JURY FOR FIRE.

Builders to Investigate the Disaster on Attorney Street.

In order fully to investigate the fire by which fourteen persons lost their lives on Sept. 4 in the tenement at 164 Attorney Street, Coroner Scholer has impaneled a jury of real estate men and expert builders. Some testimony was taken yesterday morning, but Abraham Levy, counsel for Leon Sobel, the owner of the property; Morris Levine, the lessee, and Henry Breitmann, the contractor, who was making alterations in the building, all three of whom were arrested after the fire, secured an adjournment for a week.

It is alleged that while the work of alteration was going on the fire escapes and balconies had been removed from the second floor, thus rendering escape impossible. The proceedings technically are in the nature of an inquest to determine the cause of the death of Yetta Miller, one of the victims, but the jury will hear from many witnesses the condition of the building at the time of the fire. The Coroner yesterday with his expert jury, and Police Captain Handy, of the Union Market Station, made an inspection of the burned tenement.

PARDON FOR AMERICAN SAILOR.

Cuba Will Hereafter Turn Them Over to Their Commanders.

HAVANA, Sept. 26.—As the result of representations by Minister Squiers, the Cuban Government has pardoned a sailor from an American warship who was sentenced at Santiago to two months' imprisonment for disorderly conduct.

It is understood that hereafter such sailors will be turned over to their commanding officers for discipline, the severe sentences imposed by the Guantanamo and Santiago courts being considered unjustifiable.

JAPAN CONTINUES PROSPEROUS.

Financial Condition Satisfactory and Crop Outlook Excellent.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cablegram.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Sept. 26.—Figures just published indicate the satisfactory condition of Japanese finance. Comparing the end of August, 1904, with the corresponding date in 1903, the note issues show an increase of only 21,000,000 yen, of which 19,000,000 is circulating in Manchuria and Korea.

Coined money shows a decrease of only 8,000,000 yen, while specie reserves have increased by 2,000,000 yen.

The Central Bank returns show an increase in loans of 13,000,000 yen. The associated banks of Tokio show an increase of 18,000,000 yen, affording evidence of industrial and commercial activity.

Clearing House returns show an increase of 58,000,000 yen and Post Office savings banks deposits an increase of 4,000,000, while deposits in the associated banks of Tokio increased by 21,000,000 yen.

Foreign trade exhibits an increase of 20,000,000 yen for the first eight months of the year. The rice crop is estimated at 110,000,000 yen, which is above the figure of normal years. Barley, silk, and wheat promise an excellent yield.

Of the expenditure on the war 70 per cent. remains in the country.

Altogether conditions indicate that there will be no embarrassment in continuing the war throughout 1905.

MELTON PRIOR'S PREDICTIONS.

Veteran Correspondent Thinks Other Nations Will Be Involved in War.

HONOLULU, Sept. 26.—Melton Prior, the British newspaper correspondent, who left Gen. Oku's army in disgust, arrived here to-day on the Pacific Mail steamer Mongolia from Yokohama. He says he feels absolutely certain that the war in the Far East will lead to European complications and to the most awful war in the world's history.

Mr. Prior complains that Japan has displayed bad faith toward all the correspondents. This, he says, is his twenty-seventh campaign, and it is the only one in which he has seen nothing. He believes that with the possible exception of the battle of Liao-Yang, not one correspondent has seen a shot fired, and he even doubts if the Liao-Yang fighting was witnessed by a newspaper man.

Other correspondents are on the Mongolia.

THE CRUSADER NOT SEIZED.

Owners Advised That She Has Left Moji for Shanghai.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The owners of the British steamer Crusader, from Portland, Ore., Aug. 31, which, according to a dispatch from the Kobe correspondent of The Daily Express of London, Sept. 23, had been stopped by the Japanese in Tsugaru Straits and taken to Hakodate, received a cable message to-day saying the vessel had left Moji for Shanghai after coaling.

No mention was made of any detention.

LADY CURZON BETTER.

Wireless to Inform Mrs. Leiter at Sea of Daughter's Condition.

WALMER CASTLE, Kent, Sept. 27.—(Tuesday.)—The oxygen treatment of Lady Curzon is being continued, but the oxygen is administered in less quantity, and the patient is taking nourishment better.

Lord Curzon, for the first time in a week, ventured out for a walk on the sea front yesterday.

Arrangements have been made to keep Mrs. Leiter, who is a passenger on board the steamer Vaderland, informed by wireless telegraph of the condition of her daughter.

STEERAGE FOLK PROTEST.

Say They Were Crowded and Otherwise Suffered on the Celtic.

Many of the 2,388 steerage passengers who arrived on the White Star liner Celtic Saturday have submitted affidavits to Commissioner of Immigration Williams at Ellis Island, to the effect that the steerage quarters of the great liner were overcrowded; that the attendants were extortionate in their demands, and that they were subjected to other ill-treatment. On Sunday, when Chief of Staff Robinson, who was in charge at Ellis Island in the absence of Mr. Williams, heard of the rumored abuses he detailed a corps of Registry clerks to question each of the immigrants.

The more intelligent were detained by the clerks and then escorted to Mr. Robinson's office, where they were further questioned by that official. Yesterday, when the matter was brought to the attention of Commissioner Williams, it was said at the Immigration Station that an investigation of the alleged abuses really rested with the Collector of the Port.

Collector Stranahan stated that, although it was not generally known, he had frequently imposed fines upon ships for violations of the United States laws governing the handling of immigrants. The Collector stated that he fined one vessel $5,000 recently, and cited other cases in point.

John Lee, the General Manager of the White Star Line, said:

"We have received no complaints from any passenger on the Celtic concerning the overcrowding of that vessel, or any other abuses. Neither have we had any complaints from the Ellis Island officials or from any other source."

FRENCH FLAGSHIP IN PORT.

Dupleix Arrives from Cape Breton and Anchors Alongside the Troude.

The cruiser Dupleix, flagship of Admiral Rivet of the French South Atlantic Squadron, arrived here yesterday from Sidney, Cape Breton. The Dupleix is the largest French warship to visit New York since the visit of the Rochambeau party, at which time the battleship Gaulois, flagship of Admiral Fournier, was here. On her way up the bay yesterday the Dupleix exchanged salutes with all the forts, the battleship Iowa off Tompkinsville, and Governors Island, the Headquarters of the Department of the East, United States Army.

The Dupleix proceeded slowly up the North River and anchored off Thirty-fourth Street alongside the cruiser Troude, which has been awaiting her arrival several days. After a short stay in New York both vessels will sail for the West Indies. Commander Amniot is in command of the French flagship.

BOY "KIDNAPPER" FREED.

Judge Suspends Sentence on Youth Arrested in Mannino Case.

Refusing to allow him to be made a scapegoat of, and promising to protect him from bodily harm, Judge Aspinall, in the Kings County Court, suspended sentence yesterday morning in the case of Antonio Cucozza, the Italian youth who had pleaded guilty to the charge of kidnapping growing out of the abduction of Tony Mannino, the little son of a Brooklyn contractor.

When Cucozza was arraigned yesterday morning, Judge Aspinall declared that because of the evident lack of mental strength of the youth, who is but sixteen years old, and his unfamiliarity with the customs of the country, he had been made the instrument of designing men.

PRESIDENT TO ACT ON CIGAR STAMPS HIMSELF

Domestic Manufacturers Talk of Votes at White House.

OUT OF SECRETARY'S HANDS

Editor Ellison Says If It Goes Over Until After Election There'll Be No Change.

President Roosevelt has taken the cigar stamp controversy out of the hands of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Taylor and Assistant Secretary Armstrong. Following the hearing before Mr. Taylor in Washington on Saturday, the President at the White House on Saturday evening received a committee representing domestic cigar manufacturers who desire the new customs stamp.

The committee consisted of Simon Batt of the Clear Havana Cigar Manufacturers' Association, I. Pendas of the Tampa Cigar Manufacturers' Association, A. Bijur, President of the Cigar Leaf Dealers' Association; J. W. Crounze, representing importers of leaf tobacco; John Landstreet of Richmond, representing plug tobacco manufacturers, and Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

It is said that this committee, in addition to rehearsing the arguments in favor of the new stamp, did some plain talking to Mr. Roosevelt as to the number of voters they represented, and the effect upon such voters of a decision in favor of the present stamp, or, as they put it, in favor of the Tobacco Trust. They also declared that they wanted a decision at once, and that any effort to postpone the settlement of the issue until after election would be interpreted as action hostile to the interests they represented.

At the end of the hearing, the committeemen say, the President assured them that the matter would have his instant and careful attention, and in their presence he directed Secretary Loeb to write at once to Mr. Taylor, instructing him to send all the documents and data in the case to the President by yesterday morning, or as soon thereafter as possible. Mr. Taylor was directed also to make no decision in the case until he heard from the President.

Ismar S. Ellison, editor of The United States Tobacco Journal, who has been prominent in the agitation for a new stamp, said yesterday that the feeling in the trade was very strong against any delay in deciding the issue.

"If it goes over until after election there will be no change," he said, "but we do not propose to let it go over."

Morris S. Wise, who made the argument for the domestic manufacturers before Acting Secretary Taylor, also declared that the trade intended to insist upon an immediate settlement.

HAVANA, Sept. 26.—The Cigar Manufacturers' Association has suggested, with reference to the contemplated reduction in the size and alteration in the form of warranty stamps on boxes of cigars imported into the United States, that the Cuban Government strongly urge the continuance of the conspicuous warranty stamps on genuine Havana cigars. The Cuban Government is expected to make representations on the subject to the Washington authorities.

HAS THREE FLAG OFFICERS.

Brooklyn Navy Yard Liberally Supplied—Launch Plans About Complete.

Three flag officers in command at the same time at the same station is of such rare occurrence that the three flagships at the navy yard attracted considerable interest yesterday, and the flags, or pennants, of different colors, each with its two white stars occasioned inquiry by visitors.

The receiving ship Hancock flew the blue pennant of Rear Admiral Frederick Rodgers, he being the senior; from the masthead of the Kearsarge flew the red pennant of Rear Admiral Albert S. Barker, commandant of the North Atlantic fleet, and from the masthead of the Texas flew the white pennant, that of the junior, of Rear Admiral James H. Sands, commandant of the Coast Squadron.

The Committee on Admission and Reception of the launching of the Connecticut met yesterday and completed their programme for Thursday. All persons having tickets must be in the yard before 11 o'clock or they will not be admitted, as the gates will be closed at that hour. The entrance gates will be at Sands Street, Cumberland Street, Clinton Avenue, and York Street, but only carriages and automobiles will be admitted at the latter gate, and the automobiles will be given places on one street and carriages on another, so as to avoid accident by frightened horses. The tickets designate at which gate people on foot will be permitted to enter.

THE KROONLAND IN PORT.

Supreme Court Justice Scott Approves Justice Herrick's Nomination.

With all of her passenger accommodations taken, the Red Star liner Kroonland, from Antwerp, got in yesterday afternoon. One of the liner's passengers was Supreme Court Justice Francis M. Scott.

"I have not had a chance to read Judge Parker's letter yet," said Justice Scott, "and as a result am not in a position to express my opinion of it. Concerning the nomination of Justice Herrick for Governor, however, I will say that I consider the nomination the very best one that could possibly have been made."

Commander L. L. Reamey, United States Navy, and Mrs. Reamey, and the Rev. Dr. Alexander McKenzie were also on the Kroonland.

HUSBAND AWAY, WIFE SUICIDE.

Traveling Salesman, While on Road, Hears of Wife's Death.

Mrs. Bertha Belsinger, twenty-eight years old, wife of a traveling salesman, Harry T. Belsinger, who is now away from the city, committed suicide on Sunday evening by inhaling illuminating gas in the bathroom of their apartment, on the sixth floor of the Valencia Court apartment house, at 317 West Ninety-fifth Street. Her father-in-law, Philip Belsinger, who lived there also, found her dead there, with a gas tube fastened to her mouth.

No reason is known, according to her father-in-law, for her act. Her husband was notified by telegraph and started for home.

B. T. WASHINGTON PLEADS FOR THE NEGRO RACE

Finds Southern Sentiment Awakens Against Mob Violence.

APPEALS TO HIS OWN RACE

Exhorts Them to Do Nothing Which Would Indicate They Shielded Crime.

Booker T. Washington took occasion last night, in delivering the annual opening address of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, to acknowledge the awakening sentiment of the South against mob violence, and to exhort the members of his own race so to live that nothing in their words or action should make it appear that they shielded or countenanced crime.

Mr. Washington was introduced by A. Augustus Healy, President of the Board of Trustees, to an audience which packed Association Hall to the doors. He said:

"For a number of years it has been a practice in too many parts of our country for mobs to hang and burn human beings. Within the last few weeks a public sentiment stronger and more deeply rooted than ever before has gone forth from it in words and actions of Southern Governors, the daily press, the pulpit, ex-Confederate camps, and Grand Juries which is saying in thunderous tones that we, as a Nation, must not only be bearers of the words which teach us to protect the weak, but doers when it comes to the enforcement of the law.

"In the same spirit in which I have just commended the words spoken by Southern representatives I would exhort my own race in every part of the country that they become 'doers of the word' in such a high degree that nothing in our words or actions shall make it appear that we shield or countenance crime.

"If there are members of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences who seek an outlet for their knowledge of the arts and sciences, permit me to assure you that you can find right here, in Greater New York, among the more than 60,000 members of my race, an opportunity to let your education and your generous and best impulses find expression in a way that will make you stronger."

FELT A HAND IN HIS POCKET.

Schwartz, on Crowded Car, Grabbed It—Chase Followed, One Arrest.

Sol Schwartz, who said that he was a lumber dealer of 407 East Fifty-second Street, boarded an east-bound car in Fourteenth Street at Third Avenue early last night, and on account of the crowd had to ride outside.

After riding half a block, Schwartz felt a hand in his pocket and seized it. Thereupon somebody else struck Schwartz a stinging blow in the jaw, almost knocking him off the car. The man whose hand Schwartz found in his pocket, and the other, jumped off and ran east on Fourteenth Street. Detectives Gallagher and Vance started in pursuit. Finally Gallagher overhauled one of the men, who, he says, threw a wallet into his face. He then grappled with him and handed him over to Policeman Beckner. The other man dodged into a hallway and escaped.

At the station house the man arrested said that he was Joseph Smith, a tailor, of 158 Ludlow Street. Schwartz identified the wallet, but could not identify Smith.

OPERATIONS, NOT PAPERS.

Homeopathic Medical Society Starts a Radical Departure.

The Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of New York will convene at the New York Homeopathic Medical College, Avenue A and Sixty-third Street, to-day, the sessions continuing to-morrow. A noteworthy departure from the usual medical meetings will be, that instead of papers on medical subjects, the Department of Surgery will be illustrated by actual surgical operations.

Under the Department of Public Health suggestions of importance will be made concerning the State control of tuberculosis. There will be demonstrations by the Dean of the college with X-rays in the treatment of diseases.

KILLED BY ELEVATED TRAIN.

Loss Was Too Near Platform's Edge—Wife on a Holiday.

Theodore Loss, aged forty, of 66 East End Avenue, while standing on the edge of the station platform, was struck by a northbound train on the Third Avenue Elevated Road, at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Street, about 7:20 yesterday morning and died in Lebanon Hospital later in the day.

The front car of the train struck the man in the head, and threw him back on the platform. He was taken in an ambulance to Lebanon Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull. After Loss's death, an effort was made to notify his wife, but when the policeman called at her home it was found that she had gone with her infant daughter to Central Park for the day. The police of the Morrisania Station are looking for the motorman of the train.

ASTOR PLACE AND FOURTH AVENUE

ARRESTED MAN IN THE MOON.

He's Come Down Temporarily and Is Two Feet in Height.

Jacob Sears, who is only 2 feet 3 inches in height, in spite of his fifty years of life, was arraigned yesterday by Policeman Batcheldor in the Yorkville Court on a charge of intoxication. So that Magistrate Flammer might see the prisoner Sears had to be hoisted on the rail.

"Are you quite sure this isn't a Children's Court case?" said the Magistrate.

"He ain't no kid!" declared Batcheldor. "Leastways when I arrested him on First Avenue he used language that no man could acquire under his majority."

"What do you do for a living?" inquired Magistrate Flammer of the dwarf, whose hair was quite gray.

"Me?" said Sears. "Nuthin' these days. You see, I'm out of my element, havin' just come from the moon, which went out of business on Saturday night."

"Why, I saw the moon last night," said Magistrate Flammer.

"No, Sir," said the dwarf. "Luna Park closed for the season on Saturday night. Say, Judge," added the little man from the moon, "I want to charge this p'liceman with havin' interfered with a common carrier."

"What do you mean?"

"I was carryin' a load when he arrested me." And the dwarf chuckled hugely.

"Don't try to be funny," said Magistrate Flammer. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"That so!" cackled the irrepressible moon man. "I'm big enough to know better, as the saying is. But you mustn't be too hard, Judge. Moonshine is the natural diet of us lunar lunies."

"Well," said the Magistrate, "I'll let you go this time."

oT the policeman he added:

"Batchelder, you hold the unique distinction of having arrested the man in the moon."

REPRIMANDS FOR POLICE.

New Trouble for Captains—To Favor Men on Patrol.

Police Commissioner McAdoo, according to announcement yesterday, has adopted a new form of official reprimand for Captains whose work is not satisfactory, but against whom there is not sufficient evidence to put them on trial. These reprimands, written by the Commissioner, will not only be read to the men and posted in every station house, but will appear on the record of each offender, and will be considered whenever his name comes up for promotion. In regard to promotions in the rank and file, Mr. McAdoo said yesterday that hereafter he would favor men who had been steadily on patrol work to those who have had easy special details to courts and the like. He holds that the man on street duty, being more subject to temptations and dangers, deserves more credit than the other, precisely as in the United States Navy, of which Mr. McAdoo was once Assistant Secretary, a man on shore leave deserves less credit than the man who has been on sea. Gen. Greene, Commissioner McAdoo's predecessor, attempted to make such a regulation as this, but the Municipal Civil Service Commission blocked him by ruling that no lesser honors should attach to men on details than to those in the street.

Mr. McAdoo yesterday granted to Inspector Albertson of the Bronx and Capt. Ferris of the Morrisania Station an extra day each, or until to-day, to report on their failure to suppress a poolroom raided over their heads, and he also asked Capt. McNally of the Church Street Station for a similar report because of the raiding of two alleged poolrooms in the Captain's precinct and over the Captain's head last Saturday.

After he had done that he announced that he had ordered Capt. O'Brien of the Newtown Station and Capt. Aloncle of the Charles Street Station to change places. It is said that the number of burglaries which recently have been reported from the Charles Street Station caused the Commissioner to take this action.

SEXTON'S MEMORY LAPSED.

After Accident He Wandered for Nearly a Week.

William L. Cole, thirty-four years old, sexton of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Jersey City, who disappeared from his home at 324 Summit Avenue, on Tuesday last, returned yesterday. As he had told his wife that he was going crabbing, she feared that he had been drowned.

Mr. Cole said he went to Greenville and went to the Lehigh Valley Railroad bridge in Newark Bay. While reaching with his net he fell overboard, striking his head against a pile. He managed to climb to the bridge, and got on a freight train. Then he became unconscious. When he regained his senses he found that the train hands had put him into the caboose. They told him he was in Pittsburg. He left the train and made his way home. He said he had suffered a similar loss of memory two years ago.

When he recovered his senses he found himself at the home of a cousin in Baltimore. He had no idea how he got there.

SUICIDE AT HOTEL ENDICOTT.

Banditz, Venezuela Cattleman, Shoots Himself at Midnight.

The police of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station were notified early this morning that Charles Frederick Banditz, twenty-five years old, a cattleman of Venezuela, committed suicide at midnight by shooting himself in his room at the Hotel Endicott, Eighty-first Street and Columbus Avenue.

At the Hotel Endicott all knowledge of the shooting was denied.

DOUKHOBORS AGAIN ON MARCH.

On Way to United States This Time, Looking for Warmer Climate.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 26.—Word has been received from a Doukhobor colony near Saskatoon, N. W. T., that a large body of Doukhobors had started on a march for the United States. This time they are looking for a warmer climate.

The affair is causing much excitement, as it is known to what extremes these people will go to attain their ends. It is feared they have started on the longest pilgrimage they have ever had. The royal Northwest mounted police are on the way to intercept them.

NEW HAVEN COMMUTERS LOSE.

A. W. Cole of New Rochelle Criticises Railroad Commission's Action.

Commuters on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad have lost their fight before the State Railroad Commission to compel the restoration of trains recently discontinued and for other reforms on the line. The commission, after considering the matter since a large public hearing on Aug. 23, finds that the service cannot be increased without imperiling passengers because of congestion in the tunnel and the confusion incident to the great improvements in progress at the Grand Central tehminal.

A. W. Cole of New Rochelle, who spoke in favor of the commuters at the August hearing, had this to say last night of the commission's finding:

"Think of it! They will not recommend the restoration of the 11:30 P. M. theatre train, a train, which, as far as accidents are concerned, could be safely dragged through the tunnel by mules at that hour.

"The New Haven Road has put itself on record, both in public and by correspondence, that it reduced its service simply because traffic had fallen off, and that it stood ready to increase its service without limit if the public would back it up with patronage.

"Yet, in the face of this, the commission, after employing an expert four days on the train, considers it inexpedient to restore the trains for fear of accident.

"Why does the commission exist? Does any one remember any good it ever accomplished? Is it part of the Odell machine? Westchester voters are doing some thinking, and their answer will be known in November."

UNION IRON WORKS SOLD.

Bought In by Shipbuilding Reorganization Committee for $1,700,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—The Union Iron Works, one of the properties of the former United States Shipbuilding Corporation, was sold at public auction to-day by order of the Federal Court of the District of New Jersey.

James Smith, Jr., receiver of the corporation, who was appointed a Special Master in Chancery for the occasion, conducted the sale. The only bidder was Francis D. Pollock, representing the Reorganization Committee of the new Shipbuilding Company, 70 per cent. of the stock of which is owned by Charles M. Schwab. His bid of $1,400,000 for the real property of the concern, the minimum allowable under the terms of sale, was accepted. He also paid $300,000 for the personal property.

SMOKE ROUTS 200 CHILDREN.

Imperfectly Adjusted Furnace Dampers Make Trouble at Asylum.

A fire started in the furnace of St. Michael's Orphan Asiyum, at Pavonia Avenue and Erie Street, Jersey City, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, before the dampers were set right, sent smoke through the corridors and out of the windows. A man passing turned in a fire alarm. Then the sisters in charge put the 200 children through a fire drill.

The cause of the alarm was quickly learned by the firemen and the children returned to bed.

NOVEL PEACE MEETING HERE AT SHORT NOTICE

Foreign Delegates and French Labor Men Meet Civic Federation.

WELCOME CALL TO THE HAGUE

Roosevelt Enthusiastically Praised—Industrial Quiet Advanced as True Basis for Understanding of Nations.

In the college room of the Hotel Astor there was a gathering yesterday afternoon which, according to some of the distinguished political economists who made addresses, marked an epoch in the industrial history of the world. Under the auspices of the Civic Federation there were assembled all of the foreign delegates to the Interparliamentary Congress recently in session in St. Louis, the delegation of French laboring men who are about to make a tour of this country to study the conditions of labor and industry, and members of the National Civic Federation representing labor, the employers, and the public. The object of the meeting was to discuss the best means of promoting industrial peace throughout the civilized world. It was the first gathering of the sort that has been attended by men from all the great nations of Europe.

The affair was hastily planned, and for that reason the success with which it was attended was all the more gratifying to those who conceived the idea. The guests of the Civic Federation were requested to assemble at the Hotel Astor for a luncheon. The invitations said that the affair was to be entirely informal, and the promise of informality was carried out in a manner which served to give the foreigners a taste of American democracy. Few of those who were to be called upon to address the assemblage were notified until after their arrival at the hotel, and when it came time for the procession to the dining room, H. H. Vreeland, representing the Federation, addressed the guests of the Federation in this way:

"Gentlemen, as this luncheon is to be entirely informal, you will choose your own partners and take seats in the dining hall wherever you like."

A table which had been reserved for guests of honor and speakers had been placed at the head of the three long tables, but that arrangement was entirely ignored. Chairman Oscar Straus of the Federation and President Richard Bartholdt of the Interparliamentary Congress took seats at the head of one of the three long tables, and the other speakers seated themselves as individual fancy dictated.

The list of the foreign delegates to the Interparliamentary Congress has been frequently published recently. All of them were present. Those present from the Civic Federation were:

St. Clair McKelway,	Warren H. Page,
Oswald G. Villard,	Lyman Abbott,
Charles S. Smith,	John Finley,
James Speyer,	Ralph M. Easley.
Hamilton Holt,

Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the Federation, opened the speechmaking by asking the guests to drink to the health of all the sovereigns whose representatives are in this country to promote the cause of international peace. The toast was drunk standing. The Hon. Thomas Lough, M. P., then arose and said that on behalf of the representatives of foreign countries present he wished to propose the health of the President of the United States.

THE PRESIDENT A "RULER."

"I take great pleasure in this privilege," said Mr. Lough, as he raised his glass, "for we who are visitors here regard your President as the ruler of one of the mightiest powers of the earth, who has taken a more distinct step in the interests of peace than that which has been taken by any other ruler. He is not only a great ruler himself, but is a worthy representative of a great line of rulers who have done much for the liberties of mankind."

Mr. Lough's tribute to the President was received with hearty applause, but his repeated reference to him as a ruler provoked smiles. When the toast to the President had been drunk Chairman Straus spoke. He began with this remark, which was vigorously applauded:

"We have reason to congratulate you upon the initial success which has attended your mission to this country in the interest of international peace because you have obtained from the President a prompt decision to summon a second international conference in order to further strengthen and complete the work of The Hague Tribunal and to bring the future of humanity under the majesty of the law."

National happiness, Mr. Straus said, was the best guarantee of international peace. The spirit of the age, he declared, was clearly for peace. He promised the aid of the Federation to that end.

When Mr. Straus had ended his speech he introduced Representative Richard Bartholdt, President of the Interparliamentary Congress. Mr. Bartholdt said that the Congress was not striving to abolish war with one fell swoop, because that was impossible, but "to starve to death the dogs of war" by promoting a policy of mutual agreement between the nations in times of peace and submitting any controversy which may arise to arbitration."

The Hon. W. Randal-Cremer, M. P., was then introduced by Chairman Straus as "the prince of peace, the pioneer of arbitration and conciliation," who had obtained the Nobel prize for being the most distinguished promoter of international goodwill. In the course of his remarks Mr. Randal-Cremer paid a high tribute to President Roosevelt in contrasting him with foreign statesmen. This was received with both applause and laughter, the laughter being due to the approving stress laid by the speaker on traits of the President which are just at present under strenuous discussion in politics.

Mr. Randal-Cremer recalled the message of peace brought here seventeen years ago from the British Parliament, and continued:

"Our proposal for international peace failed at that time, but we are now promised most emphatically by the President of the United States that he will try to bring about that which we failed seventeen years ago to accomplish. When I stood in that room in the White House a few days ago where seventeen years ago I had been on a similar mission, I could not help but contrast the reception which our later proposal received with that which we made on our first visit.

HOW ROOSEVELT TALKS.

"There was no ambiguity about the words of the President. I could not help make a comparison between his straightforward way of meeting our proposal and the manner in which we have been met by statesmen abroad. There was no ambiguity about his words. When we have spoken to those in authority in the Old World they have expressed full sympathy with our purposes, have stated that they sincerely desired to promote our work, but—there was always a 'but,' 'but,' 'but.' But there were no 'buts' in the answer of President Roosevelt. His words were clear, distinct, manly, and straight from the shoulder. [Great applause.]

"All who heard his noble words were rejoiced, as I was. In conclusion I will say that I hope the Civic Federation will be as successful in preventing industrial wars as the Interparliamentary Union has been in preventing—not in the present, but in the future—wars between the various nations of the earth."

Samuel Gompers, who followed Mr. Randal-Cremer, referred to Mr. Carnegie's support of the British peace mission of seventeen years ago. He also referred to the ground taken by Mr. Bartholdt that the Government ought to have a commission to arbitrate labor disputes. Mr. Gompers disagreed; the solution, he said, would be found in the growing intelligence of the people. "You cannot write it into law," he said. Despite conflicts, he said, the movement for peace was on.

Prof. Hoffman, a member of the German Reichstag, said that the equality of the classes here, which he had observed during his visit, had convinced him that "democracy" was not an empty word with the Americans. M. Paul Strauss, Senator of France, made a long address in French. He said that industrial peace was a necessary beginning to the establishment of peace between the nations. Ladislaus V. Gniewosz, member of the Reichsrath, spoke for Austria.

Emile Vandervelde, a Deputy of Belgium, who is said to be the most eloquent public speaker of his country, said that as he was a Socialist he was inclined to think that many present would be inclined to regard him as a black sheep. He said he wished to express his great gratitude to President Roosevelt for what he had done in the cause of international peace by his promise to call a new conference at The Hague.

"Our difference," said Mr. Vandervelde, "is not in principle, but in the application of principle. You are proceeding in such a commendable way to bring about both industrial and international peace that the noble statue which adorns the beautiful harbor of New York may be said to be really typical of your country's purpose and of its accomplishment. If you remain true to your ideals and show the same zeal in perpetuating and extending them which you have convinced us is your honest purpose, then may it not be that some day we will have a United States of Europe and at a more distant day a United States of the World."

Prof. E. Coccotti, an Italian Deputy, was the next speaker. He said that if he spoke in his native tongue no one would understand him, and therefore he would assay English.

"I must make my speech one of shortness," said the professor, "because I would run out of words if I went on."

Prof. Coccotti said that he was a Socialist, and that he believed there would come a day when the happiness of mankind would be general.

Charles Sprague Smith said that the Chamber of Commerce was in full sympathy with all of the ideas which had been expressed by the Chairman, Mr. Gompers, and other speakers. He said that reciprocity of trade between the nations would be the best means of promoting international peace.

John Olssen spoke for Sweden, Alfred Brustlaur for Switzerland, and Albert Metin, Professor of Political Economy in the Colonial and Naval Cadet Schools of France, and representative of the French Minister of Commerce, spoke for the delegation of French workingmen now on a visit to this country.

Prof. Metin, who had acted as interpreter for all of the other speakers who had spoken in French, created some amusement by making his address in French and then translating it into English.

HAGUE CALL NON-PARTISAN.

"Democrat Would Have Done Same Thing," Bartholdt Says.

More than 100 of the peace delegates attended a reception in their honor last night at the City Club, in West Forty-fourth Street. In keeping with the international character of the gathering, the flags of the eleven countries represented by the delegates were hung about the room, each group of delegates with its resident Consul congregating about its own particular flag. The City Club turned out in force. Its President, Wheeler H. Peckham, welcomed the visitors.

Mayor McClellan followed Mr. Peckham, and his speech was frequently and heartily applauded. Three rousing cheers rewarded him when he closed. "Tiger!" yelled an enthusiastic member of the City Club. There was a moment's pause, then everybody laughed, including the Mayor. The "tiger" yell was omitted. The Mayor said in part:

"There is scarcely a war in the history of the world which in its petty beginnings could not have been avoided had the belligerent nations known each other better and had been better acquainted with each other's aims. In Congress I have met many men of affairs, but I have come to the conclusion that Congressmen in general knew very little of things without their own country. What I am about to tell you is not apocryphal, since it concerns my father. An Archduke expressed surprise once that he should speak English so well, as he always had thought that Spanish was the language of the United States.

"In Paris once, too, a Boulevard paper gave way to some astonishment because a negro had been elected President of the United States—Abraham Lincoln, a black Republican.

"Do we know any better now? I doubt if any man in this room can tell me the name of the President of the Swiss Confederacy.

"Any movement that brings men of different nations together tends to international good feeling and international peace, and this movement, I hope, finally shall achieve its ultimate end of peace upon earth and good will to men."

Congressman Richard Bartholdt and William Randal-Cremer, M. P., also made speeches.

Mr. Bartholdt, who is President of the International Parliamentary Union, declared that there was no partisanship in the union, "and the man who mentions partisanship belittles this great country."

"It is true," the Congressman continued, "that a Republican President has called the second conference to meet at The Hague, but I as a Republican am willing to admit that had a Democrat been President he would have done the same thing."

Considerable historic interest attaches to the gavel used by President Peckham at the reception. It was used on the centennial of the inauguration of George Washington at the meeting in the Long Room in Fraunces's Tavern, at the organization of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, at the centennial of the adoption of the constitutional amendments by Congress, and under the leadership of Kosciusko, at the six hundredth anniversary of the Swiss Federation, on the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Washington, and on the one hundredth anniversary of the freedom of the press in Hungary. On the six hundred and eighty-ninth anniversary of the signing of the Magna Charta the gavel rested on the table at Runnymede upon which King John signed the famous document. It was used also by the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives which invited this year's meeting of the Interparliamentary Union to come to the United States. The gavel is owned by Dr. W. O. McDowell.

Crushed to Death by Elevator.

Armand Artofics, fifty-six years of age, who had been employed for the past three years as a fireman in the Empire Building, at Broadway and Rector Street, was crushed to death late yesterday afternoon by the elevator used for hoisting ashes to the sidewalk at the Trinity Place end of the building. The dead man lived with his wife and a large family at 129 Essex Street, Jersey City.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS HERE.

More Than a Thousand Priests to Gather at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Solemn pontifical mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral this morning will open the third American Eucharistic Congress, which will be the occasion of the gathering of more than 1,000 priests from all parts of the United States. Mgr. Falconio, Apostolic Delegate, will attend, with several Archbishops and more than twenty Bishops. A triduum has been arranged in every church of the archdiocese by Archbishop Farley, and there will be many meetings of the People's Eucharistic League, of which there are twenty branches in and around this city. The laymen, however, will not attend the three days' business sessions of the congress.

Vicar General Mooney will speak following the mass, his sermon being on "The Holy Eucharist in the Twentieth Century." Gregorian chants will be sung by a picked choir of men and boys, comprising the best voices at St. Joseph's Seminary, at Dunwoodie, the Catholic College, and the Cathedral School. Sessions of the congress will open at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Cathedral College Hall, close by in Madison Avenue. Here Bishop Maes, Protector of the Eucharistic League, will preside. Archbishop Farley will welcome the delegates, and a message from Pope Pius X. will be read granting three special indulgences to those attending the congress and triduum.

Some of the prelates expected or already in the city are Archbishop Williams of Boston, Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, Bishop Harkins of Providence, Bishop Camillus P. Maes of Covington, Ky.; Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, Bishop Colton of Buffalo, Bishop Richter of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Bishop Hoban of Scranton, Bishop O'Connor of Newark, Bishop O'Connell of Portland, Me.; Bishop Michaud of Burlington, Vt.; Bishop Gabriels of Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Bishop Ludden of Syracuse, N. Y.; Bishop Beaven of Springfield, Mass., and Bishop Thomas M. A. Burke of Albany.

FIREMEN IN CRASH.

Driver Ran Tender Into Pillar to Avoid Car and Auto.

To avoid colliding with a trolley car and a brewery automobile which blocked his way at Third Avenue and Eighteenth Street yesterday morning, Driver William Head of the tender of Engine 14, answering a call for a slight fire at 132 East Seventeenth Street, turned his vehicle into one of the steel pillars of the elevated railroad structure there. He narrowly escaped being crushed between the seat of the tender and the pillar. He leaped off just in time.

Four of the tender's crew were thrown off by the shock, but escaped with bruises. The tender's pole was snapped half way off, and one of the horses was badly cut.

COST 85C. TO WAKE FRANZ UP.

That Is, Until Magistrate Marked It Down to 10 Cents.

Edward Weil, who lives at 224 East Eighty-seventh Street, went to the drug store of W. A. Franz, at Eighty-third Street and Third Avenue, some time in the small hours Monday morning, woke up the proprietor and told him that the Weil baby had convulsions.

Weil wanted to get some mustard. While in the store he also telephoned for his physician, and tendered Franz a dollar in payment. Franz refused to give him any change, saying that he would keep the balance in payment of his trouble in getting out of bed.

Franz was summoned into the Harlem Court yesterday and said that he thought that he was entitled to the money, as he had been very sound asleep when awakened by Weil. After hearing the stories of both men, Magistrate Crane said to Franz:

"There is no reason why you'd should have charged anything extra. You put a night bell on your store as an invitation for night trade, and then want to charge for it. You can keep 10 cents for your trouble. That's enough."

Franz returned the 75 cents and went out saying that he thought he'd either take the bell off or muffle it.

Grieved Over Sister, Shot Himself.

George Fanagan, thirty-four years of age, shot himself in the right temple yesterday afternoon in the kitchen of the apartment at 110 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, where he lived with his wife and step-daughter, Mabel Hoffman. He was removed to the Fordham Hospital, where he lies in a critical condition. Miss Hoffman said that her step-father had been acting queerly ever since the death of his sister, four months ago, for whom he never seemed to stop grieving.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

John E. Madden yesterday sold at private sale a number of the horses of his establishment, among the number being Beldia, Vamoose, Alcantara, and Winchester.

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., has sold to M. H. Tichenor the two-year-old The Novice for $2,500. The Novice is engaged in some of the late Fall stakes of the East, but it is likely that he will be taken West to race.

Jockeys Hildebrand and Redfern carried away the riding honors of the day at Gravesend, each having two winning mounts, Hildebrand winning on Gunfire and De Reszke and Redfern winning on Burnt Hills and Lady Amelia.

Dr. Grabensee, Director of the German Imperial Stud of Celle, Hanover, and his secretary, Herr Kreig, were visitors at the Gravesend race track yesterday as the guests of Starter C. J. Fitzgerald, and in the course of the afternoon visited a number of the training stables and inspected many of the best known and most prominent horses. Dr. Grabensee is in the United States on a special mission connected with the Government breeding farms of Germany, and arrived in New York yesterday from St. Louis, where he went on official business after having inspected many of the leading thoroughbred stock farms of Kentucky and Missouri.

The singular discovery was made yesterday by Thomas Doyle, the shoer of race horses, that the famous horse McChesney has been racing practically through the season with a nail hole in his near fore foot, filled with clotted blood. The injury to the foot showed plainly to be an old one, but there had been no suppuration, and the wound seemingly was clean, though it must have caused the horse pain when he put weight on the foot. A veterinary surgeon was called at once to examine the horse, and it was found after the wound had been cleaned of the coagulated blood that the damage was not serious, though it was sufficient to decide E. E. Smathers, owner of McChesney, to retire the horse for the season.

Two horses fell in the steeplechase yesterday at Gravesend, one of the accidents producing about the most remarkable tumble ever witnessed on a steeplechase field. The victim of the accident was Heider, riding Nancy D., that struck the top boards of the Liverpool jump going at it the second time, and was thrown. The rider was pitched forward, but clung to his reins, and was tossed in a complete somersault over the mare's head, making the turn with all the grace of a circus acrobat, and, though with no intent on his own part, landing on his feet on the far side of the jump. He escaped unhurt. Messina also fell with Jockey Weir, who was stunned, but recovered in a few minutes and left the field unaided.

DR. DAVIDSON IN NEW YORK.

Busy Week Laid Out for Primate in the Metropolis.

Arriving here last night on a special train from Washington, the Archbishop of Canterbury, his wife, J. Pierpont Morgan, and party were driven to the Waldorf-Astoria, where the Archbishop took a suite of rooms on the third floor.

The arrival of the Archbishop apparently was not known to many in the big station at Jersey City, and the party quietly went from the train to the Twenty-third Street Ferry. Mrs. Davidson superintended the removal of the baggage, and lingered near it, giving orders, while the Archbishop and Mr. Morgan went ahead on board the ferryboat. The party went on the front end of the upper deck, where Mr. Morgan pointed out the interesting parts of the city.

The Archbishop will have a busy week here. He will be entertained to-day by the Church Club at the Hotel Astor. He will be present on Wednesday morning, when the Diocesan Convention is opened, and in the afternoon will attend the opening ceremonies at Columbia University when a degree will be conferred upon him. On Friday he will go to Philadelphia to attend a convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Returning to this city the following day, he will preach on Sunday at Trinity Church. On Tuesday the Archbishop will leave with his party for Boston.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Before starting for New York the Archbishop of Canterbury went to Mount Vernon to-day as the guest of Gen. Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, to visit the home and tomb of Washington. The party included Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador; Secretary of the Navy Morton, J. Pierpont Morgan, and about twenty others.

Takes Acid by Mistake.

Mrs. Harriet Gibson of 44 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, died early this morning from the effects of swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid which, according to her family, she took by mistake for another medicine.

Mrs. Gibson had been indisposed for several days, and shortly after midnight left her bed to get some medicine that was in her room. The acid bottle was on the same table as the medicine she desired to take, and before the mistake was discovered she had swallowed a lot of the poison.

An ambulance was called from the Cumberland Street Hospital, but when Dr. Rink arrived Mrs. Gibson had been dead some time.

WON 103 GAMES AND EQUALED THE RECORD

New York Took Last Contests from Pittsburg and Season's Series.

AMERICANS LOST THE LEAD

Greater New Yorks Beaten Twice by Cleveland, While Boston Triumphed Over Detroit.

In addition to defeating the Pittsburgs in a double-header yesterday, the New York National League team equaled the Pittsburgs great record of 103 games won when the team won the championship in 1903, and furthermore beat the champions in the season's series by twelve games to ten. In the American League the Greater New Yorks lost both games with Cleveland, while the Bostons were twice victorious over Detroit, which placed them in the lead for the championship by eleven points. Beginning with to-day the New York Nationals will meet the Chicagos five times, while the Greater New Yorks will fill out the balance of the week by playing Detroit and Chicago. In the meantime the Bostons will visit Cleveland and St. Louis. Summary yesterday:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York Team Wins Two with Taylor and McGinnity Pitching.

The New York team had two objects in view yesterday when it engaged in a double-header with the Pittsburgs. One was to equal the record of 103 games made by the Pittsburgs when they won the National League championship in 1903, and the other was to win the season's series from the present champions. To succeed the home team was required to capture both games, and this it did by excellent playing and the clever pitching of both Taylor and McGinnity.

Taylor's pitching had a great deal to do with the New Yorks' victory in the first game, for Leever was wild at times, and his team suffered in consequence. Dahlen's throwing was rather irregular in both games, and it required some long reaching upon the part of both McGann and Bowerman to catch the runner.

McGinnity's pitching was the conspicuous feature of the second game. The "Iron Man" never before showed better form, and it was not until the sixth inning that Gilbert made the first and only hit of the game after the side should have been retired. In the third inning McGinnity struck out the only man who came to the bat. Flaherty, the youngster with the "Wonderful Wing," also pitched well, but his support was poor. Only two hits were made off him, but these, with McCormick's fumble, gave the New Yorks the only run of the game. In the third inning Browne was declared out at the plate on Bowerman's hit to Ritchey, and this caused almost the entire New York team to surround Umpire Moran and protest. Browne had caused Phelps to drop the ball, but not until the runner was clearly out. In the sixth inning Browne and Flaherty had a warm argument at the plate, and the umpire had to interfere to avert what looked like a certain clash. The scores.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Chesbro and Powell Fail to Save Greater New Yorks from Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 26.—In two splendidly played games in this city today the home team defeated the Greater New Yorks in both, the score of the first contest being 4 to 3 and the second 6 to 2. It was the closing meeting of the season between the teams, and the series stands eleven victories for New York and nine for Cleveland. That Griffith intended to make a hard fight to capture both games was evident when he placed Chesbro and Powell in the pitcher's box, but each had an unfortunate inning and lost. Powell was hit on the knee by a batted ball, and when he left the grounds suffered great pain.

In the first game Chesbro pitched with his usual effectiveness for a time, as "Happy Jack" was heard to remark just before play began that he wished to win his tenth consecutive game. For seven innings, with both teams playing perfectly in the field, Chesbro kept the New hits well scattered, and the score at that period stood 3 to 1 in favor of the New Yorks. In the eighth inning however, with three men on bases, Stovall, who had not made a safe hit, placed the ball into the outfield for three bases, tallying three runs and winning the game. Turner's display at shortstop was the finest ever seen in this city. Thirteen chances were offered to him, and he accepted them all.

Powell was batted freely in the second game, but it was not until the seventh inning that the hits were turned to a good account. Besides, he became irregular in his delivery, forcing two men home. A strong batting scored two more. The New Yorks' runs were made by Anderson's base hit, a steal of second and a two-bagger by Ganzel, which allowed Anderson to score. After McGuire had been thrown out at first base Ganzel got home on a wild pitch. The scores:

BOSTON'S IMPORTANT VICTORIES.

DETROIT, Sept. 26.—Boston stepped back into first place by winning both games of the double-header here to-day. In the first one Donovan did not give a bit, but kicked on decisions until he was sent to the clubhouse in the sixth inning. Stovall lost his head in the eighth and Boston won on two hits, his error and Dineen's steal of home. Dineen pitched a great game.

In the second, Detroit knocked Winter out in an inning, but Boston came right back and batted in a lead in the next, then was never headed. Detroit had a chance to win in the eighth, but after making three hits off Young could not get in the needed single. Throws to the plate by Barrett and Crawford were features. Scores:

YANKEE LED THE "SEVENTIES."

Vanderbilt Yachts Rainbow and Virginia Beaten by Fair Margins.

The seventy-footer Yankee, steered by Harry Maxwell, a son of her owner, J. Rogers Maxwell, sailed a great race yesterday afternoon, and signally defeated her two competitors. She beat the Virginia, which finished second, 3:01, and the Rainbow 7:04.

The race was sailed on Long Island Sound, over the Glen Cove course of the New York Yacht Club, in a fresh breeze that was a little more than abeam at the start and south-southwest at the finish. The start was at 1:40, and the Yankee, as usual, was first to cross the line. The Virginia followed in second place, and the Rainbow was last.

Soon after the start the Rainbow drew up on the Virginia, and the two got into a luffing

SIXTEEN PAGES.

THE TWO LETTERS.

Judge PARKER would be elected President by a hundred majority in the Electoral College if every voter in the United States would read with close attention and open-mindedness his letter of acceptance. We pity the dullness that does not see that it is a great paper, an eloquent, sobering, and saving appeal to the American people no longer to permit themselves to be fooled and misled; we think candid men will be moved to just anger and contempt for that stupid partisanship which denies its high merits.

President ROOSEVELT'S letter was remarkable, it was astonishingly able. It was almost reckless in its brilliant way of putting the case for a dashing, smashing, high-handed administration of the Presidential office. We said when it appeared that the American people had never before been talked to in that way. It wasn't quite imperial; rather like a master, whip in hand, haranguing slaves muttering revolt. Half the male population of the country above the age of twenty-one was roundly insulted and berated, in a lump, as a vile herd, without convictions and without conscience. It was extraordinary, but its experienced and skilful author knew very well that it was taking, that crowds would like it, would "hoorah" mightily.

Now comes ALTON B. PARKER'S letter. It is not of the kind to evoke the yells of crowds. It is addressed to men who think. It is a warning, a strong voice through the darkness and storm telling of peril and how to escape it. The letter is, in fact, a first-rate test of the people.

Sometimes in a playhouse there may be seen a great actor whose fine mind and finished art wonderfully picture forth all the hidden things that lie in the soul of the character he personates, while upon the same boards a robustuous player to the galleries bestrides the stage and fills the whole house with his roaring passion. The comparison is unflattering—we use it because of its exactness. The taste and cultivation of the audience to which two such actors make their appeal are not more surely proved out than the judgment, the commo.. sense, and the capacity for sober reasoning of the American electorate will be proved out by the two letters of acceptance.

AN AMATEUR OF COURAGE.

"As an amateur of courageous politics," The Sun avouches, its "hopes and interest rose high" when it read the acceptance portion of Judge PARKER'S reply to Mr. ROOSEVELT'S challenge on the question of Pension Order No. 78. But "profound disappointment" ensued on perusing the further utterance of the Democratic candidate that he would contribute his effort "toward the enactment of a law passed by both houses of Congress and approved by the Executive" that will give an age pension without reference to disability to the surviving heroes of the civil war. Here, moralizes our neighbor sadly, is evidence that Judge PARKER has "outbid" the President "for the veteran vote."

Can even an amateur lack wisdom to see that it is not only courageous for a candidate to take up the gage of battle; that on fair grounds he may fight his foe, excel him in strategy, outgeneral him, vanquish him, and upon the issue challenged capture an army? By the most exacting rules of chivalry, without the loss of a grain of honor, Judge PARKER is entitled to the suffrage, the consent, the approval, and the loyalty of the Grand Army of the Republic.

THE TIMES has not declared itself in favor of an age pension. It regrets that Judge PARKER has so declared himself, but at any rate he promises to act with proper regard to constitutional limitations. It is a point worth making, too, as he notes with simple pertinency, that after such regardful action, "a pension may be accepted with dignity, because of the consciousness that it comes as a just due from the people through their chosen representatives, and not as largess distributed by the Chief Executive."

RUSSIA'S SECOND ARMY.

The Czar has conciliated the good opinion of mankind by the frank and ungrudging acknowledgment, in his letter to Gen. GRIPPENBERG, of "the stubbornness and high warlike qualities displayed by the Japanese." It is a sufficiently explicit acknowledgment, as explicit as could be expected, that the Czar and his advisers have found the undertaking upon which they have ventured, like the French in 1870, "in gayety of heart," far more serious and difficult than they imagined.

The Czar's letter has evidently been framed very carefully in order to avoid the semblance of a reflection upon Gen. KUROPATKIN. But it will necessarily be taken as such a reflection, both within and without the Russian Army. Why should not the second Manchurian army be treated as a reinforcement of the first? Why should there be a divided command of two bodies aiming at the same objective and contending against the same enemy? The Japanese, indeed, dispatched their three armies separately and under separate commanders. But as soon as they had gained positions from which they could be employed together they were assembled under the general command of Marshal OYAMA. Why should a veteran of sixty-six, an age at which not one man in a thousand is in a physical condition to make a campaign, be called from his retirement, if the actual command of the existing Manchurian army was satisfactory?

There is no answer to these questions. The new appointment does constitute a criticism of Gen. KUROPATKIN, and, according, we think, to the general judgment of professional soldiers, a most unjust criticism. It implies that some other Russian General might have done better than he, whereas the professional opinion seems to be that he has done wonderfully well. Gen. KUROPATKIN was as far as possible from being one of the Muscovite jingoes. He was under no illusions about the comparative force which Russia and Japan could bring to bear in Korea and Manchuria. Neither the war nor the plan of campaign to which he was committed was of his choosing, and the plan incumbered him with unnecessary difficulties. But, in spite of everything, and against a greatly superior force which was intelligently and strenuously striving to destroy it, he has saved for Russia the first Manchurian army, has shown himself the fittest man to be intrusted with the command of any further Manchurian armies, and has deserved extremely well of his country. To have an equal and competitor adjoined to him in command is not the reward to which such a soldier was entitled, though if he has read history it is very likely that which he expected.

THE BIG CRIMES FIRST.

The arrest of a desperate band of criminals in Fifth Avenue Sunday evening, one of whom, a woman, was smoking a cigarette, has inspired the people of the city with a feeling of greater public security. The incident is distinctly reassuring, because it shows that the Police Department has at last resolved to concentrate its energies upon the more dangerous lawbreakers and to devote itself to the prevention of those shocking crimes that strike at the foundations of society and fill the community with a sense of dread and horror.

The circumstances of the case were notable. The woman, who was one of a party of four occupying an automobile, was a brunette and still young, probably not over fifty-two. To the quick mind of the bicycle policeman who made the arrest these facts were significant; they afforded all the evidence he needed of the revolting crime that was being committed before his eyes. He knew his duty. At once and fearlessly he commanded the woman to stop smoking, and when her companions had the hardihood to dispute his rights in the matter he took all hands to the station house.

New Yorkers will now have fuller confidence in the adequacy of their police protection. There was a bad murder in Brooklyn the other day, and the police have hit upon no clue to the murderer; in fact, the list of undetected New York murderers is rather longer than usual; the pickpockets are doing a fine Fall trade; there is said to be something the matter with the three-platoon system. But these things can wait. They are not vital. The incident of the woman with the cigarette shows that the police have their instructions to deal first and sternly with crimes of magnitude and menace.

"CHARITY GRAFTERS."

We incline to congratulate our Boston correspondent on his success in filling a long-felt want in technical nomenclature. He did it in the announcement that the Young Men's Christian Association of Salem, Mass., had been compelled to take drastic measures for the protection of Miss HELEN GOULD, on her visit to that ancient borough, from "charity grafters."

The expression, though lamentably slangy, is exquisitely apt, as lamentable slang frequently is. To be notoriously rich and notoriously benevolent is to offer one's self as a field of exploitation to all manner of cranks and conscious or unconscious humbugs. Doubtless there are plutocratic philanthropists who take pleasure in contending with these parasites. In fact, we know that there is at least one such. Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE extends a hospitable leg to whoso desires to make trial of its ductility, and gives him leave to experiment upon his power of pull, securely confident that the experimenter will not be able to get away with any of Mr. CARNEGIE'S money without that billionaire's privity and consent. But Mr. CARNEGIE would probably bear witness that, even with the assistance of an ample retinue of clerks, the philanthropist who chooses this form of amusement has little time for any other. And philanthropists of less tough fibre must find life not worth living in at the price of continual contests with bores who will not take no for an answer, but who are confident of extracting something from their victim at last, "because of their importunity." They hold themselves excused from the exercise of common courtesy, even of common humanity, because it is not, at least ostensibly, for themselves that they are begging, although a considerable proportion of them contrive to make their own livings out of the "rake-off" on their several charitable or evangelising projects. These are well named "charity grafters," and immunity from their ravages ought to be assured even to the humblest millionaire.

CATHOLIC CHURCH MUSIC.

The authorities of the Catholic Church throughout Europe, and perhaps particularly throughout the United States, were undoubtedly thrown into consternation by the promulgation of the instructions of Pope PIUS X. concerning church music. The reforms which he laid down were so very sweeping that it seemed that their adoption would do away with what was commonly accepted as church music altogether.

Archbishop FARLEY'S approval of the report of a commission appointed by him to consider the subject has been published. The report shows how radical a change from the present practice will be wrought by a sincere attempt to give effect to the Papal instructions. Every musician of taste will agree that the object of the instructions, which is to make church music more churchly, is a worthy object, from the point of view of art as well as of religion. But the means taken to assure this end will play havoc not only with the repertory but with the personnel of most organ lofts. The literal enforcement of the Pauline precept touching the silence of women in the churches threatens to reduce the singing to low mutterings until a race of boy choristers can be trained, while it is evident that a literal enforcement, by a priest not musically gifted, of the prohibition of music which does not "correspond to the words of the liturgical text without omissions, inversions, or vain repetitions" would deprive the Church of some of the noblest music with which genius has stimulated devotion.

For the time, the influence of the Papal order upon the music of the Church, at least in this country, may be expected to be depressing. But since the purpose of the order is admitted to be commendable, it is to be hoped that, with a proper and not too literal adaptation of means to ends, it may ultimately result in a raising of the standard of Catholic church music, both in composition and execution.

THE AGE LIMIT IN STEEL MILLS.

The announcement from Pittsburg that the Carnegie Steel Company has posted and is enforcing a rule requiring heads of certain departments to refuse employment to men over thirty-five years of age, and in others to men over forty, is interesting. It would appear to show a disposition on the part of the Steel Corporation management to draw the "dead line" a good deal closer than has hitherto been considered necessary.

If the circumstances attending the enforcement of this rule are correctly stated, it would seem to work a substantial hardship in the case of a large number of skilled men who might merit better treatment. They were attracted to the plants of the Steel Corporation by especially advantageous offers during the "boom" which culminated last year, leaving permanent positions to give the merger the benefit of their expert knowledge. The reaction rendered several of the plants idle, throwing these men out of employment. When on the announcement of resumption they presented themselves for re-employment the rule above referred to stood in the way, and much dissatisfaction has resulted. That it should not apply in the re-employment of competent men after a period of involuntary idleness would seem to be too obvious to need discussion. It is calculated to defeat what has been understood to be the policy of the Steel Corporation from the first, to encourage life-long and faithful service.

A PLEA FOR THE ARMENIANS.

Bishops SARADJIAN of Armenia and MELIKOFF of Persia and India are now in this country to present to President ROOSEVELT a letter from the Catholocos of the Armenian Church requesting him to use what influence he has as the Executive of one of the world Powers to end the Turkish massacres of Armenians and establish conditions which will insure them peace and security. These envoys have already had encouraging interviews with King EDWARD and President LOUBET, and after leaving here they will visit Germany, Austria, and Italy.

Their errand is one which should attract for them the sympathy of right-thinking men and women in all countries. It is as well known to them as to others that the President of the United States is without power to intervene effectively in the internal affairs of the Turkish Empire, but the voice of the civilized world should be raised in protest against the intolerable conditions which have so long been permitted in Armenia. The little remnant of the scattered nation has had no political autonomy since 1604, when Shah ABBAS, in his conflict with AHMED I., laid waste their country and deported to Persia, after the manner of conquerors in that and earlier times, all who could be rounded up of this brave and originally warlike but now peaceable and patient people. There are not more than 400,000 Armenians in all European Turkey. They are industrious, thrifty, and frugal, and the Sultan owes them adequate protection against the nomadic Kurds who continually harry them, plundering and burning their villages and putting them to the sword.

WHAT A SHIP CANAL DOES FOR A PORT.

A valued correspondent sends us figures compiled from a Parliamentary blue book recently issued, which show that while the total imports and exports of Manchester, England, in 1894, the year of the opening of the Manchester Ship Canal, were less than seven millions sterling, in 1903 this trade amounted to thirty millions sterling.

The enlargement of the Erie Canal to the proportions demanded by the commercial conditions of the present time will have an effect upon the trade of New York comparable to that of its ship canal upon the trade of Manchester. The State and City of New York may well regard as a public enemy any one in office or out of office whose mercenary loyalty to the railroad interests ranks him with the opposition to this necessary improvement of the waterway which made this State and city what they are, and who would place obstacles in the way of carrying out the emphatic mandate of the people that this work shall be performed.

THE SUN ON JUDGE PARKER.

How puzzling are the anfractuosities of the human mind when it is up for elective office!—New York Sun.

How discouraging is the infructuosity of ingeniosity inspired by partisan animosity. It is the man, not his "mind" only, that is named for elective office in this country.

MILLERS REVOLT.

It is not at all surprising that the independent millers of the Central States should, as reported, combine to secure a change in the trade policy of the United States. They are in some danger of losing important markets through the trammels that policy imposes on all foreign commerce, and they certainly have nothing to fear from foreign competition.

It is one of the prominent features in Mr. CHAMBERLAIN'S programme in the United Kingdom to tax American wheat while admitting wheat from the colonies free. And it is a further feature of that programme to tax all flour, and American flour higher than colonial, in order to build up the milling industry of England. He bases his prediction for success of this plan mainly on American experience in protection, without which there never would have been the ghost of a chance of popular approval for him. Of course, if he should persuade the English voters to try his scheme, the first sufferers would be the American farmers and the American flour millers. The same discrimination against American flour is popular in Germany and France, and taxing it is the foundation of the attempt to unite England and the European countries in opposition to the American "invasion." Clearly there is no reason why our millers should support protection.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—For a variously delightful "human nature" story, full to the brim of humor and wisdom, we are—and others will be—indebted to Dr. G. F. LYDSTON. It appears under the caption, certainly most unpromising as regards such treasures, of "Malingering Among Criminals," in a very serious article contributed by him to The Medical Journal. After enumerating a dozen or so of the innumerable motives that lead prisoners to pretend illnesses of which they are free—desire to escape work, to get better food, to excite sympathy, &c.—and describing the prison doctor's constant struggle, on the one hand, not to waste his services on men who do not need them, and, on the other, not to deny aid to men really ill, Dr. LYDSTON takes up the treatment of malingering and reveals the beautifully simple expedient that proved to be a brilliant success. "Malingering," he writes, "is a very difficult thing to cure. I finally succeeded, in my own prison service, in a way that may suggest itself as practical to other prison physicians. For months I had vainly tried indescribably nauseous doses and the dark cell. I finally hit upon the expedient of having the sick call sounded at dinner time. The success of the experiment is shown by the fact that, whereas 180 men appeared in the sick line the previous day, there were only twelve in line on the first day of the new arrangement. The latter number is about the average that presented themselves at the daily sick call during the remainder of my term of service." Not having been in prison yet ourselves, we do not know whether or not this synchronizing of the dinner and sick call involved the absolute loss of the day's chief meal for all who desired to consult the doctor. If it did, at first thought the device seems to have been a rather cruel one, but, thinking again, it becomes manifest that, as dinner is usually the least need as well as the least desire of people even mildly ill, the chances that many prisoners either starved or went without medical attention when subjected to this ingenious method of discrimination are very small. Anyhow, the scheme seems to have worked marvelously well, and it is a pity that some modification of it cannot be devised for use outside of prison life. Possibly the size of physicians' fees is such a modification; certainly they have much the same effect, so far as the "taking of advice" is concerned, but they leave unaffected a vast amount of amateur practice, and do not prevent the dodging of innumerable jobs, big and little, on the ever-convenient plea of illness.

—We quite agree with "A Kentucky Woman," whose letter we printed yesterday, in holding that between public and private functions there is a difference as to the social implications involved. As, in the paragraph to which she objected, we were at elaborate pains to declare our own appreciation of that difference, we are deeply grieved that she should have questioned our ability to see something which, as she put it, might or might not be visible to a Northerner who was also "a bachelor editor who dwells in hotels and calls it home where he keeps his bootjack." To the charge of living in hotels a considerable number of Northern editors would plead guilty, with a plea for mercy on the mitigating ground that it is the best—the poor best—their circumstances permit, but we vehemently deny that they call the hotels home because they keep their bootjack there. It is useless to argue the question whether or not they would so misuse the sacred appellation if they had of bootjacks anything more than memories, vague and remote. As those of us who ever had bootjacks abandoged them many years ago, the suggestion of such a sequence of ideas in our minds indicates a perverse cruelty of heart that we never expected to see displayed by a Kentucky woman, or, for that matter, by any woman. This great wrong, however, we will—now—pass over in silence, and only ask her how many Northerners she knows, in newspaper offices or out of them, who are madly bent on asking negroes home to dinner or luncheon. There are some who would do it, we suppose, in the case of particular negroes, and for particular reasons, but it is not a common habit, or even a habit at all. The charge of inconsistency which we brought against the Lexington officials who accepted negro hospitality did not involve the claim that public and private hospitality are alike; it only questioned the complete dissimilarity of the two, and only wondered why he who can often be a guest with safety cannot once be a host without shattering the pillars of society. As a matter of fact, the white and black races keep much further apart in the North than in the South, and it is absurd to assume that any of us are aching to increase their intimacy in either section.

THE TIBETAN TREATY.

Translation of Chinese Draft of the Document Won by Col. Younghusband.

The Chinese draft of the Tibetan treaty between Great Britain and Tibet was first published in the Peking papers of Sept. 15. It is in poor Chinese, and obscure in some places, so that the following careful translation may be interesting to compare with the authoritative English text when the British Government sees fit to make it public:

PREAMBLE.

The Tibetans having paid no heed to China's counsels, and having failed to conform to the conditions of the treaty signed at Calcutta between China and Great Britain in the sixteenth year of Yung-hsu (1890) and the treaty of the nineteenth year, (1893,) owing to their containing terms of ambiguous and objectionable character, Great Britain, finding it necessary to take action on her own account, appointed Col. Younghusband, a high boundary official, as plenipotentiary to arrange a satisfactory basis with the Imperial Resident Yu for all matters that required settlement. Great Britain and the Tibetans having now agreed upon ten clauses in connection with the objectionable and doubtful points of the treaty of the sixteenth year, and the Chinese Imperial Resident Yu having duly examined the same treaty, it may accordingly be signed and sealed. After the conclusion of this treaty between China and Great Britain the inhabitants of Tibet shall not violate the terms. This is because the Tibetans failed entirely to conform to the terms of the treaties made in the sixteenth and nineteenth years between China and Great Britain, owing to their containing much that was unsatisfactory and objectionable, so that Great Britain specially appointed Col. Younghusband as plenipotentiary in frontier affairs to proceed to the frontier and negotiate. Unexpectedly hostilities were again committed, thus causing a rupture of amicable relations, but negotiations have now been opened and ten clauses definitely agreed upon in order that upon completion of the treaty and the sealing of the same by the Dalai Lama, as head of the Yellow Priesthood, and Col. Younghusband, the Boundary Commissioner, peace may hereafter be secured.

ARTICLE I.

The Tibetans hereby agree, in accordance with the first clause of the treaty of the sixteenth year, to re-erect boundary stones at the Sikkim frontier.

ARTICLE II.

The Tibetans hereby agree to establish marts at Gyangtse and Kotako (presumably Gartok) in addition to Yatung for the purpose of mutual trading between the British and Tibetan merchants at their free convenience. Great Britain will arrange with Tibet for the alteration of all objectionable features in the treaty of the nineteenth year of Kuang-hsu, and as soon as this agreement shall have been completed arrangements shall be made at Yatung, Gyangtse, and Gartok accordingly. The Tibetans having agreed to establish markets at Yatung, Gyangtse, and Gartok, merchandise purchased by Tibetans from India may be transported along existing routes, and arrangements may be made for opening marts in future at other prosperous commercial places.

ARTICLE III.

With regard to any objectionable features of the treaty of the nineteenth year requiring alteration a separate arrangement may be made, and Tibet will appoint a Tibetan official having plenipotentiary authority to confer with the British officials for their alteration.

ARTICLE IV.

No further customs duties may be levied upon merchandise after the tariff shall have been agreed upon by Great Britain and the Tibetans.

ARTICLE V.

On the route between the Indian frontier and Yatung, Gyangtse, and Gartok no customs stations may be established. Tibet shall repair any dangerous passes on the road in order to facilitate merchants traveling thereon and the prevention of difficulties. Tibet shall appoint native officials at these three places, and the officials appointed by Great Britain at these places shall have their correspondence with the Imperial Resident and other Chinese officials forwarded through the above-mentioned native officials. Similar officials shall be appointed at other flourishing places which may be opened to trade, and the same course adopted.

ARTICLE VI.

Tibet, having disobeyed the treaties and insulted the Commissioner by the wrongful commission of hostile acts, shall pay Great Britain an indemnity of $5,000,000, equivalent to 7,500,000 rupees, (£500,000,) payable in three yearly installments, the first payment to be on Jan. 1, 1906. When the time arrives Great Britain will first notify the Tibetans as to the place at which payment shall be made, or whether receipt may be taken thereof at the Tibetan temple at Darjiling.

ARTICLE VII.

For performance of the conditions comprised in Articles II., III., and IV. for opening trading stations, and in the sixth clause relative to the indemnity as security for the punctual discharge of its obligations on the part of Tibet, British troops will continue to occupy the Chumbi Valley for three years until the trading places are satisfactorily established and the indemnity liquidated in full. In the event of the indemnity's not being paid, England will continue in occupation of Chumbi.

ARTICLE VIII.

All forts between the Indian frontier and Gyangtse on routes traversed by merchants from the interior of Tibet shall be demolished.

ARTICLE IX.

Without the consent of Great Britain, no Tibetan territory shall be sold, leased, or mortgaged to any foreign power whatsoever; no foreign power whatsoever shall be permitted to concern itself with the administration of the Government of Tibet or any other affairs therewith connected; no foreign power shall be permitted to send either official or non-official persons to Tibet, no matter in what pursuit they may be engaged, to assist in the conduct of Tibetan affairs; no foreign power shall be permitted to construct roads or railways or erect telegraphs or open mines anywhere in Tibet. In the event of Great Britain's consenting to another power constructing roads or railways, opening mines, or erecting telegraphs, Great Britain will make a full examination on her own account for carrying out the arrangements proposed. No real property or land containing minerals or precious metals in Tibet shall be mortgaged, exchanged, leased, or sold to any foreign power.

ARTICLE X.

The Boundary Commissioner Jung and the Dalai Lama will sign and seal this treaty on the 22d day of the 7th moon of the Tibetan calendar, being the 1st day of September, 1904, of the English calendar. Of the two versions, English and Tibetan, the English text shall be regarded as authoritative.

MONEY FOR NEW PARKS.

An Appeal to the Board of Estimate—New Breathing Places Needed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As this is the annual period for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to provide financial needs for the coming year, permit me through the courtesy of THE NEW YORK TIMES to urge upon that department of the municipality a generous and liberal appropriation for additional small parks and playgrounds.

It has been the ambition of our Mayor to furnish sittings in our public schools for all who desire to attend. It is equally essential to provide a sufficient number of reservations in which every scholar in Greater New York can safely play.

This is imperatively necessary in the crowded, congested sections of the city, where accidents too frequently occur to little ones, while indulging in games natural to their age and requisite to their health.

For lack of other accommodations, myriads of juveniles daily crowd the approaches of the new Williamsburg Bridge in a vain attempt to make use of the same as a playground.

While the Board of Education is beginning to take active steps as to this important matter, its work in this direction is impeded by lack of funds. And the little it can do, under the most favorable circumstances, is but a drop in the bucket. Citizens and householders want, and should have, more recreation piers and small parks in every part of the city, and this pressing need should be supplied at once.

SIDWELL S. RANDALL.

1,323 Franklin Avenue, New York, Sept. 25, 1904.

Site for New West Side Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the next meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the project to establish a park between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth Streets and Ninth and Tenth Avenues will be discussed, when, it is expected, much opposition will develop on the part of the Women's Health Protective Association and similar organizations. The site between Thirty-ninth and Forty-first Streets and Eleventh Avenue and the river will be advanced as being much more suitable. This property can be bought for at least one-half what the Twenty-seventh Street site can be purchased for, because of the ramshackle buildings now there. It will mean the cleaning of a very filthy section of the city, where slaughtering and bone and fat boiling plants operate to the detriment of the health of those living within the ozone of their influence. It will also afford a considerable water front, which is a twofold advantage. I hope that inasmuch as your paper has discussed this matter considerably, you can give this item some space in to-morrow's issue.

ROBERT E. McDONNELL.

New York, Sept. 24, 1904.

JUDGE PARKER'S LETTER.

Explicit on All the Issues.

From The Philadelphia Record, (Dem.)

It is a straight from the shoulder document, and will go straight to the point aimed at—the common apprehension of the common people. It is explicit on all the issues, dodging none. Brief, cogent, strong, courageous, the letter will put heart and life into the contest.

The Safer, Saner Way.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger, (Ind.)

No clearer knowledge of patriotic duty can be had by any voter than by comparing the letters of the respective Presidential candidates. They are the guideposts pointing the way each party will go if successful at the polls. Forming our deliberate judgment upon these letters, we believe that Judge Parker's guidepost points the safer, saner way to good government.

Sound Exposition of Democratic Principles.

From The Baltimore Sun, (Dem.)

The letter of acceptance is a sound exposition of Democratic principles. Constitutionalism has been the keynote of Judge Parker's addresses and writings since his nomination last July.

The Service Pension Order.

From The Utica Press, (Ind.)

In some paragraphs Judge Parker is very commonplace and his letter is almost perfunctory, while in others it is virile, and once or twice is positively courageous. The best example of this is where he accepts President Roosevelt's challenge about the service pension order, accepts the issue, and bravely says: "If elected I will revoke that order." Issue on this question is squarely joined.

Makes the Tariff an Issue.

From The Poughkeepsie News-Press, (Dem.)

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance is the utterance of a statesman who refuses to be spectacular, but whose firmness of statement and commanding force of motive meet the highest expectation of the thoughtful, patriotic people of the republic. The letter makes the tariff an issue.

Able, Candid, Vigorous.

From The Boston Herald, (Ind.)

It is an able, candid, vigorous, comprehensive, definite consideration of the peremptory issues of the present canvass. It gives assurance that its author has the insight and the capacity of statesmanship. From first to last it is sane and pithy, and it should be carefully pondered. But we must notice the brave, sententious way in which he meets the President's heroic fustian. The passage on pensions is an example.

The Voice of a Statesman.

From The Boston Post, (Dem.)

It is the voice of a statesman clearly declaring the perils of the present situation and tendencies, and of a patriot earnest for reform. "Constitutionalism vs. Imperialism" is the issue which Judge Parker presents as vital, of "overshadowing importance." Tariff reform, economical administration, and honesty in the public service are the other pre-eminent issues named by Judge Parker. These he presents with clearness and force.

Frank with the People.

From The Boston Globe, (Dem.)

The Democratic Party certainly presents to the voters a candidate who is admirably equipped in every way for the office of President. And it must be conceded that he is a candidate who has no hesitation in giving the country the most explicit information concerning his views on all public questions. He does not hesitate to tell the citizens of the country exactly how he views the grave problems that now confront the American people. There is no "stand pat" policy in it.

THE WEAKLINGS.

At the world's centres, dross and dregs collect;
There the offscourings of the intellect,
The scum of education, frothr of schools,
The lees of culture—and the wit of fools.
There the dumb thing whose heaven's the sleepy bowl,
Possessed of body, but bereft of soul;
One in desire, man's bidden task to shirk,
To have the harvest, but escape the work.

The weaklings, tatters of past masquerade,
Cast by progenitors in lifelong shade;
Unequal to the strain, whate'er it be,
Foredoomed to cumber earth, by Fate's decree.
And the dense lubbards, inert, lumpish swine,
Content to slumber though the sun may shine,
Willing that feebler hands shall slave to earn,
The food to fatten, and the wood to burn.

DEMANDS CITIZENSHIP FOR ALL UNDER FLAG

There Can Be No American Subjects, Says James Hagerman.

FREE TRADE FOR PHILIPPINES

Tariff for Territories Declared Unconstitutional—Bar Association Discusses Alaskan Boundary Case.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—The largest and most representative gathering in the history of the American Bar Association marked the opening session of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the association to-day in Festival Hall, on the World's Fair grounds. Besides the 600 members of the association who were in attendance, there were present many foreign delegates to the Universal Congress of Lawyers and Jurists, including Sir William Kennedy, Chief Justice of the High Court of England.

President James Hagerman of St. Louis delivered his annual address, and said, in part:

"Since the last meeting of this association Congress passed one very important act, of far-reaching consequence, to regulate shipping in trade between ports of the United States and ports or places in the Philippine Archipelago and between ports or places in the Philippines.

"In my judgment, the need of the times is that the mandate should go forth to the American people, as the judgment of their bench and bar, that Territories can only be permanently held by the United States upon the condition that the residents and inhabitants shall be citizens of the United States, and that there shall be no tariff laws between such Territories and the States of the Union, but all shall be within the zone of free trade which has heretofore included our States and Territories.

"I am not one of those who think that it is absolutely essential that all Territories of the United States should be admitted to Statehood, for I believe that under our system Territories can be governed as such in harmony with our republican-democratic constitutional principles. The point which I emphasize is, and it seems to me that the ultimate judgment of the lawyers of the country will enforce it, that the inhabitants of our Territories must be entitled to United States citizenship, and they must have free and unvexed trade relations with us. Otherwise there will be a departure from constitutional methods and principles which will be revolutionary in their nature, and lead us to an imperialism which is inconsistent with republican-democratic institutions."

"The Alaskan Boundary Case" was the subject of a paper by J. M. Dickinson of Chicago. In the course of his remarks he said:

"It was not strictly an arbitration, but rather what might be termed an arbitral tribunal, for an arbitration is usually composed of an odd number and with one or more disinterested members. Following the plan proposed in the Olney-Pauncefote treaty of 1897, which was not ratified by the Senate, it was agreed to submit the controversy to the judgment of a tribunal composed of an equal number of appointees by each Government, with the requirement that at least four should concur. Both Governments hoped and expected that there would be a determination of the whole matter. It is manifest that, cherishing this hope, they reposed great confidence in the impartiality and courage of the appointees, for there could be no determination possible without at least one member finding adversely to his national sympathies.

"That such hope and confidence were cherished is made manifest by the recital of the treaty that it would be unfortunate if a majority of the tribunal should fail to agree upon any of the points submitted for their decision. The way in which the tribunal was constituted and the fact that it settled the controversy will for all time make it memorable in the history of peace measures. No one who values the peace of nations could fail to rejoice that such a grave controversy, which threatened to become more and more acute, was finally and amicably settled."

ENCOURAGES THE FILIPINOS.

Agitation in This Country Strengthens Movement for Independence.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt is in receipt of a letter from Gen. Luke E. Wright, Governor of the Philippines, in which the Governor discusses frankly some of the conditions which he encounters in directing the Government of the islands. Under date of Aug. 15, Gen. Wright wrote in part:

"The continued discussion as to the capacity of the Filipino for self-government and his immediate or ultimate independence is having its effect here, and makes our task more difficult than it otherwise would be. The less a man is equipped with intelligence and those qualities which make for good citizenship the more easily can he be persuaded that he is the possessor of all these qualities.

"In this general connection I may say to you as a matter of information that the agitation in the United States for Filipino independence, and the spoken and written utterances of prominent men there who are urging it, are all brought here and published in the native newspapers, and are being made the text for editorials insisting that the Filipino people are now ready to become an independent nation. The effect of all this is distinctly injurious. Its tendency is to restore the influence of the old insurrection leaders and to make them active in preaching the old propaganda. This in turn has the effect of demoralizing and weakening the more conservative and thoughtful Filipinos, who fear if they speak out as they really think they would be considered the enemies of their people and lose their prestige with them."

GRAY DECIDES FOR MINERS.

Judge Upholds Wright's Opinion on Check Weighman Question.

SCRANTON, Penn., Sept. 26.—Judge Gray, to whom was referred the controversy of the anthracite coal miners on the check weighman question, and which had previously been adjudicated by Carroll D. Wright in favor of the miners, has also decided the issue in the same way.

His decision was received by both W. L. Connell and T. D. Nicholls, President and Secretary, respectively, of the Board of Conciliation. The former represented the operators and the latter the miners.

In his conclusions Judge Gray says:

"That when proper requests provided in said award have been made by a majority of the miners at any colliery it is the duty of the management of said colliery, under the award, to co-operate with the miners of said colliery in the establishment of check weighmen and check docking bosses and pay the wages of the same out of the proportionate reductions from the earnings of the contract miners of said colliery who are employed or continued in employment after due notice of the employment of check weighmen and check-docking bosses under the propositions of said award."

John E. Redmond at White House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at luncheon to-day John E. Redmond, the Irish member of the British Parliament; Mrs. Redmond, and Prof. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, President of the University of California.

Ex-Senator Chandler Hurt.

WARNER, N. H., Sept. 26.—Ex-Senator William E. Chandler is suffering from a fracture of both bones of his left forearm, through having been struck by the crank of his automobile. Mr. Chandler was about to take a trip yesterday from his Summer home at Waterloo when the accident happened.

By far the most natural, touching, and dramatic stroke last night at the Belasco Theatre was Mr. Warfield's curtain speech. Shaken with sincere emotion, and obviously trembling between the hope of the artist and the fear of the man of modesty, he told the audience that it was his long-cherished dream to become identified with new and different characters. The allusion was of course to his Yiddish sketches at Weber & Fields's and in "The Auctioneer." "If I am successful," he said, "I shall be very happy." People who care deeply for the art of the theatre may have remained unmoved by the lines of the play; but there was that in Mr. Warfield's mien and voice that reached the source of tears. His attempt is the same Mr. Crane made a week ago in "Business Is Business." It is hard and dangerous, for the very public that cries out against the star system is the first to tell an actor aiming at artistic versatility to keep his place. But Mr. Crane's artistic success is undoubted, and so is Mr. Warfield's.

It was only in a stray gleam of common sense, or now and then in an abrupt, shrewd turn of speech that one was reminded of the auctioneer or of Yiddish Yankies, and these were traits common to both characters. Mr. Warfield's music master is a quite detached and independent creation, a product of its own dreamy environment, living in its own life of sentimental fidelity, forgiveness, and abnegation. It is a creation of masterly histrionic technique and of a mellowness of temperament no less masterly. It cannot be called the widest variation from what he has already done. There is no such distance as, for example, Mr. Crane has attempted. But the success is all the more complete. If Mr. Warfield has his way, and can find the requisite playwrights, the American stage, all too rich in popular stars and all too poor in real actors, has made an acquisition of the highest promise.

Last night it was the play that was lacking. Mr. Charles Klein is in a sense an expert workman, familiar with the business of the playwright. But there is such a thing as being too familiar with that business. The most artistic feature of the writing was its prevailing tone of quietude. But quietude without the breath of life is tome, and Mr. Klein has put his faith in the most hackneyed and—yes!—falsest wares of the stage.

His music master, having been deserted by his wife for a villainous paramour, abandons a successful career and spends sixteen years in poverty-stricken search for her and their child. When his search succeeds the wife is dead, and his daughter is about to be happily married. In the moment in which the music master confronts the rather crude villain who has robbed him of his happiness he finds—or thinks he finds—that to make an exposure will ruin his daughter's happiness. Upon a lifetime of devotion to—to what?—he adds a moment of theatric abnegation. In the last act his heart-break is saved by the loyal devotion of his daughter, who, having been freed by her marriage from the tyranny of her false, illegal stepfather, comes to his garret and claims him. It is Evangeline and Enoch Arden rolled into a mush of theatric breakfast food.

This is not the worst, and one is scarcely able to cheer up for what is to come. Such conventional material, when vigorously handled, has its popular value. It is what the French call poncif—stencilled, and popularly false. But even poncif needs to have its own vigor of appeal. For all his craft Mr. Klein's climaxes somehow fail to strike home. Most disastrous of all, in what is of course essentially a character play, the central figure of the "Music Master" lacks salient and decisive outline. Mr. Klein's "Auctioneer" gave one the impression of many acutely observed personality, though even here he was not guiltless of conventionality. His "Music Master" is, except for a few not very telling strokes, a creation of pure sentimentality. If Mr. Warfield fails, it will be because of the softness of the material he has to work with.

This defect of the play is equally evident in the minor characters. There is an attempt at creating a sort of Latin Quarter atmosphere in Houston Street; but the three musicians are in reality faint replicas of the "Vie de Bohème" and "Trilby." The Fifth Avenue people have not even the advantage of a good model. They are quite preposterously unreal. Much has been done for the play by Mr. David Belasco, whose mise-en-scène and management of the acting are as masterly as ever. The two scenes in Houston Street especially are marvels of atmospheric realism, replete with significant and atmospheric detail admirably compacted into startling pictures. But the acting is only able and in the picture, without being distinguished—what chance is there for distinction?

Mr. Belasco's speech was as studied and consciously histrionic as Mr. Warfield's was otherwise, but was not without distinct force, to the delight of a partisan audience. It was another blow at the syndicate, and he made bones of calling his enemies very hard names. Mr. Daniel Frohman was in a lower box, and if he is one of the villains he smiled, and smiled, and refused to budge. Perhaps he was a Daniel come to judgment. Or perhaps he was only Mercutio, and said a plague o' both your houses, in which case he was not without weary sympathizers.

A NEW PLAY BY BERNARD SHAW.

Arnold Daly Produces a Travesty on "Candida" at the Berkeley Lyceum.

Arnold Daly last night resumed his tenancy at the Vaudeville Theatre, now again called the Berkeley Lyceum, with a new play by Bernard Shaw, a travesty on the dramatist's own play, "Candida," which he insists on calling a comedilettina. It is a criticism, in the form of burlesque, of the convention, always recognized on the stage and frequently in life, that a man is bound to lie to save the credit of a woman. It is presented as an afterpiece to "The Man of Destiny," which Mr. Daly gave for a short time last year after "Candida," but was obliged to drop because the strain of two such pieces proved too great.

Throughout "How He Lied to Her Husband" Mr. Shaw pokes fun not only at "Candida" itself, but at the thousands of people who made a fad of it. The characters in the burlesque discuss at some length "Candida" as a play, and decide that it is for the modern intellectual drama who has been able to make it pay. His production of "Candida" was the most talked-of event of last season, and placed him at once in the forefront of those to whom we may look for more rational entertainment. He has laid the foundation for a vogue of a kind of play that seems not yet possible in the large and more expensive theatres of Broadway. The little playhouse was filled last night with an enthusiastic audience.

A NEW IDOL, MAYBE.

Fourteenth Street Audience Approves of Sydney Ayres and "A Texas Ranger."

It is by no means unlikely that Fourteenth Street will have discovered by to-day that it has a new idol "in its midst." Sydney Ayres, heralded by the press agent as a real sure-enough rough rider, is a young man of pleasing personality whose acting last night, though marred somewhat by self-consciousness and a very evident desire to be thought "sweet and lovable," is not without some merit. That it won the approval of the Fourteenth Street Theatre's clientèle was evident in abundant cheering and numerous curtain calls.

The play, "A Texas Ranger," which served to introduce the new star, recalls "The Virginian," which was so successful up town last season. But the story of Jack Dallam's love affair—the usual thing in plays of its kind—and involving hate, jealousy, malice, friendship, in an atmosphere of pistol smoke and home-made pies, has been handled with some skill. The climaxes are duly effective, and there is plenty of the obvious comedy so necessary to popular success.

Jack is in love with Texas West, a typical girl of the plains, but an English lord and his handsome niece arrive on the scene, and the road of true love becomes rocky. An unscrupulous half-breed accuses Jack of cattle stealing, but he, of course, eventually proves his innocence and wins the girl of his heart.

The company is generally adequate, and a bit of naturalistic acting that might be studied with advantage by some Broadway favorites is contributed by Edward Emory, who plays Lord Angus Trevor, a wealthy ranch owner.

MAY IRWIN APPEARS AGAIN.

Successful Performance of "Mrs. Black Is Back" in Waterbury, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 26.—Miss May Irwin, after a two years' rest, made her reappearance on the stage to-night at Poli's Theatre. Her play is a three-act comedy by George V. Hobart, called "Mrs. Black Is Back." She takes the part of a widow who marries a professor of geology.

A large crowd turned out to the first performance. During the play Miss Irwin sang several songs. Some of them were "Dat Ain't Nothin' But Talk," "I'm Worried to Death About That," and "In the Shadow of the Pyramids." In the supporting company are Al S. Lipman, Edgar Atchison, Arthur Saunders, Johnny Johnson, Vira Rial, Nick Long, Charles Church, Roland Carter, William Sutton, and John G. Sparks.

AMUSEMENTS LAST NIGHT.

William Collier invaded Harlem with "The Dictator" last night. The Harlem Opera House was crowded, and the star and his supporters were received with enthusiasm. The cast remains the same as it was at the Criterion two or three weeks ago.

⁂

"New York Day by Day" was presented at the Third Avenue Theatre.

⁂

"The Ninety and Nine," a melodrama full of murder, is the week's attraction at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre.

⁂

Henri Gressitt's production of "Captain Barrington" is at the Metropolis Theatre. William Bramwell is the star; he takes three separate and distinct rôles.

⁂

"Wedded and Parted" is at the New Star.

⁂

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home" was given at the West End Theatre last night. The musical comedy hasn't been in New York for a long time, and its reputation from three or four seasons ago brought a large crowd to see its revival. "King Dodo" will be at the West End next Monday.

⁂

Mabel McKinley is the chief attraction at Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall. Odette Tyler and her company come second.

⁂

McIntyre and Heath, the veteran minstrels, are at the Circle. They are to forsake vaudeville before long and head a company as co-stars. Others on the Circle's bill are the Latonas, Jack Norworth, Clarice Vance, and Spessardy's Bears.

⁂

"The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" has begun a second week at the Grand Opera House.

⁂

Dan McAvoy is at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre of Varieties. Hill and Sylvani are doing their marvelous bicycle stunt. Willy Zimmermann is also on the bill.

⁂

May Robson appeared last night at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre in "Amelia Ann," a sketch written especially for her. There was a long vaudeville bill, including Vinella's Horses, the Gillette Sisters, Berry and Berry, Ethel Robinson, Kelly and Galot, and Kendall and Thompson.

⁂

At the Eden Musée there are some new figures in the World in Wax. Noticeable among the latest additions is the group showing Capt. Jack Bonavita struggling with the lions at Bostock's, Coney Island. Concerts are given regularly.

⁂

"Captain Lettarblair" was given at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre last night. Edwin Arden is in the title rôle. On the vaudeville bill are James Richmond Glenroy, Ethel Robinson, George Austen, and the De Muths.

⁂

"Soldiers of Fortune" is being presented by the stock company at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre. Beatrice Morgan and Henry Kolker have the two principal rôles.

⁂

At the Orpheum in Brooklyn Charles Hawtrey and his company appeared in "Time Is Money" last night. Mr. Hawtrey will resume his tour in "The Message from Mars" after this week. Clayton White and Marie Stuart are second in importance at the Orpheum. Louise Dresser is on the bill.

⁂

Abbott Parker, the man with the crucifixion on his back, is Huber's Museum's big attraction now. The freaks are on hand in great number.

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

"The Sorceress," in which Mrs. Patrick Campbell will appear at the New Amsterdam Theatre Oct. 10, has been selected by Weber & Ziegfeld as the play most susceptible to clever burlesquing. The travesty on "The Sorceress" will be presented at the Weber Music Hall soon after Mrs. Campbell appears.

⁂

Miss Annie Russell began rehearsals yesterday of her new play, "Brother Jacques." The first presentation will be at the Euclid Avenue Opera House, Cleveland, Ohio. The company includes Joseph Wheelock, Jr., George Wilson, Oswald Yorke, Grant Stewart, Mrs. Charles Walcot, Elizabeth Johnson, and Florida Pier.

⁂

The "Fantana" company, in charge of Sam Shubert, will leave for Chicago on a special train this morning from the Grand Central Station.

⁂

Herbert Graham has charge of the principals and Ernest D'Auban the corps de ballet.

⁂

Kelcey and Shannon will leave the Lyric Theatre with "Taps" Saturday night, Oct. 8. Otis Skinner's play, "The Harvester," comes in Monday, Oct. 10.

⁂

Jan. Munkacsy, Hungarian violin player, who was a fellow-pupil of Kubelik and Kocian, in Prague will give a concert on Wednesday evening, Sept. 28, at 8:30, in Knabe Hall. He will be assisted by Miss Edna Stern, mezzo-soprano, and Ewen Hohne, an English pianist. Munkacsy, who is only seventeen years old, is a nephew of the celebrated painter, Michael Munkacsy.

Theatre Manager Punches Speculator.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 26.—Shortly before the curtain was rung up at the Colonial Theatre here to-night Edward C. Smith, the manager, got into an altercation with Robert Franz, a ticket speculator, in which Franz received a black eye. It was Bridgeport's first experience with theatrical ticket speculators. Franz was summarily dealt with and unable to realize on a single ticket of the many he had purchased for the opening of the road tour of "Paris by Night."

"Jack" Gallatin an Actor.

"Jack" Gallatin signed a contract yesterday with MacDonald & Sullivan to play the part of the society man in the "Baroness Fiddlesticks," which is to open in Rochester next month. The play, which is a satire on society, is by Delong and Bruguere. The cast will include, besides Mr. Gallatin, Nellie Bergen, (Mrs. De Wolf Hopper,) Toby Claude, Annie Fitzhugh, and others.

SCOOPED UP THE BASS DRUM.

Also Drummer and Others, So Angry Parading Italians "Rushed" Car.

The natives of the town of Mezzuso, near Palermo, celebrated the feast day of their patron saint, St. Joseph, all day yesterday, and in the evening all paraded through the streets of the Italian settlement down town. They carried a gorgeous shrine dedicated to the saint. The societies and the little girls in white came up Mott Street and through Bleecker Street to Second Avenue.

At Houston Street, however, when most of the procession had proceeded into Chrystie Street, a Second Avenue car, southbound, ran into the last one of the bands and scooped up three of the "artists," including the big bass drummer, on the fender.

He, especially, protested, while the paraders gathered about the motorman, Fenton Scherrer, and attempted to pull him off the car. He clubbed the controller handle and attempted to defend himself. The conductor, George McCloud, came to his assistance and succeeded in holding the crowd at bay until reserves from the Fifth and Eldridge Street Stations, under Capts. McDermott and Flood, clubbed their way into the crowd and out again with the motorman and conductor. The crowd was soon dispersed.

The police made one arrest, and it wasn't the motorman, as the bass drummer demanded.

CATS OF EUROPE, WELCOME!

Treasury Department Has Recognized Your Official Stud Book.

The American Cat Association of Chicago has been recognized by the United States Government, and its stud book now makes it possible for a foreign-born cat, well pedigreed, to enter this country free of duty.

The tariff law provides free entry for animals of pedigree imported for breeding purposes, but to establish the pedigree it must be entered in the records of some recognized fanciers' association. There are few persons who devote their time to the scientific classification of the cat, so that cats, as a rule, have had to pay duty.

Now, however, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Armstrong has discovered that the American Cat Association of Chicago has a stud book, and he has notified all Collectors of Customs of the fact.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Just now society is occupied with flittings, arrivals, and departures. Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, who returned from abroad on Saturday, have gone to their place on Long Island, and Capt. and Mrs. Philip Lydig have taken possession of Mrs. Ladenburg's house at Westbury. Mrs. Ladenburg has not yet gone abroad, but will sail during the early Winter.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt are due from Europe to-day. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt will go to Idle Hour, their country seat, on Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt will remain at Hyde Park on Hudson until December. Their niece, Mrs. Thomas Howard, has left Newport, and is now at Hyde Park on Hudson.

⁂

Lady Beresford, who is by courtesy Lillian, Duchess of Marlborough, sailed on Saturday, after a stay of a fortnight in this country.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, who have been in Scotland this Summer, are due to return to-day. They will, however, pay some visits and not open their town house until late in November.

⁂

Among other passengers returning on the Baltic are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, William Rhinelander Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, the Earl of Yarmouth, and Marshall Field.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Chanler are on the Philadelphia, and Mrs. J. A. Bostwick, Mrs. Marcus Daly, and Miss Zogbaum have sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm II

⁂

Miss Evelyn Burden is to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Helen Phipps and Bradley Martin, Jr., which will take place at Beaufort Castle in November. Miss Burden is visiting the Phippses at present.

THE NEWS OF NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Susan Phillips Odell, widow of Dr. George M. Odell, and who died at the Wilson cottage on Sunday, was a member of the Duer family. She was a daughter of the late Morris Robinson of New York and a cousin of Mrs. Henry S. Hoyt. Mrs. Odell was one of the oldest communicants of Trinity Church of this city. Her funeral will take place from that church on Wednesday.

Mrs. William Grosvenor gave a luncheon to-day.

Mrs. Clarence Pell, Miss Susan Travers, and Mrs. Barger Wallach returned to-day from New York.

Mrs. Ogden Goelet went to New York to-day for a brief visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer have closed their villa and gone to Lancaster, Mass.

Mrs. G. Nichols and Mrs. Ellwood Mildeberger of New York are guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Griswold Wents at the Engs cottage. Mr. Mildeberger has recently returned from his third trip around the world.

Mrs. Francis C. Lawrence, Jr., who has been with her father, Edward S. Willing, the past Summer has gone to her country residence on Long Island.

Col. Samuel R. Honey and Miss Honey, who have recently returned from a trip to Europe, have arrived here.

MR. WAGNER AT WHITE HOUSE.

Author of "The Simple Life" a Guest of President Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Pastor Charles Wagner, the French evangelist and author of "The Simple Life," came to Washington from Philadelphia this afternoon, and was an overnight guest at the White House.

Mr. Wagner, whose visit is of an entirely informal character, was driven directly to the White House in the President's carriage. To-morrow he will be shown about the city and will have an opportunity to see the various points of interest.

TALK OF THE DAY.

"Picked up any trolley roads to-day?" cheerily asked a friend as the stoop-shouldered, nervous S. Harrison Wagner, partner of ex-Governor and ex-Consul General Thomas M. Waller, passed through the corridor of the Imperial.

"Not certainly, but I think I've a good option on two or three," was the laughing reply as Mr. Wagner halted an instant. "Disposed of a couple of them last week, though, and if the New York and New Haven appetite continues good think I can see my way to get enough next week to pay for November's office rent."

It was rather unusual for Mr. Wagner to say as much as this, even, for this active agent of the New Haven system in the creation of the trolley monopoly in Connecticut is a close-mouthed man, as he must needs be. As the creator of the Winchester Avenue Street Railway in New Haven he had an entering wedge to the trolley business, and was so clever in making his property a dangerous rival that the old Fair Haven and Westville Company had to take over his road at a handsome profit—for Mr. Wagner. Then the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway Company gobbled both propositions, making them the basis for the Consolidated Railway, which is a merger of a dozen or twenty trolley lines that the steam company has acquired, and which bids fair to take in all the trolley lines in Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts that are at all "parallels" to the great New England Railroad monopoly. Mr. Wagner has been active in many of these deals, and last week turned over to the new corporation trolley lines beginning from Middletown and Danbury to suburban points, in both of which he had a handsome proprietary interest. Neither road is a very great proposition in itself, about a dozen miles of trackage in each, but they are valuable as feeders to the greater parts of the system. And there was a twinkle about Mr. Wagner's eyes that told that he had not done the business wholly as a compliment to the New Haven system, though he is a great admirer of President Mellen of that corporation.

⁂

Her aunt was stopping at one of the Broadway hotels which is still conducted on both the European and American plans.

"She ain't in," said the maid who had taken her card to the room of the relative.

"Is there no way in which you can find out when she will be back?" persisted the visitor. "I really must see her to-day."

From the parlor to one of those mysterious recesses of information disappeared the maid, to return with the information:

"She didn't leave word as to when she would be back; but if you come around about luncheon time, miss, you'll be sure to find her, for she's on the American plan, and such as is on the American plan never fails to return here in time for meals."

⁂

Of the past generation of bonifaces was "Tim" Coe, friend of William H. Vanderbilt and his father, the grizzly old Commodore, and of all the road brigade of a quarter of a century ago who loved the trotting horse. Coe was noted as a raconteur as well as a horseman and hotel man, for ability to personally entertain guests was a part of the duties of the hotel proprietor of his day. He has a nephew "Timmy" who occasionally drops down to the city from his Connecticut home and who has a bit of his uncle's fondness for stories. Here is one he was telling the other evening:

"When I was a lad working in the hay field of Uncle Tim there was among the hands a big darky named Abraham, who could cut a wider swath and stick at it longer than any one of the bunch of hired men. He was a novelty as a darkie, because he had no fear of snakes. I hated them. I was following Abraham one hot Summer's day when I saw a big black snake rear his head close beside me. I let out a yell that could have been heard in the next township. Abraham saw what was the trouble and quick as a flash he was after that snake. Just how he caught him I can't say, but catch him he did. Then, 'pon my honor, gentlemen, and I'm a member of the Congregational Church, and in good standing, he histed his shirt out of his trousers and tied that writhing black racer around his waist, and went on with his mowing as if nothing unusual had happened.

"What did he do it for! To keep cool! Yes, gentlemen, and he worked all that morning until the dinner horn blew, with the snake bound as a belt about his waist, and though every other man was reeking with sweat in the hot sun Abraham was as cool as a cucumber. And when he went to dinner he tied that snake to a stake so that he could use him to keep cool with during his afternoon's work!"

⁂

"How do I know that the pinch of poverty is making itself felt?" repeated the talkative barber. "Because that was the third man who has brought his razor into my shop this morning to have it honed and put in order. He is going to save 25 cents a day by shaving himself, and I'll get him only on Saturdays or Sundays. That's one of the surest of signs that he is saving where before he spent freely. He'll haunt the hotel lobbies just the same as usual from 5 to 7 every afternoon, but then he will disappear and will eat his dinner at home instead of in the café. But with a booming market and no bad crop reports from the West he'll soon be on Easy Street again. Then the razor will go back to its case, and he'll eat as well as pick his teeth and pose at one of the big hotels. Then he'll return for his daily shave, and I will get what's properly coming to me. It's always so in Presidential years."

⁂

"Isn't it strange," queried W. I. Comstock of Michigan, as a very fierce-looking mustache pushed its way into the Holland House in front of a man who certainly measured no more than five feet in height and less than two in width, "that those huge mustaches that by rights belong to a man of the grenadier type, almost always grow on small men? They make the little men look absurdly fierce to me, and as wholly out of place as a mosquito on the hide of an elephant. But the men who wear them are good men as a rule. I found that out in the army. There was one fellow in our regiment who belonged to the color guard, small as he was, who had one of the biggest mustaches I ever saw on a human being. He was a mild-mannered and quiet sort of a chap until it came to fighting, and then he became a fiend for gore, and nothing could stop him from mixing it up at every opportunity. It was similar with Col. John G. Healy of the famous Irish Brigade in which he was an officer. Healy is still alive, and I met him the other day and was surprised that he found his means of living in the dry goods business up in New England somewhere. Col. Healy's mustache was not as fierce as it used to be when he carried a sword, but you can bet it bristles when he gets into a political scrap, for he tells me he has to keep in the thick of politics to give his fighting blood a chance to cool. His huge mustachios fairly stood on end when he was praising the fighting qualities of the Japanese, and the Colonel seemed to mean it when he snapped out:

"'By Gad, Sir, if I was twenty years younger I just couldn't keep from going over to Japan and taking a hand with those little fellows against the big, husky Russians!'

"And I'll bet the drinks that's just the way that little fellow over there feels. That huge mustache gives his real self away, and I don't care if he's a drummer for a millinery house, he's got fight in him, all right, all right."

Prof. Wright, Noted Geologist, Marries.

OBERLIN, Ohio, Sept. 26.—It became known here to-day that Prof. George Frederick Wright, the noted geologist, and Miss Mary Cushing Thacher were married in this city on Sept. 14. Prof. Wright is a member of the faculty of Oberlin College.

MOSAIC WORKERS LEAVE THE BUILDING ALLIANCE

Likely to be Followed by the Tile Layers.

OTHER UNIONS BREAKING UP

Plasterers Lost 165 Men Yesterday—General Surrender Thought Not to be Far Away.

The Mosaic Workers' Union decided yesterday to leave the Building Trades Alliance and signed the arbitration agreement of the Employers' Association. The Tile Layers' Union, members of which have been conferring with the employers, is likely to follow suit. This union held a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider propositions of settlement.

The mosaic workers will all go to work to-day and will work alongside of the new men in other trades without any protest. The tile layers are expected to make a settlement early this week.

The delegates of the unions in the Alliance were very much depressed yesterday at the news that the Mosaic Workers had decided to leave the body. The Mosaic Workers had made a demand for an increase in wages before the settlement took place, which the employers could not even consider unless they returned to work. Up to the last moment this was thought by the Alliance to be an effective barrier to a surrender on the part of the union.

The tile layers, shortly after they were locked out, notified their employers that they would not return to work even if a settlement was proposed unless they were given an advance of 50 cents a day in wages. This demand is expected to be withdrawn.

With the Mosaic Workers and Tile Layers out the Alliance will only have a few trades left. The only unions which normally have a large membership left will be those of the carpenters, plasterers, electrical workers, plumbers, Amalgamated painters, and marble polishers. The other unions in the Alliance include the smaller organizations, such as pipe and boiler coverers, house shorers and movers, derrickmen, and hoisting engineers. New unions in most of these trades were formed by the Employers' Association last year.

Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee of the Employers' Association, said last evening that 165 men had left the Plasterers' Society during the day and joined the new union. Members of unions in the alliance unofficially admit that the time has arrived when the sooner they make terms with the employers the better. It was said that when the trouble is ended the alliance will continue, though the Employers' Association will not recognize it as a body. It will not then be a strike-ordering body, as the unions which secede enter on the arbitration agreement plan, which forbids strikes.

IMPORTER DROPS DEAD.

Charles E. Fleming Stricken with Heart Disease at His Home.

While talking with his niece in the library of his home, at 19 East Sixty-seventh Street, last night, Charles E. Fleming, seventy-seven years old, a retired importer of fancy woods, was taken suddenly ill, and before aid could be summoned fell to the floor dead.

A physician who was called said that he died from heart disease and that death had been almost instantaneous. The death was reported to the Coroner and a permit was issued for the burial of the body.

IN THE SHOPS.

There is something absolutely swell out for the babies. It is a Delft plate, the real thing, with the genuine Holland factory mark on the back. It is in blue and white, of course, an alphabet plate with the letters around the edge and in the centre small figures of the blue, different pretty heads, and the children can even have a set of plates with different centres on each one. They are $2.25 apiece, but that is reasonable for genuine Delft.

⁂

Pretty things in Japanese baskets are waste baskets, one can hardly say waste paper, for the smallest size is quite small, not much more than eight inches high. This costs 35 cents, is pretty for a desk or table waste basket. There are two other sizes larger, the largest 50 cents. They are exceedingly pretty and good value for the money.

Japan is also doing well for the housekeeper in table mats. There is a set of five of these, varying in size, made of some of the straw materials which the little Japs utilise so well. They are fringed, and cost 35 cents a set.

⁂

In an electrolier there is a charming thing somewhat different from the usual style. It is a little Dutch girl in her picturesque national costume and little cap. She is bending over a bucket, and in this is the bulb for the light. The little maiden is of good size, and the whole thing costs $38.75.

⁂

There is another similar—a little Dutch maiden sliding down hill. She is on a sled on a cake of ice, the light shining through the ice.

⁂

Here is a pretty thing for the woman's furs. It is a pelerine of ermine, with a pretty finish to the sides of the shoulder cape part of the garment. Edging these sides a broad strip of the ermine is put on across and then turned up in narrow lapels. The tails run across and with the fold are effective and make a little variation from the usual style of such things. There are tails finishing the long ends of the pelerine, with plaitings of chiffon beneath.

⁂

Children are having the best of the 1830 styles which are being worn this year. In bonnets there are delightful pokes in headwear of all styles and shapes, some with ribbon strings and others with tulle. A poke bonnet is picturesque on the right kind of a face, but it must be a face fresh and young, or there is danger of the style becoming ludicrous.

⁂

A short black velvet coat is faced down the inside of the two fronts with caracul.

⁂

There are pretty old-fashioned combinations of colors this year. This is seen on a charming hat made of chinchilla with two raised ostrich plumes at one side, one of pale pink and the other of pale green.

⁂

A fancy bodice shows the same combination of pink and green. It is a décolleté bodice of pink satin trimmed with lace, this in cream and pink. It is in a flower and foliage design, the flowers a cluster of cream-colored blossoms and the foliage of green, and there is much of this. It is very good with the pink.

⁂

Black and white is always good, and shows up well in dress petticoats this year. One of these has the body of white silk, trimmed with a flounce of dotted black lace or net, this trimmed in turn with tiny ruffles of narrow black silk ribbon and set around the flounce at intervals with medallions of all-white lace.

⁂

Bargains are to be found in art nouveau plates for decoration. These are plates with large fruit and flower designs; there are plums on some, oranges on others, and a pretty plate is decorated in fleur de lis. Very large plates cost $1.95, and in a medium size 80 cents each.

REGENT OF LIPPE DEAD.

Was Once the Recipient of a Sharp Snub from the Kaiser.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The death is announced to-day at Detmold of Count Ernst of Lippe-Biesterfeld, the Regent of Lippe, who was seventy-three years of age.

The death of Count Ernst reminds the public of one of Emperor William's characteristic telegrams. The Regent complained in writing to the Emperor that the officers of the garrison did not salute his children and did not address them by the title of Serent Highness, as customary with ruling families of his rank, and also that the commanding General at Detmold had issued an order to the officers prescribing this course.

The Emperor thereupon telegraphed as follows to the Regent:

Your letter received. The orders of the commanding General were issued in accordance with my wishes and after inquiry of me. To the Regent what is due to the Regent, and nothing more. Moreover, I forbid once for all the tone in which you have seen fit to write me. WILHELM, I. R.

Additional piquancy was given to the letter at that time by the fact that the second applicant for the succession, Prince Adolf of Schaumburg-Lippe, was the Emperor's brother-in-law.

Prince Waldemar of Lippe, Reigning Prince of Lippe, died in 1875, and was succeeded by his brother, Prince Charles Alexander, who is unmarried.

After his accession Prince Charles showed signs of mental disease and was confined in an asylum for the insane. A Regency, therefore, became necessary, and after a long dispute between two branches of the Lippe family, those represented by Prince Ernst of Lippe-Biesterfeld and Prince Adolf of Schaumburg-Lippe, which was finally settled by the King of Saxony as arbitrator, Prince Ernst became Regent of Lippe.

MRS. JULIA B. COE DEAD.

Ninety Years of Age and Sister-in-Law of Chancellor Magie.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Julia B. Coe, widow of Aaron Coe, died during the night at her home, 634 High Street. She was ninety years of age. She was the last surviving charter member of the High Street Presbyterian Church. She was a sister-in-law of Chancellor Magie of New Jersey. She is survived by four children, eighteen grandchildren, and thirteen great-grandchildren.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dennis Flannery.

Dennis Flannery, father of the Rev. Michael G. Flannery, pastor of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, at Congress and Court Streets, Brooklyn, died at his home, 112 Penn Street, that borough, yesterday. Mr. Flannery was eighty-four years of age, and his death was due to general debility incident to old age. Mr. Flannery came to America from Ireland fifty-five years ago and settled in Williamsburg, where he was engaged in the manufacture of hats until a few years ago, when he retired. Besides Father Flannery, Mr. Flannery is survived by a widow and one married daughter. The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Dr. John Purcell.

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, Sept. 26.—Dr. John Purcell, eighty-six years old, died here to-day at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Dowdney. Dr. Purcell was born in Ireland, and was for thirty years a well-known physician of New York City. He had made Larchmont his Summer home for about twenty-two years. The funeral is to be held in St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church in Larchmont.

John McCarthy.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 26.—John McCarthy of New York died early this morning at his Summer home, on Morris Avenue, from a stroke of paralysis. He had been in bad health for two years. Mr. McCarthy was a widower, his wife having died a number of years ago. He had one son, who is connected with Austin, Nichols & Co. The deceased was Vice President of the Emigrants' Saving Bank and Vice President of the Roman Catholic Asylum of New York.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lowell.

Mrs. Edward J. Lowell, widow of Edward Jackson Lowell, the historian, died on Sunday night last at her Summer residence, Cotuit, Mass., after an illness of a month. Mrs. Lowell was in her sixty-fifth year and lived at 40 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston. She was the daughter of the late George Jones.

Obituary Notes.

JOHN F. STAIRS, banker, of Halifax, N. S., and one of the wealthiest men in Eastern Canada, died of pneumonia yesterday. Mr. Stairs was fifty-six years of age. About fifteen years ago he attained much prominence as a politician, and was elected as a supporter of Sir John A. MacDonald, Conservative Premier of Canada, at that time, to represent one of the divisions of Halifax in the House of Commons.

Miss MARIA ELIZABETH WILLIAMS, daughter of the Rev. Dr. James A. Williams, for forty-seven years rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, in West Orange, N. J., died yesterday morning at her home, in Orange. She had been ill for several years, death resulting from paralysis. She was for fifteen years Secretary of the Board of Governors of the Orange Memorial Hospital, and was also Secretary at one time of the St. Mark's Benevolent Society. She was a Trustee of the House of the Good Shepherd, in Orange, and also of the Orange Free Public Library.

Mrs. LYDIA C. ROSS, widow of Benjamin H. Ross, is dead at her home, 43 Centre Street, Orange, N. J. She had been ill for several months, but her death was unexpected. About six weeks ago she was operated on at the Orange Memorial Hospital, and it was thought she would recover until a relapse came on Saturday night. She was a daughter of Mrs. Euphemia H. Harrison, who died last February, and a sister of the late J. O. B. Harrison. For many years she was a prominent member of the North Orange Baptist Church and an active worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a member of Watchful Circle, King's Daughters.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The pressure is below the normal throughout the country, except in the Pacific States, but there is an almost entire absence of the general storm conditions that were the feature of the weather chart of Monday morning. On the New England and Middle Atlantic coast the winds will be light to fresh and variable. In the Atlantic States the weather will be generally fair to-morrow and Wednesday.

Steamships departing to-morrow for European ports will have light to fresh variable winds with partly cloudy weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND WEDNESDAY.

New Jersey, Eastern New York, and Eastern Pennsylvania, partly cloudy to-day and Wednesday, variable winds.

New England—Fair to-day, preceded by showers in Eastern Maine; Wednesday partly cloudy; variable winds.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES'S thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

FUNERAL OF EX-MAYOR EDSON.

His Public Service Told Of by Charles J. Murphy.

The funeral of ex-Mayor Franklin Edson took place yesterday morning from his late home, 42 West Seventy-first Street. The ceremony was a simple one. The Rev. John P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, said formal prayers, after which Charles J. Murphy spoke of the public service rendered by Mr. Edson.

Mr. Murphy said that Mr. Edson was the first to introduce corn as a foodstuff into Europe, and brought that result about as Chairman of a committee of the Produce Exchange to study the subject.

DETROIT UNITED

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only actual value and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established with the investing public concerning a security quoted at bargain prices is followed by three results—demand, scarcity of stock, and rising prices.

Knowledge of such an opportunity enables the public to invest safely and reap the benefit of advancing prices.

Would you take advantage of such an opportunity if the facts in the case convinced you? The security which I recommend is no obscure one, but is well known, and is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

* * * *

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry it to 80 and later to par, the latter prediction being based on the probability of an increase in the dividend rate from 4 to 5 per cent., which will follow the refunding of an issue of underlying securities maturing within 12 months.

The immediate advance, however, is inevitable, for the simple reason that, as a substantial investment of recognized merit, the stock is selling far below its value on the most conservative estimate. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if my reader is skeptical in any degree let him look into the facts and he will be convinced.

CONVINCING FACTS.

Detroit United comprises all the electric railways in the city of Detroit and all but one of the various interurbans which enter the city and contribute to make it one of the most prosperous and beautiful cities in the country. There are 534 miles; the property is capitalized as follows:

Bonds 17 million, stock 12½ million.

Capitalization per mile is as follows:

Bonds	$32,500 per mile.
Stock	23,500 per mile.
Total	$56,000 per mile.

I have searched diligently throughout the United States for any city the size of Detroit whose street railway system is capitalized per mile as low as Detroit and have been unable to find it.

Note the bond indebtedness alone, exclusive of stock, of the following street railway properties:

Location.	Mileage.	Debt.	Bonded Debt per mile.
Baltimore	354	$51,420,635	$145,356
San Francisco	244	33,931,000	135,619
St. Louis	360	42,000,000	116,666
Kansas City	182	16,180,000	88,901
Buffalo	353	29,000,000	80,000
Pittsburg	253	28,112,880	68,401
Milwaukee	146	8,000,000	54,794
St. Paul and Minn.	255	10,868,000	42,619
Boston	409	15,219,000	37,210
Detroit	534	17,380,000	32,500

Note the earnings for three years and how they grow:

Detroit United System—	1901.	1902.	1903.
Gross earnings	$2,219,171.36	$3,961,402.88	$4,386,974.70

BEAR ARGUMENTS.

If you go to Detroit you will probably be told that the franchise of the Detroit United system expires in two or three years, and the city will demand various concessions from the street railway before a new franchise is granted.

This is erroneous and misleading.

The fact is that Detroit United system is operating under about twenty different franchises, some of which are perpetual, others running 20 to 25 years, and about 11 per cent. only of the total mileage maturing in 1909.

There are $6,000,000 underlying bonds, being a first mortgage on the Detroit Citizens' Line, maturing next July. These two objections—an erroneous impression regarding the franchise situation and the early maturity of the Citizens' bonds—are the only bear arguments ever advanced against the stock as a desirable investment.

Both arguments are untenable.

A well-known Cincinnati bank official, desiring to be correctly informed regarding these points, addressed a letter to Mr. Henry A. Everett, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Detroit United Railway, and received the following reply last week:

"In reference to your inquiries regarding Detroit United Railway, I beg to say:

"Fifty-eight miles of the down-town franchises of the company expire in 1909. The franchises on Michigan and Gratiot Avenue lines run until 1924. The franchises on the old Detroit Railway run until 1924. The franchises on the City and Suburban, from the waterworks out Jefferson Avenue, are in perpetuity. The suburban franchises, which aggregate upward of 300 miles, are in perpetuity. The board has not considered the question of the renewal of franchises.

"The company does not anticipate any difficulty in refunding the old Citizens' bonds next year, as they are held in large blocks and several of the holders are anxious to go into the underwritings of the whole issue.

"I trust the above information is what you desire. If not, command me for any further information."

After receiving the above reply, the banker referred to told me he considered Detroit United stock intrinsically worth at least $90 per share.

You can buy it $20 a share under the banker's valuation, and I believe it will sell at $90 a share and you won't have to wait a great while to see it quoted there.

When the present ownership acquired control of the property, $70 per share was paid for the stock, and the capital stock issue stands to-day as it was then, without increase, although additional bonds have been issued for new acquisitions and improvements.

THIS, AN OPPORTUNITY.

Detroit United sold as high as 97 two years ago.

There is absolutely no reason why it should be quoted to-day 30 points below its previous high record. The fact that it is available to-day at prices below intrinsic values only demonstrates an opportunity which occasionally offers itself and which the man of foresight will take advantage of, with resulting profit to himself. There are almost 1,800 stockholders in Detroit United, and as the number continues to increase the floating supply will gradually dwindle to such small proportions that the stock will be a very scarce article and sell at twice its present price.

PUBLIC CO-OPERATION.

When the public realizes the actual merits of an opportunity such as now offers in Detroit United stock, a growing demand sets in and gains in momentum as values rise. Public co-operation in the stock market centering upon a particular stock produces the only real legitimate bull market and so-called manipulation does not count for much.

All that is necessary for the public at large to know that a really meritorious opportunity such as Detroit is available and the disparity between existing low quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over.

All things considered, I am confident that a sufficient buying power is making in Detroit United to warrant me in advising my readers to buy it now for the rise in price which is practically assured.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—The market was active, broad, and strong, with United Gas Improvement, Northern Central, the Philadelphia Electric issues, Philadelphia Company, Cambria Steel, and Lehigh Valley as the particular features. The buying of this group came largely from commission houses, and as the supply of stocks was small at the start little difficulty was experienced in advancing prices. At the top, however, there was a manifest desire to take profits, and quotations sagged off slightly, extending to almost a point in United Gas Improvement. The reaction did not create bearish sentiment, but good buying again developed with the lower prices. A ten-point advance was recorded by Fourth Street National Bank stock, while Girard National was up ¾. The strength and activity of Philadelphia Electric 4s proved the feature of the bond department. Total sales, 46,097 shares, $154,000 bonds.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Firm; Call Money Easy, 1 3-4@2 Per Cent.

Broader and Stronger Speculation Follows an Accumulation of Favorable Intrinsic Intelligence.

All things, or nearly all things, seemed to work together in favor of better prices on the Stock Exchange yesterday. Wheat broke sharply in reaction from the overdone rise on Saturday, and upon encouraging reports regarding quantity and yield in the thrashing. Corn was weaker on good weather and better estimates of probable outturn. The cotton market was reactionary upon influences resembling those which have checked the stock market, that is, upon appearance of excessive manipulation. The Pullman and International Harvester Works, Chicago's two largest, started up in entire disregard of union demands, promising freedom from labor disturbance, and a cheaper cost sheet. Missouri Pacific, St. Louis and Southwestern, Wabash, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and other leading railways made excellent traffic reports. The money market showed no uneasiness upon the continuance of deteriorating bank conditions, but was easier if anything. Steel exports were reported smaller, concurrently with a better domestic iron market. It cannot be said that there were no unfavorable developments, but there was none of an impressive sort, and certainly no aggregation of depressing items such as favored the views of advocates of higher prices.

The response of the stock market was what might be expected. There was a decided increase of business, and, as has recently been the rule when business was active, prices ruled higher. The tone cannot be called strong, for the closing prices were not the best, and there was some irregularity through the day. But it was a comfortable sort of market, and more like it would be welcome. Substantially, all leading stocks closed with improvement, and there were no declines worth noting in excess of a fraction. Steel preferred and Pennsylvania were the leaders in activity, but not in strength, that being shown by the Grangers, coalers, and electrics, especially among several industrials. Although the volume was larger, the business was better distributed and less feverish than last week.

The bond market also showed an increase in business of a significant sort. Steel 5s were of course the leader, but there is nothing surprising about that in a week when the quarter's report is expected, and expected to be good, or at least less bad, than some have anticipated. Rock Islands showed renewed activity and strength, stimulating the hopes of those who look for better things in this direction before the stock can move very much. But the activity in Union Pacific bonds was most striking, comparing as it does with comparative dullness in the stocks. Neither Southern Pacific nor Union Pacific stock was either active or strong, but of Union Pacific convertibles no fewer than 678 shares were dealt in, but without much change in price. Oregon Short Lines, however, were both active and strong. They closed at the top, the year's maximum, with an advance of 1⅜, upon sales of 162 shares, or relatively with greater activity than the convertibles, for the participating issue has not been an active bond.

Restrains Mexican Railroad Company.

N. B. Kates and Gustav Bok yesterday obtained from Justice MacLean, in the Supreme Court, a temporary injunction restraining the Mexican Railway Company, Limited, from transferring any property or moneys belonging to that corporation in this State from the New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Company or the Seaboard National Bank to any other person or persons. The New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Company is also enjoined from disposing of any property or moneys in its possession to the Mexican Railway Company.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Fresh Rumor About Transfer of Blocks of Atchison — Keene in the Steel Stocks — Moores Said to be Buying Rock Island.

Very little if any improvement was noted in the stock market yesterday in the matter of commission business, but the list as a whole was very firm, and in some of the active issues the net gains were noteworthy. The continued strength of the market according to some, is accounted for by more or less persistent taking of stocks by prominent interests who are buying in connection with various purposes likely to be promoted by such purchases, and partly by the willingness of a great many traders and operators to profit by this fact as much as possible to further plans of their own which consist principally in advancing their specialties. It was said yesterday that the supply of stock seemed larger than on most days last week, but there was apparently no disposition to press it for sale.

A Keene Movement in Steel.

The activity and advance in Steel was said to be a Keene movement. Both the common and the preferred were very active, but the former lost all of its early advance and a trifle more, while the net gain in the preferred amounted to only three-eighths of a point. The high point in the preferred was 70. The quotation was apparently forced to this figure the first time it reached it, the price being made on a single hundred shares, after large transactions just below 70, but several times in the later trading the same price was reached again. In some quarters it was thought that the Morgan interests were helping along the advance in Steel, giving that stock more attention than they were bestowing on any other of the Morgan properties.

London Buys Steel; Sells Other Stocks.

London's trading in this market was nearly all on the selling side, Steel common and preferred being the only issues bought in any amount, while the foreign sales of various other issues amounted to about 30,000 shares. The London buying of Steel was a considerable factor in the early trading in that stock.

The Transfers of Atchison.

Conspicuous strength was shown by Atchison, which closed within a quarter of a point of the highest, with a net gain of an even point. The preferred, however, sold off fractionally. Report yesterday had it that the recent transfer of large blocks of Atchison, which was reported to have been made by a prominent banking house to Rockefeller interests, was in the nature of a distribution rather than an accumulation of the stock. Yesterday's rumor on the subject eliminated the name of the Rockefellers as having secured the stock. It was said that three large blocks, one of 125,000 shares, one of 50,000 shares, and one of 25,000 shares, had been transferred from well-known names to a number of unknown names. In this form the rumor suggested either that preparations were being made to distribute a large amount of stock rather than to accumulate it, or that there was some attempt to conceal accumulation.

Reports from London that inquiries were being made there by New York bankers for gold to be brought to this city were not given credence in exchange circles here, where it was said that the importation of gold was not yet feasible. Exchange rates declined in the morning, and became firmer again toward the close. The local money market was quiet, without any material change in rates. Yesterday's transfers through the sub-Treasury amounted to $350,000, which was sent to New Orleans.

Insiders Buying Rock Island.

Rock Island was one of the very strong stocks yesterday. The buying, which advanced the common 1½ points and the preferred 1 point, was attributed in some quarters to the Moores. Hollister & Babcock were among the prominent buyers of Rock Island.

ATCHISON'S GOOD YEAR.

Gain in Net Earnings, $1,461,442—Capital Increase Recommended.

The annual report of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé was made public yesterday. The income account for the year ended June 30 last shows:

Amount to credit of profit and loss June 30, 1903	$16,853,659.93	$16,027,415.23
Amount to credit of profit and loss June 30, 1904	19,187,003.05	16,853,659.93

The net earnings were equivalent to 5 per cent. on the preferred and 9.466 per cent. on the common stock, an increase of 1.433 per cent. or $1,461,442. Regarding future capital requirements the report says:

"The construction of additional branches and feeders will be desirable in the near future, in order to increase the earnings of the system and strengthen its position, and in order to furnish additional transportation facilities to the growing territory through which the system extends. Furthermore, the traffic on the main lines has become so dense that the construction of second tracks and provision for additional equipment will soon be imperative. Since the year 1896 more than $30,000,000 of surplus net income has been applied to the development and enlargement of the properties, and it is expected that a considerable amount of surplus net income will be applied in like manner hereafter; but it is the opinion of the Directors that additional capital should be obtained during the next few years for the purposes above referred to, and it is believed that the expenditure of this capital will result in a substantial increase of the surplus net income of the company.

Of the strike in the shops of the road, the report speaks as follows:

"Certain unreasonable demands made by the International Association of Machinists having been declined, that organisation declared a strike at the shops of the Company, effective May 2, 1904, which order was quite generally obeyed on the western portion of the system, as well as by a large number of employes on the eastern divisions. No difficulty was experienced in filling the places of those who left the service of the company."

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

Ten shares of National City Bank stock sold on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 280 and forty shares at 278.

The Citizens' Telephone Company of Newcastle, Penn., the Union Telegraph and Telephone Company, and the Mercer County Telephone Company are included in a merger of all independent companies of Western Pennsylvania and Western New York under the name of the Erie Telephone Company.

The Luzerne County Gas Company and the Wyoming Valley Electric Light Company will be consolidated under the name of the Wilkesbarre Gas and Electric Light Company.

The aggregate deliveries of grain by railroads at Chicago for last week totaled 6,399,115 bushels, a loss of 985,756 bushels, as compared with the previous week, but were a gain of 628,161 bushels over the same week of last year.

TRADE SITUATION SOUND

Great Britain's Agent Reports on American Business Conditions.

The Country Is Recovering from the Period of Excessive Speculation, Seymour Bell Says.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The report of Seymour Bell, the Commercial Agent of Great Britain in the United States, of the trade of the United States for 1903-1904 was issued to-day. After pointing out the decrease in imports, it says:

"In part of the year the climax of an almost unparalleled period of prosperity was reached and values were forced up to their extreme limits. Speculation was enormous and the overextension of business led eventually to a curtailment of credit. More securities were thrown on the country than it was able to absorb. A natural reaction set in, and a contraction of business immediately took place. Large orders were canceled and a period of comparative quiet commenced. The country requires time to rest and recuperate and the gambler time to forget this period of inflated prices and excessive speculation."

Many manufacturers, says Mr. Bell, who neglected their business in attempts to gain fabulous fortunes in Wall Street, have now returned to their factories. He adds:

"At the present time it would be exceedingly difficult to float a company of any size. The investing public will require considerable time to forget their heavy losses during the late industrial boom. How long this period of recuperation will last depends largely on the size of the crops. The present indications do not point to a long period of low prices."

The dumping of iron and steel, Mr. Bell also says, has decreased, and has increased the cost of manufacture in America to a considerable extent. He adds:

"It has been suggested in several quarters that the dumping was suspended for political reasons, the object being to stifle any agitation with reference to tariff questions."

Mr. Bell, in summing up, says:

"The general business of the country is absolutely sound."

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned at 1¾@2 per cent., closing at 2 per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 2 per cent.

Time money rates, 3 per cent. for sixty days, 3¼@3½ per cent. for ninety days, 3¾ @4 per cent. for four months, and 4 per cent. for five and six months.

Mercantile paper rates, 4¼@4¾ per cent. for thirty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable, 4½@5 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5@5½ per cent. for others.

New York Clearing House exchanges were $132,950,711; balances, $7,759,793; Sub-Treasury credit balance, $499,401.

Money on call in London, 1¾@1½ per cent.; short bills 2 5-16 per cent.; three months' bills, 2⅜@2 7-16 per cent.

Foreign exchange was firmer. Nominal rates were $4.84 for sixty days and $4.86¼ for demand. Rates for actual business were as follows: Sixty days, $4.8350; demand, $4.8580; cables, $4.8625.

Commercial bills were $4.82¾@4.83½. Continental bills were quoted as follows: Francs, 5.20@5.20¼ and 5.15¾@5.15⅞; Reichsmarks, 94 11-16@94 13-16 and 95 3-16@95¼; guilders, 40 and 40 3-16.

Exchange on New York at domestic centers: Boston—10@16 2-3c discount. Chicago —16@15c discount. New Orleans—Commercial $1 discount; bank $1 premium. Savannah—Buying, 50c discount; selling, 75c premium. Charleston—Buying, 1-16 discount; selling, 1-16 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 5c; telegraphic, 7½c. Cincinnati—50c premium. St. Louis—20c discount.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The demand for money was rather increased in the market to-day owing to the settlements and month-end requirements. Discounts were firm, but business was very restricted. The sum of £500,000 in gold was shipped to England from India Sept. 24, and further amounts are regarded as likely to be forwarded in the near future.

Operators on the Stock Exchange were chiefly occupied with closing up their engagements in anticipation of the carry-over to-morrow. Stocks generally were steady. Consols were easier, but partly recovered.

Americans opened idle and irregular at about parity. They improved later. United States Steel was the feature. Prices closed firm.

Foreigners were steady on Paris support. Japanese were strong. Imperial Japanese Government sixes of 1904 were quoted at 96⅝.

Closing prices: Consols for money, 88⅛; consols for account, 88⅝; Anaconda, 4⅜; Atchison, 75⅝; Atchison preferred, 106⅞; Baltimore and Ohio, 90¾; Canadian Pacific, 130⅝; Chesapeake and Ohio, 42⅞; Chicago Great Western, 16⅛; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, 162; De Beers, 15⅝; Denver and Rio Grande, 32; Denver and Rio Grande preferred, 84½; Erie, 31⅞; Erie first preferred, 69; Erie second preferred, 47½; Illinois Central, 142½; Louisville and Nashville, 127½; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 25¼; New York Central, 129½; Norfolk and Western, 69⅝; Norfolk and Western preferred, 92½; Ontario and Western, 35¾; Pennsylvania, 67½; Rand Mines, 10⅛; Reading, 34½; Reading first preferred, 48½; Reading second preferred, 38½; Southern Railway, 33⅝; Southern Railway preferred, 98; Southern Pacific, 58⅝; Union Pacific, 103⅝; Union Pacific preferred, 96; United States Steel, 18⅝; United States Steel preferred, 71½; Wabash, 21½; Wabash preferred, 43; Spanish fours, 87⅝.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

A broad, active, and strong market developed in the trading in curb securities yesterday. A better sentiment was displayed along with the strength of securites on the Exchange, which resulted in some new high records and sharp advances in all of the more important issues. The net gains for the day, after declines at the close on profit taking, showed an average of a point. Owing to the small supply of Seaboard stock the common touched 15¼ and the preferred 32¼ on purchases of 1,200 of the former and 2,800 of the latter.

***

GREENE CONSOLIDATED, which has just declared another dividend of 3 per cent., advanced sharply to a new high record for this year of 18. It closed at a net gain of 1½, after a reaction due to profit taking. This stock showed the largest total of the day, and the buying was said to be good. One explanation of the advance was that certain prominent interests were endeavoring to obtain control.

***

MANHATTAN TRANSIT was strong, and closed firm at 4⅝, which was a fraction lower than the high for the day. The interests which have lately become identified with the company have appointed Charles A. Loeb, who was formerly consulting engineer for the General Electric Company, and who successfully managed the reorganization and rebuilding of the street railways of Washington, as Mechanical Director of the company.

The principal transactions in 100-share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Dealers in Prunes and Raisins Alarmed at Failing Demand.

Prices Now Below Cost of Production—Producers Blamed for Excessive Competition in Former Years.

The dried fruit trade is very much alarmed over the prune and raisin situation. In the face of the largest crop of both these fruits known in years, the demand from the consumers has almost disappeared, and prices are now below the cost of production. On the Pacific Coast, it is said, the growers are feeding prunes to the hogs rather than go to the expense of drying and packing them.

The situation is made more acute by the fact that there is an enormous carry-over from last season of both prunes and raisins. In prunes the carry-over is estimated at 165,000,000 pounds and in raisins at 1,200 cars. The current price for prunes is 1 1-3 to 1½ cents a pound for all four sizes, free on board, Pacific Coast, and for raisins, according to quality, from 2 to 4½ cents a pound for the old crop and from 3¼ to 5¼ cents for the new crop fruit.

One reason attributed for the failure in demand is the excessive competition among the producers in former years. Jobbers and retailers who bought early often found the fruit offered later in the season at prices so low that it could be retailed at what they paid for it. As a result, they stopped pushing the fruit on the public and allowed the demand to die a natural death.

BROKER GOES BANKRUPT.

Walter S. McAllaster's Petition Shows Liabilities of $9,900.

Walter S. McAllaster, stock broker, of 52 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,989 and assets of $260, consisting of cash $10 and note, $250. Among the creditors are E. F. Hutton & Co., $1,779, secured by 450 shares of stock of the Montreal and Boston Copper Company, new, and 100 shares of American Bicycle Company common; Robbins B. Smith, $2,257, and T. E. Haines, $1,080. Part of the liabilities were contracted while he was a partner in the firm of J. P. Olcott & Co.

He owes $483 for dry goods, $281 for clothing, $402 for printing material, $130 for carriage hire, $296, $312 for furniture, $200 for tuition, $110 for dressmaking, $117 for meat, $84 for groceries, $21 for coal, and so on. He was formerly employed in brokerage firms, and began business for himself in March, 1903, as a partner in the firm of J. P. Olcott & Co., but retired from that firm and continued alone.

WAGGAMAN ADJUDGED BANKRUPT

Referee Appointed for ex-Treasurer of Catholic University.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Chief Justice Clabaugh of the District Supreme Court to-day adjudged Thomas E. Waggaman a bankrupt, and Andrew Y. Bradley of this city was appointed referee.

Mr. Waggaman is the ex-Treasurer of the Catholic University of America and a well-known business man of this city, who recently filed papers in court announcing his inability to meet obligations.

To Appeal Imitation Pearl Cases.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Armstrong ordered Collector Stranahan yesterday to take an appeal from a recent decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers, written by Gen. T. S. Sharretts, holding that imitation whole and half pearls are dutiable as imitation precious stones at 20 per cent. The department holds that they are manufactures of paste at 45 per cent. The Collector at Providence, R. I., is also ordered to appeal a similar decision on imitation pearls.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

JAMES P. LOCKE.—James P. Locke, civil engineer at 231 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $311 and assets of $2 cash in bank.

SHAFF & LIEBERMAN.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Theron R. Strong receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of Shaff & Lieberman, cloak manufacturers, of 231 Mercer Street, on the application of John Menke & Co., creditors for $554. The assets are estimated at $1,000.

SPIEGEL & ROSENBERG.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Spiegel & Rosenberg, manufacturers of shirtwaists at 39 University Place, show liabilities of $51,189 and assets of $20,000, consisting of stock $12,000, machinery and fixtures $8,000. They owe $1,324 for wages. Among the creditors are Reichhold & Heine, $4,531; Reichenbach & Co., $6,271; Jefferson Bank, $5,000; A. Singer, $4,995, and Coon Brothers, Troy, $3,834.

LEISHIN & DORF.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Max Leishin and Joseph Dorf, composing the firm of Leishin & Dorf, cloak manufacturers at 154 Grand Street, by the Kremer Woolen Company, a creditor for $818. It was alleged that they have made payments of $1,500 to creditors, have transferred merchandise and accounts of $2,000 between Sept. 3 and 24, removed over $5,000 worth of silks, woolens, and trimmings in whole pieces in original packages to 30 Orchard Street and other places, and on Sept. 24 permitted a City Marshal to remove all their property by attachment. They began business in July, 1901, and in June last claimed a capital of $10,000.

G. FRANKLIN BAILEY.—G. Franklin Bailey, publisher of Newspaperdom, a weekly paper, at 150 Nassau Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $22,962 and nominal assets of $7,071, consisting of amounts due from subscribers and advertisers, $3,432; copies of the paper, $449; books, prints, &c., $248; electrotypes, materials, &c., $325; engraving due, $70; copyright, $100; notes, $80; cash, $6; claim for damages, $400, and seventeen shares of stock of the Oswald Publishing Company, $1,700. He also has a lot in Douglas County, Col., which may have been sold for taxes, as there are fourteen years' taxes on it. He also puts in the good-will of Newspaperdom at $10,000. Among the creditors are Edith B. Bailey, $16,779; Oswald Publishing Company, $848; Isaac H. Blanchard Company, $600; Bassett & Sutphin, $536, and Redfield Brothers, $513. Mr. Bailey was formerly Treasurer of the Oswald Publishing Company and bought Newspaperdom from it on Dec. 1, 1902.

Schooner Emily Baker Beached.

The schooner Emily Baker of Patchogue, L. I., went ashore on Fire Island yesterday afternoon. The life-savers of Oak Island succeeded in getting her off the bar by throwing her deckload overboard. When the vessel was brought inside the bay she was leaking so badly that she had to be beached off the Fire Island Lighthouse, where she is now, full of water.

KEARNY RICE, heretofore appointed joint ancillary Receivers of said defendant company in the said District of New Jersey, WILL SELL at public auction to the highest bidder, at the Court House of Middlesex County, in the City of New Brunswick, in said county, in the State of New Jersey, on the 11th day of October, 1904, at one o'clock in the afternoon, the lands and premises described as follows, to wit:

All those certain lots, tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the Township of East Brunswick, in the County of Middlesex and State of New Jersey:

First Tract: Beginning in the line of land formerly James Cromellines' at a place called the big ditch where said ditch strikes Cromellines line at a corner of a meadow formerly belonging to Willet Yates, thence running from said corner along Cromellines line South eighty-five and one-half degrees West forty chains and eighteen links, thence South one degree and fifteen minutes East seventeen chains and forty links, to the line of the late Edward Forman's land, thence running along said line and line of Garline Ackerman, deceased, North eighty-five and one-half degrees East forty-two chains and eighty-three links to South River at low water mark, thence down the said river the several courses thereof to the mouth of said big ditch or creek, the same being the boundary line of Benjamin Norman, deceased, and others, thence running up said ditch or creek to the place of beginning, containing seventy acres, be the same more or less, excepting nevertheless from and out of the premises above described all that portion thereof conveyed by William G. Van Deventer to Milton A. Edgar by deed dated April 25, 1891, and by said Edgar conveyed with other property to the North American Pyrogranit Company. Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to a certain public road laid out through the same on the application of Seaman Christian and others, being the same premises conveyed to said Milton A. Edgar by Wm. G. Van Deventer and wife by deed dated May 6, 1891, and recorded in Book 240 of Deeds, pages 531, &c., for Middlesex County.

Second Tract: Also all that certain other tract or parcel of lands and premises situate, lying and being in the Township and State aforesaid. Beginning at a stone in the Northerly line of lands now or formerly of the North American Pyrogranit Company at the South-easterly corner of lands of James Messler and the South-westerly corner of lands of the said James Messler et als., and from thence running along the line of lands of said North-American Pyrogranit Company, and bounding thereon, South eighty-nine degrees and thirty minutes East four chains and fifty-two links to a stone at a corner thereof, and corner of lands of Milton A. Edgar, formerly of William G. Van Deventer, thence (2) continuing the same course along the line of the said Milton A. Edgar South eighty-nine degrees and thirty minutes East fifty feet to a stake, thence (3) at a right angle North one degree East fifty feet to a stake, thence (4) parallel with the first course and distant fifty feet on a right angle therefrom North eighty-nine degrees and thirty minutes West four chains and fifty-six links to the line of lands of James Messler, thence (5) along the line of said James Messler's land and bounding thereon North two degrees and fifteen minutes East eighty links to the place of beginning.

Containing forty-two hundredths of an acre. Subject, however, to the right of the said public road laid out in or about the year 1890 across the above described premises, and subject also to the right of the said James Messler et als., their heirs or assigns, in the deed to the National Clay Manufacturing Company hereinafter referred to as owners of adjacent lands to connect by a switch with any railway operated by a common carrier that might thereafter be constructed on and over the above described strip of land and premises; subject also to the obligation or duty on the part of the purchaser, his heirs, executors, successors and assigns, at all times to keep and maintain a plank crossing on the railway where the road existing in 1897 crossed the above premises. Being the same premises conveyed to Milton A. Edgar by James Messler et ux. et al. by deed dated January 26th, 1897, and recorded in Book 288 of Deeds, page 355, &c.

Also subject to the right reserved to Jas. Messler, his heirs or assigns by the deed to the Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company below referred to as owner of adjacent lands to connect by a switch with any steam railway operated by a common carrier that might thereafter be constructed on and over the strip of land and premises conveyed to Jas. Messler and wife by Milton A. Edgar by deed dated January 26th, 1897, and recorded in Book 288 of Deeds, page 360, etc., for Middlesex County.

Excepting therefrom one and 15-100 acres conveyed to Milton A. Edgar by Jas. Messler and Jermina his wife by deed dated January 26th, 1897, and recorded in Book 288 of Deeds, page 360, and subject to any road right-of-way that may now exist over and upon any part of the premises conveyed to Chas. S. Edgar by Milton A. Edgar and wife, dated November 27th, 1899, and recorded in County Clerk's office in Book 311, on pages 530, etc.

And excepting also the property hereinbefore conveyed to the Raritan River R. R. Co., conveying a strip of land 100 feet in width to be it more or less, and being a portion of the premises conveyed by Adrian Lyon, Trustee for Robert W. Lyle, to the National Clay Manufacturing Company, dated November 30, 1902, and recorded in the County Clerk's office of Middlesex County, Book 343 of Deeds, pages 171, etc.

Being the same premises conveyed to The Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company by the National Clay Manufacturing Company by deed dated with mortgage back recorded in the Clerk's office of Middlesex County on June 3rd, 1903, in Book 347 of Deeds, page 220, &c.

Together with all buildings, structures, machinery, appliances, tools and equipment belonging or appertaining to or in use or on hand at the said premises at the time of the said sale thereof; also all raw materials and all stock in trade, whether manufactured or in the course of manufacture, upon the said premises at the time of the said sale; also all contracts relating to the business carried on upon the said premises, whether made by the said Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company to the Receiver or Receivers thereof, and whether wholly or partially unfulfilled; also all patents and licenses and rights under patents belonging to the said Company or its Receivers at the time of said sale; also the good will, trademarks, trade name, patterns and drawings, and all cash in the hands of the Receivers of the said defendant company, and all accounts and bills receivable for merchandise or property sold and delivered by said defendant company or its Receivers prior to the time of the said sale; also all capital stock or interest in other corporations and all other estate, right and property, whether of the said defendant company or of the Receivers thereof, forming part of the business carried on upon the said premises.

The said lands will be sold subject to the lien of a mortgage covering the said lands and also adjoining lands now or formerly belonging to the National Clay Manufacturing Company, which said mortgage was dated the first day of July, 1902, and executed by Adrian Lyon, Trustee for Robert W. Lyle, to Edgar Brothers Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and given to secure the payment of the sum of $65,000, whereof the said Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company by the said conveyance from the National Clay Manufacturing Company assumed and agreed to pay $35,000, and which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Clerk of Middlesex County, at New Brunswick, New Jersey, in Book 168 of Mortgages, page 523, on the 2d day of July, 1902.

The said lands will be sold with the rights to the grantee set forth in the description of the said lands hereinbefore contained and subject to the rights reserved to the grantor in said descriptions set forth.

The property of every kind above described will also be sold, and the purchaser will take the same subject to the performance by him of all pending contracts in respect to the said property or business therefrom, and will be made by the Receivers of the defendant company, and he must assume and agree to perform the same, and to save the Receivers harmless in respect thereto, and must give to the said Receivers such bond to secure said assumption and agreement as shall be approved by the United States Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey.

The property of every sort hereinbefore described will be sold as an entirety and as a going concern engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling clay products. As provided in said decree, the said sale will be made subject to confirmation, in the first instance, by the United States Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey, and then to confirmation by the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York.

Any party to the said suit and any creditor or creditors of the said defendant company and the Readjustment Committee of creditors acting under a plan for the readjustment and liquidation of the affairs of the defendant company and other allied companies may bid and purchase at such sale.

The undersigned will receive no bid from any one offering to bid for the said property who shall not first deposit with them as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance the sum of $20,000, in money or by certified check upon an incorporated bank or trust company in the City of New York, and upon the acceptance of any bid for the said property, the purchaser must forthwith deposit with the said Receivers the sum of $50,000 in cash or by check certified as aforesaid, but the amount of any cash or certified check previously deposited by the successful bidder will be received on account of the amount required on the acceptance of his bid.

Deposits received from unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them respectively when the property shall be struck down, and if either of the said courts shall not confirm the sale for which a deposit shall have been made, the deposit will be returned to the bidder.

In case any bidder shall fail to make the said deposit of $50,000 upon the acceptance of his bid, the said Receivers reserve the right, at their option, to then and there offer the said property for sale without further notice or advertisement, to adjourn the said sale, to sell the said property after a new advertisement or to apply to court for directions.

In case any bidder or purchaser shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said Receivers, or, after such acceptance shall fail to comply with any order of either of the said courts relating to the payment therefor, or the consummation of the purchase, then the sums deposited by such purchaser shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and be applied toward the expense of a resale and toward making good any deficiency, and the property be sold at a price less than that bid at said sale.

Upon confirmation of the sale by the said courts, the purchaser must make such further payments in cash on account of his bid as either of the said courts from time to time may require. The purchaser may satisfy and make good any part of his bid not required by the court to be paid in cash, by crediting upon claims of creditors of the defendant company held by the purchaser, and ascertained by the said Receivers to their satisfaction to be apparently just and lawful claims against the said defendant company and to be lawfully held by the purchaser, such net amount, not exceeding eighty-five per centum of the face of such claims, as in the judgment of the said Receivers the holder of the claim in question will be entitled to upon a distribution by dividend of the assets of the said defendant company among its creditors.

Notice is further given that the said sale will be made subject to all and singular the provisions of the said decrees and each of them, whether in this notice specifically mentioned or not. The said decrees are on file in the offices of the Clerks of the said courts, respectively.

Dated September 1st, 1904.

Thence north six degrees seven minutes east seven hundred and ninety-two feet to the northwest corner of the Pyrogranit Co.'s land. Thence south eighty-nine degrees thirty-nine minutes east along said company's north line twelve hundred and fifty-nine and 75-100 feet to a steel rail, which is the place of beginning.

Together with, and there will be included in the said sale, all buildings, structures, machinery, appliances, tools and equipment belonging or appertaining to or in use or on hand at the said premises at the time of the said sale thereof; also all raw materials and all stock in trade, whether manufactured or in the course of manufacture, upon the said premises at the time of the said sale; also all contracts relating to the business carried on upon the said premises, whether made by the said Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company or by the Receiver or Receivers thereof, and whether wholly or partially unfulfilled; also all patents and licenses and rights under patents belonging to the said Company or its Receivers at the time of said sale; also the good will, trademarks, trade name, patterns and drawings, and all cash in the hands of the Receivers of the said defendant company, and all accounts and bills receivable for merchandise or property sold and delivered by said defendant company or its Receivers prior to the time of the said sale; also all capital stock or interest in other corporations and all other estate, right and property, whether of the said defendant company or of the Receivers thereof, forming part of the business carried on upon the said premises.

The said lands will be sold subject to the lien of a mortgage covering all the lands hereinbefore described as formerly owned by the said National Clay Manufacturing Company, which said mortgage was dated the first day of July, 1902, and executed by Adrian Lyon, Trustee for Robert W. Lyle, to Edgar Brothers Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and given to secure the payment of the sum of $65,000, whereof the said Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company by the said conveyance from the National Clay Manufacturing Company assumed and agreed to pay $35,000, and which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Clerk of Middlesex County, at New Brunswick, New Jersey, in Book 168 of Mortgages, page 523, on the 2d day of July, 1902.

The said lands will be sold with the rights reserved and given to the grantor by the said National Clay Manufacturing Company to the Great Eastern Clay Manufacturing Company, hereinbefore recited, and subject to the rights reserved and given to the grantee by said conveyance, and including and subject to the rights set forth in the foregoing descriptions.

The property of every kind above described will be sold, and the purchaser will take the same subject to the performance by him of all pending contracts in respect to the said property or business therefrom hereafter made by the Receivers of the defendant company, and he must assume and agree to perform the same, and to save the Receivers harmless in respect thereto, and must give to the said Receivers such bond to secure said assumption and agreement as shall be approved by the United States Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey.

The property of every sort hereinbefore described will be sold as an entirety and as a going concern engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling clay products. As provided in said decree, the said sale will be made subject to confirmation, in the first instance, by the United States Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey, and then to confirmation by the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York.

Any party to the said suit and any creditor or creditors of the said defendant company and the Readjustment Committee of creditors acting under a plan for the readjustment and liquidation of the affairs of the defendant company and other allied companies may bid and purchase at such sale.

The undersigned will receive no bid from any one offering to bid for the said property who shall not first deposit with them as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance the sum of $10,000, in money or by certified check upon an incorporated bank or trust company in the City of New York or the City of New Brunswick, New Jersey, and they will receive no bid for the said property of less than the sum of $225,000, and upon the acceptance of any bid for the said property, the purchaser must forthwith deposit with the said Receivers the sum of $50,000 in cash or by check certified as aforesaid, but the amount of any cash or certified check previously deposited by the successful bidder will be received on account of the amount required on the acceptance of his bid.

Deposits received from unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them respectively when the property shall be struck down, and if either of the said courts shall not confirm the sale for which a deposit shall have been made, the deposit will be returned to the bidder.

In case any bidder shall fail to make the said deposit of $50,000 upon the acceptance of his bid, the said Receivers reserve the right, at their option, to then and there offer the said property for sale without further notice or advertisement, to adjourn the said sale, to sell the said property after a new advertisement or to apply to court for directions.

In case any bidder or purchaser shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said Receivers, or, after such acceptance shall fail to comply with any order of either of the said courts relating to the payment therefor, or the consummation of the purchase, then the sums deposited by such purchaser shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and be applied toward the expense of a resale and toward making good any deficiency, and the property be sold at a price less than that bid at said sale.

Upon confirmation of the sale by the said courts, the purchaser must make such further payments in cash on account of his bid as either of the said courts from time to time may require. The purchaser may satisfy and make good any part of his bid not required by the court to be paid in cash, by crediting upon claims of creditors of the defendant company held by the purchaser, and ascertained by the said Receivers to their satisfaction to be apparently just and lawful claims against the said defendant company and to be lawfully held by the purchaser, such net amount, not exceeding eighty-five per centum of the face of such claims, as in the judgment of the said Receivers the holder of the claim in question will be entitled to upon a distribution by dividend of the assets of the said defendant company among its creditors.

Notice is further given that the said sale will be made subject to all and singular the provisions of the said decrees and each of them, whether in this notice specifically mentioned or not. The said decrees are on file in the offices of the Clerks of the said courts, respectively.

Dated September 1st, 1904.

WHITEMAN, EX-CONVICT AND EX-MAYOR, IN JAIL

Arrested in St. Louis on Buffalo Swindling Charge.

LONG RECORD IN BANK CRIME

Often Arranges an Alibi in Advance and Figures on Country Banks' Leisurely Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—Alonzo J. Whiteman, ex-convict, ex-Mayor of Duluth, ex-member of the Minnesota Legislature, at one time Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of that State, a graduate of Columbia Law School, a practicing lawyer for a considerable time, a student at Hamilton College, who distinguished himself somewhat more for his skill at poker than for good scholarship, and at one time said to have been worth $1,000,000, was arrested in this city yesterday on a charge of swindling the Fidelity Trust Company of Buffalo, N. Y., in July last.

For many years past Whiteman has made his education and training in the law serve him in the line of swindling banks and in other depredations requiring a considerable degree of mental acumen until he has become known to the Pinkertons as one of the cleverest criminals in this country.

He was arrested on request of the American Bankers' Association by the Pinkertons, who have been co-operating with the police of various cities in their endeavor to capture Whiteman. His pet scheme is said to be raising drafts generally obtained from small country banks from small to great amounts, adding a nought or changing a single figure, making, say, a $5,000 draft of one for $50. He rarely ever does the dangerous part of his work, but always has a group of men working for him, who sometimes know what they are doing and sometimes do not.

Since January last the Pinkertons have arrested no less than five of the men who have worked with him in various cities and in various schemes of which Whiteman was the leader. He is well known in New York City for various offenses of considerable magnitude, his most recent one being his arrest in that city on Feb. 21, 1901, when he was arrested for defrauding the Hotel Navarre out of a considerable sum. In New York he has been accustomed to stop at the best hotels, where his associates, dressed in the height of fashion, would visit him. During a recent stay at one of the most fashionable hotels in that city the bellboys were kept busy taking cards to his room.

It is a trick of his, the Pinkertons say, to pave the way for an alibi before he commits one of his offenses. During a recent stay in New York he turned off a trick in Boston, and he covered up his trail in this wise: Making himself conspicuous in the lobby of the hotel all day, he sneaked to his room when evening came and mussed up his bed and the room generally, so as to make it appear that he had slept in the room all night. Then he took a train for Boston, where he carried out one of his schemes, and bobbed up at the New York hotel during the morning and began rushing about the hall in a great frenzy of indignation, demanding to know where the chambermaid was and scolding her when he found her for not yet having straightened up his room because, as he explained, "this is my birthday, and I want to take some friends to my room."

When arrested for the Boston job he produced the chambermaid of the New York hotel to prove he had been in New York all the night. In this same way he is said at various times to have had District Attorneys and clergymen to swear unknowingly against the truth.

It is a precaution of his never to carry around any paper in his pockets. Up to the latest arrest he has never been captured, however slyly the task was performed, when anything was found on him. In this case, however, an undated check on the New Amsterdam Bank of New York, drawn in his favor for $2,000, was found, as well as a number of other checks, check perforators, daters, rubber stamps, and other paraphernalia.

He has also used his knowledge of the banking business. Country banks do not straighten out promptly their account with contemporary banks with whom they are dealing, sometimes leaving it to the end of the month. Whiteman has generally sent one of his associates to the bank, claiming to be a business man who had gone to the country for his health and desired to open an account with this or that bank. "Send check book, bank book, and the like," he generally added. As the bank had nothing to lose at the time, they generally did as requested, especially as Whiteman managed by one way or another to get a letter of identification from some local business man. He would begin drawing on his account presently, generally sending some one to the bank first for a small amount. If that transaction went through smoothly he would draw for a larger amount. If trouble ensued, it would generally be the man who went to the bank who got arrested. Whiteman having vanished by the time the arrested man confessed.

Whiteman was arrested in this latest instance at the Hotel Jefferson here, where he was living under the name of George R. Prentice. He was about to start for the Fair. Arrangements are now in progress to have Whiteman transferred to Buffalo for trial. The men who have been arrested since January for being implicated in one way or another with Whiteman are: Robert J. Knox and John Gordon, both arrested in Portland; E. M. Withrout, arrested in Alpena, Mich.; Thomas F. Kennedy, arrested in New York City; Joseph Bootman, arrested in Boston, and E. M. Wickwire, arrested in Buffalo.

Whiteman was born in Dansville, N. Y., and seems now from his appearance to be a man about forty-five years old.

SEEKS BOY ON SLOCUM LIST.

Brooklyn Man Who Lost Family Believes Little Son Alive.

Believing that his young son, whom he at first thought had lost his life in the burning of the steamer General Slocum, is still alive and in the hands of some unknown person, William Bandelow of 87 Seventh Street, Manhattan, yesterday asked the Brooklyn police to aid him in searching for the boy. Mr. Bandelow's wife, daughter, and three-year-old son George were among the excursionists on the ill-fated Slocum. Mrs. Bandelow and the girl were drowned, and their bodies were recovered by the husband and father. The body of the boy, however, has not been found.

Mr. Bandelow was at first of the belief that his son had also lost his life, but he now thinks the child may have been saved and adopted by some one. In seeking the body of his son, Mr. Bandelow ran across Capt. Burke of the Life Saving Corps. Capt. Burke told him of a boy who had been taken alive from the water by men engaged in rescuing Slocum passengers. Mr. Bandelow showed a photograph of his son to the Captain, and the latter declared it to be a good likeness of the boy he had seen taken from the water.

A few days ago Mr. Bandelow was told by Mrs. Mary Ryan of 403 East New York Avenue, Brooklyn, that she had seen a boy at Canarsie during the Summer who was the "living image" of little George. Mrs. Ryan said this when she was shown a photograph of the Bandelow boy. She stated that the child she had seen was in the company of a well-dressed, kindly looking woman of middle age, who seemed to be very fond of the little fellow.

Mrs. Ryan talked with the woman and the latter told her, she declared, that the boy was a survivor of the Slocum disaster, in which both his father and mother had lost their lives, as she understood. The woman said she had been unable to find any of the relatives of the lad and had adopted him. When he received this information Mr. Bandelow went to Canarsie, where he found several persons who told him they had seen the woman and boy there a number of times. This strengthened the father's belief that his son was still alive, and he decided to ask the police to help him find the lad. He offers a reward of $100 for information which will enable him to recover his son.

SUBWAY OPENS OCT. 27 WITH BIG CELEBRATION

Aldermen Will Ask for $50,000 for That Purpose.

NOTED ENGINEERS TO ATTEND

Exercises at City Hall, Times Square, and in the Bronx—East Side Traffic Plan.

Elaborate ceremonial will mark the public opening of the subway. The date now set by the Interborough Company for the actual starting up of the great enterprise is Oct. 27. Some of the celebration plans are still tentative, but enough of them were learned yesterday to show that New York, from the City Hall to the Bronx, will be en fête that day.

It has been estimated that the celebration will cost about $50,000, and on Friday next the Aldermanic committee will ask the Board of Estimate to authorize the issue of special revenue bonds for that amount. A unanimous vote of the board is necessary to secure such an issue, but it is not thought that any opposition will develop.

The programme is still being worked out by the committee of the Board of Aldermen. So far it has been decided that there will be three great centres of celebration—City Hall Park, Times Square, and the park surrounding the Borough Hall in the Bronx. In City Hall Park, on the spot where the first spadeful of earth was turned by ex-Mayor Van Wyck, the principal ceremonies will take place. The park and City Hall will be lavishly decorated, and there will be a special display of fireworks in the evening.

The programme provides for a prayer by Bishop Potter and an address by Alexander E. Orr, President of the Rapid Transit Commission, in turning the subway over to the city. Mayor McClellan will accept the trust, and then turn the road over to August Belmont, President of the Interborough Company, who will make an address. Archbishop Farley will close the ceremonies. Then the first train will be started over the road, operated by Mayor McClellan in person, after which the road will be turned over for one or two hours to the public. During that time passengers invited by the representatives of the city will be carried up.

Bands of music will be stationed at all the principal stops along the route. The arcade at the Times Square Station will be lavishly decorated, and it is now part of the plan to have a special celebration at this point, with possibly an address by John B. McDonald. The square will be illuminated at night, and there will also be a fireworks display there. Up in the Bronx there will be decorations on the municipal building and fireworks at night in front of Borough Hall.

Among the guests will be several of the most celebrated engineers in the world, including the builders of the Assouan Dam in Egypt. The Chamber of Commerce is to give a banquet either on the night of the 27th or the night following to all the persons responsible for the great work and to the visiting engineers. Other banquets are being considered.

The Interborough people yesterday said that they did not expect to be ready for public traffic until midnight of the 27th. The section which will be opened then extends from City Hall to One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street and Broadway. The eastern section will be opened two or three weeks later. This extends from One Hundred and Fourth Street and Broadway to One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street and Lenox Avenue. The viaduct section in the Bronx will be opened about the same time.

A plan of interest to Bronx residents is being considered in this connection. The Interborough Company is now studying whether it would be feasible to run express trains exclusively over the Second Avenue line during rush hours. Neither the Second nor the Third Avenue line has express tracks over its entire length, and there has been much trouble lately over the express service on the east side.

The plan contemplates an express service from Chatham Square out Second Avenue to One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, and thence over the subway viaduct system to Bronx Park. It is thought, even, that both the up and down town tracks on the Second Avenue line may be used for this express service in one direction during rush hours. The Third Avenue line would then take all the short-haul traffic.

CARS ON NEW BRIDGE NOV. 1.

Commissioner Best Denies There May Be Insufficient Service.

Bridge Commissioner Best said yesterday that the Williamsburg residents who made a protest to the Mayor last week about the lack of cars on the new Williamsburg Bridge had no ground for their excitement.

"All the lines of cars I can get to cross the bridge will cross it," Mr. Best said. "In proportion to the number of cars running to the Williamsburg Bridge there will be as many cars cross it as now cross the Brooklyn Bridge. There will be no eight-cent fare across the Williamsburg Bridge except under the same circumstances that there is now an eight-cent fare on the Brooklyn Bridge."

Mr. Best said further that he expects to see through cars on the new bridge by Nov. 1. Under the contract given out the contractor is bound in a penalty of $100 a day to have the tracks ready by that date, and the Commissioner said he has notified the contractor that he will be held to the letter of the contract.

Councilman Voll Exonerated.

Councilman Herman G. Voll of Hoboken, was cleared before Judge John A. Blair in the Hudson County Court House yesterday of the charge of extorting a bribe of $50 from Mrs. Emily Meyer of 88 Garden Street, Hoboken. The charge appears to have resulted from Mrs. Meyer's inability to understand the English language. A perjury charge against Mrs. Meyer will probably be dismissed for the same reason.

Water and Rail Tours to Boston.

The Hudson River Day Line October tours from New York and Hudson River points to Boston by way of Albany, and thence by rail on the Boston and Albany Railroad, will begin on Oct. 3. The second tour leaves New York and Hudson River points by steamer on Oct. 4, and then via Boston and Maine Railroad. Both tours will return by New Haven and Hartford Railroad and Providence Line steamers.

MRS. ERB'S BODY HERE.

Husband, Hurt in Wreck Fatal to Wife, Will Recover.

The body of Mrs. Newman Erb, who was the wife of Vice President Erb of the Père Marquette Railroad, and who was fatally injured in the New York Central wreck near Lyons on Sunday, was brought here on a special train yesterday and taken to the family residence. Mr. Erb, who also was injured in the wreck, was brought here on the same train.

His condition is not serious, but his physician said that a small broken bone in one of his legs would confine him to his bed for some time. It is thought that the other injuries sustained by Mr. Erb in the crash were merely superficial, and that he will soon recover from their effects.

MEAT STRIKER'S FATE.

Couldn't Get Job Back, Became Ill and Died.

George Bridges was one of the men who went on strike at the time the men went out from the big abattoir of the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company, at Forty-fourth Street and First Avenue, two months ago. He had been employed there as a driver. Shortly after he was taken ill, and was unable to look for work until last week. Every day since he had tried to get employment, but failed.

As he went back to the lodging house at 430 West Forty-second Street, where he had been living, yesterday afternoon, his efforts to find employment having again been in vain, Bridges staggered on the stoop from weakness. By the time the ambulance arrived from Roosevelt Hospital he was dead. The surgeon said that his death had been caused by heart failure superinduced by his former illness.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

FOUNDED 1840 "FLINT QUALITY"

Colonial Reproductions.

The honest simplicity of Colonial Furniture appeals strongly to Americans. The designs of Chippendale, Adams, Morris, Sheraton and Hepplewhite, and some of the pieces by unknown but skilled Cabinet Makers of the Period of 1700-1790, which occasionally come to light in unexpected places, are not improved upon by present day Designers.

There is no Furniture so thoroughly restful and useful, appropriate, and decorative for Dining Room, Library, Bed Room or Hall as Colonial Mahogany Furniture.

Our Autumn Exhibit of Colonial Reproductions made "Flint Quality" in our own Factories is now complete and on view in the Ware Rooms.

The Collection includes a large variety of interesting Side Boards, Side Tables, China Closets, Dining Tables and Dining Chairs.

In Bed Room Furniture we have reproduced numerous attractive "High Boys," "Low Boys," "4 Poster" and other Beds, quaint Bureaus and Cheval Dressing Tables, "Rush Bottom," Leather Seated and Velour Upholstered Chairs and Rockers.

Our Colonial Library Furniture includes a number of round, oval and octagonal Tables, Bookcases and Racks in various dimensions; Washington Desks, Grandfather's and Ingle Nook Chairs, and numerous Spindle Rockers and Straight Chairs.

All our reproductions are made under the personal supervision of an expert in the Furniture of the Colonies, and with striking fidelity to the originals in Design and Finish, as well as in the selection of the Mahogany and treatment of the grain.

SUCH primacy as we have obtained in the making of GOOD CLOTHES has been solely due to the successful marrying of two mental attitudes:—Entire modernity in style and cloths (which is in itself a test of mental "wide-awakeness")—and a decent self-respect for ourselves as makers.

Will you at least pay us the compliment of examining Top Coats, Overcoats, Paddocks, Raincoats, Fall Suits, Dress Suits, and Prince Albert Frocks that are an expression of this principle?

TWO FLANKING MOVES THREATEN KUROPATKIN

Oyama's Armies Advancing West as Well as East of Mukden.

RUSSIANS MUST QUIT OR FIGHT

If They Mean to Hold the City a Battle Cannot Long Be Delayed — Japanese Vanguard Checked.

MUKDEN, Sept. 26, via PEKING, Sept. 27.—The Russian cavalry west of the railroad report an important Japanese movement and a threatened attack. No change eastward is reported.

Four divisions of Japanese remain at Bentsiapudze, three divisions are supposed to be near the Yen-Tai Mines, and two others west of them.

Gen. Mistchenko reports that he penetrated to the Yen-Tai Mines and found only small detachments of Japanese there.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, Sept. 28.—The General Staff yesterday received the following dispatch from Gen. Sakharoff, dated Monday:

"The enemy's vanguard, consisting of one battalion and two squadrons of cavalry, has assumed the offensive, probably for a reconnoissance, in the district between the Mandarin Road and the heights of the village of Toumytsa. His advance was stopped by our troops. The enemy retreated along the whole line, pursued by our cavalry.

"The enemy has not yet advanced north of Davan, on the left bank of the Liao River, but an increased force has been observed in the neighborhood of Sianchan.

"Japanese cavalry have appeared in the valley of the Pu River."

It is now definitely established that Field Marshal Oyama has begun to move up his left. Sianchan is on the Hun River, 35 miles southwest of Mukden, and the Pu River is a tributary of the Hun River, which crosses the line of railway midway between Tie Pass and Mukden, and may furnish a natural line of advance from the west.

The movement of Japanese forces on the Liao River is all the more significant since Sianchan is the starting point of roads leading to Tie Pass, Mukden, and Sing-min-Tung.

An announcement that the Russians are fortifying Fakoman, twenty-five miles northeast of Mukden, shows that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to check the flanking movement on Tie Pass from the west in case it should be necessary to evacuate Sing-min-Tung.

Oyama's armies apparently now cover a front of sixty miles for enveloping movements. The wings are extended to the northward, east and west of Mukden. Thus far the Russians have experienced little pressure from the Japanese centre. Oyama seems to be moving with great deliberation, probably gathering strength for a rapid advance of both wings when an attempt is made to close the net.

Although the imaginary line connecting the extreme Japanese advance east and west of Mukden still passes ten miles below that city, it is evident that the fate of Mukden cannot long be delayed. If Kuropatkin intends to try to hold the city fighting on his flanks will begin almost immediately.

A telegram from Mukden to the Berlin Local Anzeiger, reporting that the Japanese have crossed the Hun River, fifty miles above the city, is believed to refer to scouting parties of Japanese, whose presence there was recorded in dispatches of Sept. 26.

RUSSIA HURRIES MOBILIZATION.

Caucasus Troops Called Out—Winter Outfits for 500,000 Men Ready.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, Sept. 28.—A telegram received here from Batoum, reporting that reservists are being transported along the Caucasian coast, brings the first intimation that troops there are being mobolized. There are only two army corps in the Caucasus, and one of these has apparently been ordered to the Far East.

The Emperor will leave St. Petersburg for Odessa to-day to review the Eighth Army Corps.

The Commissariat Department is already prepared to furnish Winter outfits for half a million men. About 478,000 sets of fur caps, cloaks, and boots are proceeding to the Far East.

Although an official announcement is not expected immediately, as it will require some little time to get Russia's Second Army in the field, the designation of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholalevitch, the Inspector General of Cavalry, as Commander in Chief, is regarded as practically settled.

Some of Gen. Kuropatkin's friends cling to the hope that he may yet be appointed, especially if he now achieves a notable success against Field Marshal Oyama, but the idea is not shared in the best-informed circles.

The situation at the front with two, and perhaps ultimately three big armies, is considered to demand above all else that the supreme commander be of such personal authority as to be beyond jealousies and the possibility of intrigue on the part of subordinates, and such a man can only be supplied by the imperial family.

The suggestion that Kuropatkin might become Chief of Staff, and thus, in fact, if not in name, the real commander of the armies, is generally rejected. Grand Duke Nicholas will not rely upon a single adviser, but on a staff comprising the ablest strategists of the General Staff, who in reality will constitute a Board of Direction of Military Operations.

It is regarded as almost certain that Viceroy Alexieff will return here. The report that he may become Chancellor of the Empire is exploded. He is more likely to retain his title and come to St. Petersburg, nominally in the capacity of adviser of the Emperor. He will thus be effaced as a factor in the military situation in the Far East.

JAPANESE WATCH CHE-FOO.

Warships Outside Harbor—Port Arthur Battle Continued Five Days.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 27, (10 P. M.)—Two Japanese destroyers were observed outside the harbor of Che-Foo to-night.

A junk which left Liao-thie Promontory last night, and which arrived here to-night, reports having seen one torpedo boat near Che-Foo.

Another junk carrying a Russian, his wife, and two children, was stopped last night by a Japanese vessel, but owing to the great distance the treatment which the Russians received could not be observed.

Chinese say the battle which began Sept. 19 continued intermittently until Sept. 24.

In defending one fort the Russians rolled bean cakes down on the massed Japanese. These bean cakes are very heavy, and are pressed into the shape of circular grindstones.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, Sept. 28.—The entire absence of news from Port Arthur, it is feared, indicates a closer blockade there.

Hitherto dispatches from Gen. Stoessel have been coming through semi-weekly.

KRONSTADT, Sept. 27.—The local Red Cross Society has received a telegram from Port Arthur, by way of Che-Foo, announcing that all the Sisters of Mercy there are well.

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 28.—A telegram to a local news agency from St. Petersburg says a dispatch has been received by the official news agency there from Harbin, asserting that the Japanese lost 1,300 men killed in the night attack on Port Arthur on Sept. 18.

The Russian warships, it is added, rendered valuable assistance in repulsing the Japanese.

WOMEN THROWN IN RUNAWAY.

Elderly Miss Mills and Twin Sisters Hurt—Driver Seriously.

After shying because a doing-the-town automobile came megaphoning after them down Riverside Drive, two livery horses wrecked a landau near One Hundred and Twentieth Street yesterday afternoon and caused the five occupants to suffer serious injuries. One of them was so hurt that he is not expected to live.

Misses E. Mills, Belle Mills, Josephine Mills, and Jessie Palmerton, with Frederic Childs as their driver, were taking a drive. The Misses Mills employ Miss Palmerton as a nurse. Miss Josephine Mills is seventy years old. The others are twins, aged fifty-five. Miss Palmerton is much younger. All of them live at 60 St. Nicholas Avenue.

The landau, which was half closed, had just passed One Hundred and Twentieth Street, southbound, when the observation automobile came along from behind. The horses jumped, and Childs tried in vain to hold them. The shaft snapped, and with the vehicle zigzagging behind them, now half turned over, now righting itself with a jerk.

For a time the landau was at the very edge of a seventy-five-foot bank. It looked as if the vehicle would roll to the foot, but the driver, by great effort, managed to turn the animals back just in time.

The frightened animals bolted down the drive at full speed. Half way between One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Nineteenth Streets they broke loose from the landau. As the harness parted Childs was thrown out, landing on one of the front wheels, from which the rubber tires has been torn away and receiving a bad wound from the wheel's broken metal rim.

While the horses were being chased by Mounted Policeman McCarthy, who finally caught them at One Hundred and Twelfth Street, the landau rolled over on its side, having tottered a moment after the animals shook it off. Under it, groaning and screaming, were the four women, who were extricated by onlookers, while a hurry call was sent to the J. Hood Wright Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Wrenn, the ambulance surgeon, found that Childs, the driver, who is twenty-eight years old and lives at 72 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street, was cut in many places and had received internal injuries likely to prove fatal.

The man was taken to the hospital, but the four women, after having their wounds dressed, went home in another vehicle. Miss Josephine Mills had received cuts on her nose and face, and her right hand was badly hurt. Both the twins showed several scratches and bruises, and one of them limped painfully. Miss Palmerton's injuries consisted of a deep gash over the right eye and an injured ear.

IT IS MISS LYNCH'S BODY.

Identified by Relatives and Dentist at Freeport Cemetery.

Relatives of Miss Margaret Lynch of 344 Vernon Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday positively identified the body buried last April in Greenfield Cemetery, near Freeport, Long Island, under the name of "Martha Laimbeer," as that of Margaret Lynch, who had been missing since April 5. The identification was rendered complete by Dr. John F. Shea, a dentist, of 6 Stuyvesant Avenue, Brooklyn, by an examination of the teeth of the young woman.

When the body was exhumed it was viewed by the dead girl's mother and two sisters, Catherine and Mary. The first two had to be removed by force from the coffin, and Catherine fainted twice before she and her sister and mother went back to Brooklyn. A crowd of curious persons was present.

District Attorney Niemann said afterward that the work of his office, although still difficult, had been greatly simplified by the positive identification. He declined absolutely to discuss any theory as to the manner of the girl's death, saying he was content for the present to have the identification complete, and that the establishment of the facts regarding the manner of death must be left for the inquest.

Dr. J. H. B. Denton says that the wound received by Miss Lynch on her forehead could not have been caused by a fall, and that it must have been inflicted prior to her death.

Dr. Denton believes the young woman was murdered, and that her body was carried to the woods and placed there in such a manner as to cause people to believe she had committed suicide.

The Lynch family will reclaim the body and give it a place in the family plot.

British Destroyer Sunk.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The British destroyer Chamois was lost yesterday off the Island of Cephalonia, in the Mediteranean. All on board were saved.

While the vessel was going at full speed on a trial, a screw blade came off and pierced the bottom of the destroyer, which sank. Two stokers were scalded.

The Chamois was of 360 tons displacement and carried a crew of 62 officers and

PARKER HERE AGAIN AND IN CONFERENCE

He May Retain Personal Charge of His Campaign Now.

VISITORS FROM OTHER STATES

Connecticut's Nominee for Governor, Judge Robertson, Hopeful—Murphy at Wigwam Desk All Day.

Judge Parker again took the helm of the Democratic campaign yesterday, and there is reason to believe he may retain it until election day with Senator Gorman and Chairman Taggaret as associates. The Judge's resumption of the helm was the signal for some of the biggest Democrats in the country to start at once for the Hotel Seville, Madison Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, at which the candidate arrived from Esopus at 10 A. M.

At that hour a series of conferences with reference to ways and means and political conditions began, which continued with only one extended break to midnight. That break was when Judge Parker went to dinner at 7:20 o'clock at the Manhattan Club. Then he was away for two and a half hours. Secretary McCausland accompanied him.

Col. Daniel S. Lamont called late in the afternoon. A delegation of Connecticut leaders arrived at 5 o'clock and assured Judge Parker that conditions were favorable for the Nutmeg State going Democratic on both the National and State tickets.

The party consisted of Judge A. Heaton Robertson, candidate for Governor; National Committeeman A. S. Cummings, Brian F. Mahan, Mayor of New London; J. J. Walsh, and H. L. Hotchkiss. The Connecticut leader told Judge Parker that they would hold two mammoth meetings, both in New Haven, the first to be Oct. 13, with ex-Senator Towne as the chief orator, and the other Nov. 4, with Bourke Cockran as the star speaker.

A California delegation, led by ex-Mayor James D. Phelan of San Francisco, called, and others who conferred with the candidate were William F. Sheehan, Chairman Taggart, Gen. M. C. Butler, ex-Gov. Benton McMillin of Tennessee, and Charles M. Preston. Gen. Nelson A. Miles was one of the first to call.

August Belmont was the last visitor. He came while the candidate was at dinner, waited for a time, and then returned, to be taken immediately to the candidate's apartments, which he left at 11:10 P. M.

To-day will be devoted to conferences, and there is reason to believe that the candidate and ex-Senator Hill will meet. Mr. Hill arrived in the city late last evening. When Judge Parker retired last night his plans were for a return to Esopus some time to-morrow.

There was surprise at Tammany Hall yesterday morning when it was learned that Judge Parker was in the city looking after campaign matters. Charles F. Murphy, when he arrived at the Wigwam for the day's work, was asked if he expected to see Judge Parker during his stay in town.

"I did not even know the Judge was in town," said the Tammany leader, with surprise. "Nothing has been said to me about calling to go over matters."

The Tammany leader was at the Fourteenth Street headquarters practically all day. In the evening, accompanied by Thomas F. Smith, he went to the Hoffman House and stopped in at the State Headquarters. There he conferred with Senator Dowling and William S. Rodie for more than an hour.

"What will be Herrick's plurality in this county?" was asked of Mr. Murphy when the conference was over.

"We have been discussing Parker this time," said the Tammany leader.

"Well, what will his vote be?" then was asked.

"Too early to say now," said Mr. Murphy.

J. BROWN POTTER TO MARRY.

Will Wed Miss Handy in Richmond To-day—News a Surprise.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 27.—James Brown Potter of New York and Miss May Handy of this city will be married here to-morrow afternoon very quietly. Miss Handy is said to be the most beautiful woman in Virginia.

The Rev. G. Otis Meade, rector of an Episcopal church, will perform the ceremony in Miss Handy's apartments at the Woman's Club. Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Powers, brother-in-law and half sister of Miss Handy, and W. J. Duane of New York will be the only persons present.

Miss Handy could not be seen to-night, but Mr. Powers said the wedding would take place late to-morrow afternoon, at an hour yet to be fixed, but in time to permit the couple to catch the 7 P. M. train for the North. Mr. Potter, accompanied by Mr. Duane, registered at the Jefferson Hotel to-day. No marriage license has yet been obtained.

It will take Richmond by surprise to-morrow when the announcement of the wedding is made. Not a hint of it leaked out here until to-night, though it had been known for some months that Mr. Potter was often in town.

James Brown Potter obtained an absolute divorce from Cora Urquhart Potter, the actress, in the Supreme Court at Newport, R. I., on June 4, 1900. The charges were desertion for more than five years and living apart for more than ten years. Mrs. Potter, though represented by counsel, made no defense.

Mr. Potter and Cora Urquhart were married in New Orleans in 1877. Ten years later Mrs. Potter announced that she was going on the stage, with or without her husband's consent.

RESCUING WINNEBAGO INDIANS.

Miss Katherine Drexel to Spend $1,000,000 on Schools for Them.

Special to The New York Times.

WINNEBAGO, Neb., Sept. 27.—Mother Katherine, as Miss Katherine Drexel of Philadelphia is now known, will erect several schools for the Winnebago Indians on their reservation, at a cost, it is said, of $1,000,000.

A year ago Mother Katherine sent Father Scheil to investigate conditions on the reservation and to endeavor to reclaim the Winnebagos from the degradation into which they had fallen. He has already accomplished a great deal, and has been especially successful in rescuing the Indians

FERRYBOAT IN FREIGHT WRECK.

Passengers Dodge Rain of Splinters When the Lakewood Rams a Float.

A steamboat collision and a freight wreck all in one befell the passengers on the double screw ferryboat Lakewood of the Central Railroad of New Jersey yesterday afternoon, when, on her 3:23 o'clock trip from Communipaw, the boat missed her rack at the foot of Liberty Street and banged almost at full speed into Float No. 11 of the Pennsylvania Railroad, tied up in the next slip.

The Lakewood's passengers fled aft and missed the rain of splinters. When they had regained their feet and senses they saw that the body of a box car which had been standing on the float lay across the Lakewood's bows. The iron gates and starboard rail as far back as the women's cabin were crushed. Most of the Lakewood's men passengers climbed over or around the somewhat splintered car to the float depressed by the weight of the ferryboat and up to the pier by a freight gangway.

Neither vessel was much damaged, and the Lakewood tried to back out of the wreck. Instead, she took the float with her out into the stream, snapping both hawsers which held it to the dock. The tug White Ash and a steam pile driver brought from its work close by, however, put the freight car back on the float and then warped the vessels apart. The Lakewood landed her women folk and the rest of the men and steamed to New Jersey for repairs.

AUTO CHASE IMPERILS LIFE.

Bruised Policeman Carried to Station by Chauffeur He Once Arrested.

Bicycle Policeman Debes, attached to the West Thirtieth Street Station, was standing with his machine at Twenty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue when he saw a touring car containing two men and two women speeding down the avenue at a rate which the policeman estimated to be not less than twenty-five miles an hour. He shouted to the chauffeur to stop, but the machine swept by.

The women laughed and beckoned for the policeman to come on. He mounted his wheel and raced after them. At Twenty-seventh Street the machine swung west without reducing speed and bumped over the cobble stones in a way that threatened to throw the occupants from their seats. It just escaped collision with a north-bound car at Sixth Avenue, but kept on its way.

Debes, who was close behind, had to slow up to avoid being run down. Midway between Sixth and Seventh Avenues he saw two heavy trucks passing. He attempted to go between them, but at that moment the chin of his bicycle broke.

Debes was sent flying over the handle bars and fell directly in the path of one of the trucks. The driver threw his horses back on their haunches just in time to save Debes from being run down, as he lay there stunned and bruised. An automobile driver named Bell from a near-by garage picked up Debes and took him in his automobile to the Tenderloin Station.

Mr. Bell said that about a year ago Debes had arrested him for scorching, but that he was glad to have the opportunity to return good for what he considered evil. The other automobile disappeared in Eighth Avenue.

THINK OF IT! ELEVEN MILLIONS!

Joy in the Doubtful States, Perhaps, Till They Learn This Tale Isn't True.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—The Boston Journal, a Republican paper, prints under a New York date a statement to the effect that the Democratic National Committee has at its disposal the greatest National campaign fund ever collected—a fund of over $11,000,000, contributed by eleven of the richest Democrats in America.

This enormous fund, The Journal says, was pledged some time ago for distribution to the Chairmen of the various State Committees on the day following the publication of Mr. Parker's letter of acceptance, "provided, of course, that letter contained no sentiments obnoxious to the contributors."

The eleven men are said to be August Belmont, John D. Rockefeller, James J. Hill, Thomas F. Ryan, Herman Ridder, O. H. P. Belmont, Joseph Pulitzer, James M. Guffey, George Foster Peabody, James K. Jones, and Henry G. Davis.

The Journal professes to have obtained its information from a delegate from one of the doubtful States, who was one of a committee which went to New York for the purpose of taking back funds needed in the preliminary canvass.

THREATENED PRESIDENT'S LIFE

Letter Alleged to Have Been Written by a Man Arrested in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Sept. 27.—Charged with writing and sending threatening letters to President Roosevelt, Miss Roosevelt, and Miss Helen M. Gould, a man giving his name as Edward Dalheimer has been arrested by the United States authorities and has been lodged in jail at Fort Dodge.

The letter alleged to have been written by Dalheimer to the President, threatens Mr. Roosevelt's life unless certain reforms are carried out. The one to Miss Gould proposes marriage. The letter to Miss Roosevelt is not made public.

It is alleged that the prisoner also wrote to J. J. Hill, asking him to intercede at Washington to have the gold standard changed to diamonds as a medium of exchange.

Dalheimer was arrested at Emmetsburg, Iowa, where he was brought before the Commissioners of Insanity and pronounced to be in his right mind. It is alleged that Dalheimer wrote the letters in South Dakota, and he will probably be taken to Sioux Falls for trial.

DID RIGHT TO WHIP MINISTER.

Commission Upholds Atlanta Police Chief for Cowhiding Dr. Broughton.

ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 27.—The trial of Chief of Police Westbrook on the charges preferred by Dr. L. G. Broughton of Atlanta, in a sermon here three months ago, was concluded to-day. Of the seven specific charges preferred, the Chief is found guilty of two, drinking and visiting barrooms while on duty. The commission imposed a fine of $25 for each of these offenses and exonerated him on the other charges.

Of the charge of assault on the minister, whom the Chief cowhided after the sermon, the commission said:

"We find Chief Westbrook guilty of this charge, but in our opinion the peculiar circumstances justified him as a man in pursuing the course he did."

SOCIETIES BUSY RAIDING ALLEGED POOLROOMS

Anti-Policy League and Parkhurst Men Both Out.

POLICE ALSO TAKE PART

Get Places on Forty-second Street, on Fifth Avenue, and in Harlem—Prisoner Hurt.

Almost everybody except Mr. Jerome's office was out raiding alleged poolrooms yesterday. The agents of Dr. Parkhurst's Society for the Prevention of Crime were at work early, and raided a Harlem poolroom over the head of Capt. "Joe" Burns, while Capt. Goddard's Anti-Policy League's agents made things lively both up town and down town. The police themselves took a hand in the raiding, and even the sleuths of the Tenderloin precinct found themselves engaged in the work of reform.

The general crusade, it was said, was set on foot by Henry Mayer of 120 West One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, who said he had lost $2,400 at a place on Fifth Avenue, near Fourteenth Street, which was run in connection with an alleged poolroom and bucket shop over a cigar store at Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street. This latter place was raided by Superintendent Burke and several of the officers of the Anti-Policy Society, assisted by Police Captain Hussey of the West Forty-seventh Street Station and a number of policemen.

During this raid one of the men in the poolroom was either thrown or fell from a second-story window and was taken to Roosevelt Hospital in a critical condition. He is Henry Myers, thirty years old, of 210 West Fortieth Street, and is believed to be the man who brought about all of the trouble to the poolroom men yesterday by separating Mayer from his $2,400 last Saturday afternoon. Mayer went to the Anti-Policy Society, and then agreed to lead the police when they made the raid.

Accordingly, Mayer and Superintendent Burke of the society started up stairs first. Myers was standing near a window, the sash of which swings outward on a pivot. The window was partly open. Burke ran toward Myers, and the latter tried to climb out of the window. The men clinched while the police drove the other men into a corner and held them there.

According to Burke's story Myers proved to be a man of wonderful strength, and tried to throw him out of the window. Both were struggling on the window ledge, when Burke said he threw his opponent to save himself. Myers fell fifteen feet to the pavement below, and Burke, still standing on the window sill, pointed his revolver at the prostrate man and declared he would shoot him if he dared to move. An ambulance was then summoned from Roosevelt Hospital and Myers was taken there a prisoner, suffering from a broken wrist, a sprained back, and contusions of the head and body.

Burke afterward searched the rooms, which were elaborately fitted up as a broker's office, and found what he declared was a contract with the Western Union Telegraph Company for a telegraph instrument in the place. Eleven prisoners were taken to the police station. Police Captain Hussey said he had received a large number of complaints against the place.

The next raid made by the officers of the Anti-Policy League was made on Fifth Avenue, just below Fourteenth Street. When the officers got there they found Police Capt. Tighe and several of his men, who had been sent there by Police Commissioner McAdoo. In a deserted room they found three telegraph instruments and several telephones, with dummy connections. The place was said to have been used in a wire-tapping game, and Superintendent Burke said that it had been tipped off from Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue.

The Harlem raid was made in the rear of a saloon on One Hundred and Twentieth Street, just east of Third Avenue. Here six officers of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, led by the society's superintendent, Thomas L. McClintock, swooped down on what Superintendent McClintock described as a migratory poolroom. They found about a hundred men in the place, but arrested five men only. Superintendent McClintock said that Capt. Burns knew nothing of the raid until a telephone message was sent to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station.

Capt. Cottrell and his men in the Tenderloin raided an alleged poolroom in West Thirty-first Street. On the first floor the police found about a hundred men making bets, and on the second floor fifty hysterical women pleading for permission to leave the place. Several telephones and "dope" sheets were seized. The women were allowed to leave quietly, and the men, with the exception of one who described himself as King William, were permitted to go. King William was locked up on a charge of maintaining a gambling house.

Edward Martin, twenty-four years of age, who said that he lives at 930 Amsterdam Avenue, was arrested last evening in front of the Criterion Theatre by Superintendent Burke and Detective Carter of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. He is charged by Mayer with being the man who represented himself as the Superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company on the occasion when Mayer says he was induced to part with his $2,400.

PRESIDENT TO IRRIGATORS.

Writes That He Takes Keen Interest in Policy of National Irrigation.

MANDAN, N. D., Sept. 27.—The second State Irrigation Congress began in the Opera House this afternoon, and among those in attendance are Senators Hansbrough and McCumber of North Dakota, Senator Clapp and Congressman Stevens of Minnesota, the latter being accompanied by a delegation of twenty-five from the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce; Bishop Shanley, and Gov. Searles. President Williams of the congress read a letter from President Roosevelt, expressing his regret at not being able to be present.

Continuing, the President said:

"I have felt that the use of the rivers and smaller streams of the States of the great plains and Rocky Mountains for irrigation was even more important to the future of this country than the improvement of the course of these same rivers lower down as an aid to navigation; and when I became President one of the first things to which I turned my attention was the effort to secure the passage of the law which inaugurated this system.

"I congratulate the people of North Dakota—indeed, I congratulate the people of all the United States—upon the fact that this work has begun. It will be of incalculable benefit to the people of the semi-arid regions, and therefore to the people of the whole country, for in this country whatever benefits part of it benefits all."

LADY CURZON IS WORSE.

Monday's Improvement Not Maintained, and She Is Much Exhausted.

WALMER CASTLE, Kent, Sept. 27.—Lady Curzon's improvement was not maintained to-day. The patient is much exhausted this evening.

In the morning the slight improvement of yesterday had been maintained. The following bulletin was issued:

"Lady Curzon passed a fair night, with a little natural sleep. Her general strength has not declined, but her condition is still critical."

LONDON, Sept 27.—A dispatch from Walmer Castle to a local news agency says:

"It is learned on good authority that Lady Curzon has undergone a change for the worse, and that her condition is critical."

BOXER RISING THREATENED.

Proclamations Fix Oct. 17 for the Extermination of Foreigners.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—Reports received from the northwestern part of the Province of Shan-Tung are to the effect that the Shotuan (I-Ho-Chuan?) Boxers are openly distributing prospectuses, couched in the same language as those circulated before the uprising of 1900.

These prospectuses order precisely similar observances and fix Oct. 17 as the date for the extermination of all foreigners.

200 HURT AT LAUNCHING.

Women and Children Fall with Scaffold in a Milford Ship Yard.

Special to The New York Times.

MILFORD, Del., Sept. 27.—The moans of over 200 maimed and suffering women and children hurled by a broken scaffold to the ground, a distance of nearly thirty feet, silenced the strains of the National anthem sung by school children guests as the new schooner Charles J. Bumas glided from the ways at the Abbott yard to-day.

The victims were piled in heaps among the fallen timbers. Nearly a score were seriously injured and over a hundred were cut and bruised. It is considered miraculous that in the panic that followed the crash no one was killed.

The scaffold had been erected for the pupils to stand upon while viewing the launching and to sing the National airs. The gangplank leading to the ship was crowded. It was elevated 30 feet.

In apprehension that some accident might happen orders were given that no more persons should be allowed on board. This left the bulk of the crowd, nearly 200, to rush back on the plank, causing the underpinning to give way and the scaffolding to fall just as the vessel glided into the water.

THOMAS E. WATSON COLLAPSES

Populist Presidential Candidate Breaks Down at End of Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 27.—Thomas E. Watson of Georgia, the Populist candidate for President, suffered a physical breakdown at the close of his speech in Representative Hall at the State House this afternoon, and had to be taken to his hotel in a carriage. A physician was summoned and the Georgian was advised to go home and to spend a few weeks in absolute quiet.

Mr. Watson was ill twenty-four hours before he began to speak, and he remained in his room until this morning, declining to see visitors. His breakdown is due largely to the extra work involved in the preparation of his letter of acceptance, which is now nearing completion and will be made public within a few days. Several times during his address this afternoon it appeared that Mr. Watson was about to break down, but he managed to finish the deliverance of his speech. He declares his intention to remain on the stump unless forced to stop by illness.

MORE BISMARCK MEMOIRS.

Death of Chancellor's Son Removes All Hindrance to Publication.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—It is announced that the death of Prince Herbert Bismarck removes all hindrance to the publication of the third volume of his father's memoirs.

The contents of the coming volume will, it is hoped, throw light on the immediate causes of Prince Bismarck's resignation. Six years have elapsed since the Chancellor's death, and it is not unlikely that imperial sanction could be obtained for the publication to-day of a great deal that might have been considered premature and undesirable when the previous memoirs appeared.

MR. HOAR'S END VERY NEAR.

Senator's Physician Thinks He Will Live Through the Night.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 27.—At 7 o'clock to-night Dr. Warren R. Gilman, Senator George F. Hoar's physician, expressed the belief that the Senator would live through the night. He is unable to swallow, is unconscious, and his vitality is almost gone.

Senator Hoar remained to-day in the state of coma into which he sank on Sunday night. At 10 o'clock this morning the following bulletin was issued:

"The Senator is very weak. His pulse is very low. Death seems now to be a question of a few hours."

The noon bulletin said:

"Senator Hoar is not any better. He takes no food or nourishment, as he is now unable to swallow. He remains in a stupor, but his sleep is not restful."

Mr. Hoar continued to lose strength all day. His constitution is a marvel to the attending physicians, in that the patient still lives though unable to take food.

CUNNEEN ARRAIGNS AND ACCUSES ODELL

Cites Appropriations Approved Against His Advice.

NEEDLESS POSTS CREATED

State Used to Serve Party and Funds Perverted in "Manner Morally Reprehensible," He Says.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.—Attorney General John Cunneen, the only Democratic member of the present State Administration, to-night issued a statement in answer to the recently published challenge of Gov. Odell.

In this challenge the Governor was quoted as having asked: "If the perversion of public funds about which so much was said in the Democratic platform has been going on at Albany during the last four years, what has the Democratic Attorney General been doing?" and as having alleged that the Attorney General "is a member of nearly all the State boards."

"First of all," says Mr. Cunneen, "I did not write the Democratic State platform. None of its provisions were known to me before it was adopted by the convention. I have no doubt that if Gov. Odell will address himself to the authors of that document, they will remind him of the facts on which its charges are based."

Of his relations with Gov. Odell and his associate State officers he says:

"I have attempted to be faithful to the State officers in counselling them as to their powers and duties, as I am required by law to do. When they have ignored my advice, I have ignored their conduct. The Attorney General is their counselor, and the instances are very rare, indeed, in which he has authority to prosecute them for malfeasance or misfeasance.

"I regret now that Gov. Odell and his newspaper friends have forced me to make this statement.

"I have been at Albany less than two years. In that time I have repeatedly advised Gov. Odell that appropriations of public money made by the Legislature were unauthorized by the Constitution, but he has ignored my advice and given such appropriations his approval."

Beet-Sugar Bounty Law an Instance.

Mr. Cunneen cites the beet sugar bounty law as the first notable instance in which Gov. Odell ignored his advice. He says:

"I advised the Governor as follows:

"'Without reference to the policy of appropriating public moneys in this manner, which may well be doubted, I think that the proposed bill is contrary to the express provision of the Constitution of this State that neither the credit nor the money of the State shall be given or loaned to or in aid of any association, corporation, or private undertaking.'

"Notwithstanding this opinion, the Governor approved the bill. He had approved a similar bill in 1902, (Chap. 240,) and under these acts the Binghamton Beet Sugar Company has been paid $21,705.77 and the Empire State Sugar Company $27,862.06, amounting in all to $49,567.83. A similar bill appropriating $60,000 (Chap. 670) was passed in 1904 and approved by Gov. Odell contrary to my opinion.

"I am clearly of the opinion that the payment of this money to private enterprises was illegal. If it is lawful to take money out of the State Treasury and give it to men because they produce beet sugar, it would be equally so to take out more money and give it to people who produce flour, cigars, liquors, or any of the other commodities in which men deal. If this practice is to be upheld, it will not be long before every member of the Legislature will have friends engaged in some laudable enterprise which, in his judgment, will deserve a bounty.

"The provision of the Constitution to which I brought the attention of the Governor was intended to guard against such practices. The Governor, however, against my advice in several instances, has disregarded this safeguard.

"The Governor is also reported as having said that Mr. Cunneen 'is a member of nearly all the State boards.' I can scarcely believe that the Governor made this statement, because it is not the fact. The boards and departments which have spent most of the public moneys have to do with prisons, charities, hospitals, and education. I have nothing to do with any of these, except Union College, the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Bath, and the Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents on Randall's Island. I am not aware of any waste of public money by any of these institutions.

As Member of the Canal Board.

"I am a member of the Canal Board, and very soon after entering upon the duties of my office voted alone against the allowance of an item claimed by the Furnaceville Iron Company for excavating rock for $18,618 on a contract for canal work under the nine-million-dollar appropriation. I did this because of the following facts:

"The claim had been audited by the preceding Canal Board, which disallowed this item. The claimant applied for a rehearing, which had been granted. On the rehearing it appeared that before the contract was made the State engineers made an investigation and failed to discover rock; that therefore no provision was made for excavating rock either in the estimate, specifications, or contract for the work; that for over six months the excavation was was classified by the engineer in charge as earth; that two of the engineers employed by the State left the State service and became employes of the contractor on the work; that afterward the contractor secured a modification of their contract by which the State agreed to pay them a dollar a yard for excavating rock; that there was then a reclassification made by the engineer, and a part of that which had previously been classified as earth was classified as rock and the increased compensation resulting from this classification amounted to said sum of $18,618.

"I was very familiar with the section of the canal where the work was done. I knew that there was no rock there. I caused the attendance before the Canal facts my Republican associates on the Canal Board all voted to allow the item, and I alone voted against it.

"I have no personal knowledge as to who was concerned in this claim, or who were concerned in the sugar companies, or what influences, if any, outside of the merits in each instance, induced the action taken by public authorities.

"Subsequently it was proposed in the Canal Board to employ special counsel to examine title to lands to be acquired in the barge-canal work. I took decided ground against this, and it was dropped. This was several months ago. There was no occasion to examine title then, and there has been none since then.

"These are the only instances that I now recall in which I deemed it necessary to differ with my associates on the Canal Board.

Government by Special Laws.

"Ever since I have been in Albany, and before, I have been convinced that Gov. Odell is more disposed to make the State serve his party than to make his party serve the State. That for this purpose offices have been multiplied, salaries have been increased, the term of office has been extended, and the administration of the Government is becoming more and more by special laws under which the people are more dependent for favor upon the party in power than they would be under general laws.

"Time and space will not admit of my now giving but a few illustrations to prove this fact. I have already referred to the proposal to employ counsel for whom there was nothing to do.

"A single other illustration: The Legislature last Winter by a most extraordinary act authorized the Governor to appoint three special examiners and appraisers for the term of four years, whose duty it shall be, under the direction of the Canal Board, to visit and inspect the property appropriated for the use of the improved canals, and provided that 'the compensation of such examiners and appraisers shall be fixed by the Governor at an amount not exceeding the sum of $5,000 per year, and they shall be entitled to receive $2,500 in lieu of expenses.'

"It will be observed that the statute does not provide that each shall receive a sum not exceeding $5,000, but they shall receive $5,000, which would be equal to $1,666.66 each and $2,500 for expenses would amount to $833.34 each.

"The statute would admit of a construction that the $5,000 for salary was to be apportioned and the $2,500 for expenses was to be apportioned. The rule of law as stated by the Court of Appeals is: 'If a statute which appropriates or authorizes the appropriation of money for the payment of salary to a public officer or employe is indefinite so that it is uncertain whether the Legislature intended to devote a larger or smaller sum to that purpose, the doubt should be resolved by adopting the smaller amount, as the interest of the public, other things being equal, is superior to that of an individual. (159 N. Y., 242.)

The Governor's Interpretation.

"The Governor appointed three gentlemen the 27th day of April, 1904, and appointed in the employ of the Land Board for a considerable time at an annual salary of $1,500, and who seemed to be pleased with his position and compensation, yet the Governor on June 17, 1904, addressed a communication to the Controller in the following words:

"'My Dear Sir: Acting pursuant to Chapter 335 of the Laws of 1904, I have appointed a Board of Canal Appraisers and have fixed their salaries at $5,000 per annum each, with $2,500 in lieu of all expenses. These appointments were made by me on the 26th day of April, 1904, the commissions being signed on that date and the salaries should be paid from that date.'

"The gentlemen appointed qualified on the 27th day of 9April, 1904, and appointed a Secretary at an annual salary of $3,000.

"In my opinion the creation of this board was absolutely unnecessary. The work could be done by the present State officials and their assistants, and the expense of the new board saved to the State. The compensation and allowance for each of these appraisers by the Governor exceeds the salary and allowance made to several of the Constitutional State officers elected by the people. It exceeds the salary of the special deputy engineer who is to be in immediate charge of the work.

"The Governor acted directly contrary to the rule of law above quoted in fixing their compensation. The Board of Canal Appraisers had nothing to do when they were appointed. They had nothing to do before July 19, 1904, when I introduced a resolution in the Canal Board that they be requested to make some investigation as to the cost of acquiring lands believed to be necessary for the barge canal work in Oneida County.

"Other officers have been brought into existence by the Governor and Legislature for the purpose of superintending the construction of the barge canal; the salaries for such new officers amount to $6,083.30 a month, although no contract for the work has yet been let.

"I have advocated the construction of the barge canals, and believed that it would be done for $101,000,000, but if the business is to be conducted as it has been since the 1st of January last, I begin to think that the $101,000,000 will not be sufficient to pay the placeholders.

Indirect Taxes on Corporations.

"As to conducting the Government under special laws, I will at this time refer more particularly to laws imposing indirect taxes on corporations. Under these, one corporation is taxed on the basis of its income; another on the basis of the value of its property; one is subject to local taxation, and another is not; while still other corporations are taxed upon the basis of income and of valuation also. If the law imposing taxation was uniform and treated all alike, there would be no occasion for corporation taxpayers to court the favor of the party in power or seek the enactment of laws favorable to themselves.

"Again, as bearing upon the question of public expense, the more complicated and various the tax methods, the more public places and salaries are made available for party workers.

"Just a word as to special laws for public improvements. If a community must have a special law directing the construction of a bridge, dike, or similar improvement, it makes the community dependent upon the lawmakers or party in power, while if all are treated alike and these improvements are made under general laws, no such obligation would exist.

"This is the reason why the Legislature is prohibited by the Constitution to pass a special law for working a highway. The purpose of this provision of the Constitution, however, has been repeatedly disregarded in recent years, and many appropriations of State money have been made for work which, under the general laws, would be done at local expense.

"The matters I have referred to are notorious. They appear by the public records of the State. They constitute perversion of public funds in a manner morally reprehensible. It is done, however, under color of law, and may be attributed to bad judgment, for which no criminal conviction could be secured, even if the Attorney General had power to prosecute, but it is well known that prosecutions of crimes are conducted by the District Attorney of the county, except when the Governor requests the Attorney General to do so. Gov. Odell has never requested me to prosecute a State official for perverting public funds.

"The Governor is reported as having said that he submitted all legislative bills to me before he passed upon them. He has done so, and asked my opinion as to whether their enactment was authorized by the Constitution or whether they were in proper form, but he has never taken my opinion concerning the questions of public policy involved or as to whether they were extravagant, corrupt, or otherwise vicious.

Bills Declared Invalid Approved.

"Neither has the Governor always acted on my opinion on the point submitted. He has approved many bills after I advised that they were unconstitutional, and I may be pardoned for saying in passing that in every instance in which he disregarded my opinion and approved a statute and its validity was subsequently considered by the court his action in the matter was held to be unauthorized.

"I note Gov. Odell's comparative statement concerning the expenses of my office during my administration and that of my predecessors. I shall have something to say about that later.

"I have not expected to engage in any political controversy with the Governor, and have made no preparation to do so. Besides, the duties of the Attorney Generals office are such that I cannot give all my time to politics. I expect to take sufficient time, however, to elaborate more fully the subjects mentioned in this statement.

"I think I can show the public that the increase in Governmental expense of this State from approximately fifteen millions under Gov. Flower to twenty-five millions under Gov. Odell is largely due to the causes to which I have thus briefly alluded and not to the fact that the population has increased as Gov. Odell claims.

"Other duties prevent any more to-day, but I shall take up the subject again very shortly."

SUGAR COMPANY'S OFFICERS.

Politicians Prominent in Management of Binghamton Concern.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, Sept. 27.—The officers of the Binghamton Beet Sugar Company consisted of Julius E. Rogers, President; T. B. Crary, Vice-President; C. C. Jackson, Secretary and Treasurer. The other principal stockholders were W. G. Phelps, C. F. Hotchkis, and F. W. Jenkins, and there were a large number of small stockholders scattered among the farmers of this section.

Several bad beet seasons and a disagreement among the stockholders led to an absorption of some of the stock and the factory was transferred to Blackfoot, Idaho. This transfer was arranged through F. W. Jenkins, W. G. Phelps, and C. F. Hotchkiss.

W. G. Phelps is a banker and was one of the McKinley Electors from this State four years ago.

T. B. Crary is a Republican Police Commisioner of this city. An action in foreclosure of a half-million-dollar mortgage held as security for a bond issue of the company was begun some time ago. This, it was explained, was simply a matter of form to close up the business and allow the removal of the plant to Idaho.

Odell Declines to Talk.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Sept. 27.—A representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES conveyed to Gov. Odell to-night the substance of Attorney General Cunneen's charges, but the Governor said he would make no answer to them until he had read Mr. Cunneen's statement in its entirety.

Offices Exempt from Civil Service.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.—Gov. Odell has approved resolutions of the State Civil Service Commission exempting from civil service a large number of new positions in the State Departments. These include the position of Secretary to the recently created Board of Special Examiners and Appraisers on the Barge Canal, an additional Transfer Tax Appraiser in the State Controller's office, making twenty in all, and an additional Confidential Examiner in the State Banking Department, making four in all.

DOWLING FOR SUPREME BENCH.

Democrats Agree on His Candidacy to Succeed Justice Freedman.

State Senator Victor J. Dowling is to be nominated by Tammany Hall for the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench to be caused by the expiration of the term of Justice John J. Freedman. The Democratic Judicial Convention is to be held next Thursday night week, when there will be no contest, a practically unanimous decision having been reached.

Judge Joseph Newburger of the Court of General Sessions was prominently mentioned for the place, but it was the consensus of opinion in the organization that Senator Dowling's legal attainments and his service to the organization, both in the State Senate and as the most-trusted adviser of Mr. Murphy, gave him pre-eminent claims to recognition this year.

There will be three vacancies on the Supreme bench of the First Judicial Department next year, owing to the expiration of the terms of Justices Ingraham, Truax, and Gildersleeve, and if for any reason it should be decided that some one of those three should not be renominated Judge Newburger, it is said, would be honored.

For Senator Dowling's seat in the State Senate Joseph J. Green, ex-Assemblyman John T. Dooling, Jacob Marks, and John J. O'Connell are aspirants.

Senator Dowling, the prospective Democratic nominee for Justice of the Supreme Court, was born in New York City, July 20, 1866. He was sent to La Salle College in Philadelphia when he was seven, and completed the course at that institution, but took a finishing turn by the Manhattan College, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts when he was but sixteen years of age. He took the Devlin prize for oratory. After his graduation from college he began the study of the law in the office of Judge Fitzgerald, and at the University of the City of New York. There he took the first prize for the best final and then examination, the latter being the first time in the history of the university that both prizes were won by the same student. He was admitted to the bar in 1887.

Mr. Dowling entered Tammany Hall from the old Sixteenth Ward, which was then under the leadership of John F. Carroll. He got the nomination for the Assembly and was elected by nearly 2,000 majority. He served on the Committee on Codes of the Assembly. In 1895 he became the Tammany leader of the new Twenty-fourth District, of which he is still leader.

In the Senate Senator Dowling has served on both the Judiciary and Codes Committees, and whenever a legal proposition was under discussion in the Senate he was always relied upon by his Democratic associates to make the most telling argument for their side. His legal judgment was held in high regard by the ablest lawyers on the Republican side of the Senate as well. His independence and his disposition to aid in promoting clean government were shown during the last session, when he introduced and championed the bill brought to Albany by District Attorney Jerome designed to enable him to begin an effective prosecution against Richard Canfield. Mr. Dowling has always taken an interest in labor legislation, and it was largely owing to his painstaking that the employers' liability bill, which is now on the statute books, was perfected.

NAMED FOR STATE SENATE.

Republicans Choose Candidates in Manhattan—Elsberg Defends Odell.

Republican conventions to nominate candidates for State Senators were held last night in all the Senatorial districts of Manhattan and the Bronx. All the districts, with the exception of the Fifteenth, are now represented by Democrats. In the Fifteenth Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg was renominated without opposition in Tuxedo Hall, on Fifty-ninth Street and Madison Avenue. The Fifteenth District is composed of the Twenty-fifth, Twenty-seventh, and Twenty-ninth Assembly Districts.

Senator Elsberg was escorted to the platform and made a speech for the Republican National and States tickets, in the course of which he said:

"No single act of the Republican State Administration could bring a blush of shame to the face of any Republican. The time has not come when every one is perfect. Some mistakes have been made, but the State Administration on the whole has been such as to reflect honor on the party.

"Never in the past have I hesitated to differ from those with whom I usually agree. I have always exercised my own best judgment on legislative matters no matter what anybody else might think. Whether or not things were done with which some of us did not approve, I believe there was nothing done or proposed which was not in entire good faith. I say publicly that there is not a single thing that has happened in the last four years at Albany for which Benjamin B. Odell had any responsibility which does not reflect credit upon him. I believe that the time will come when the people will unanimously agree with me in that statement."

The results of the other Republican Senatorial district conventions held last night were as follows:

In the Tenth District—Clark Hamilton Abbott, a lawyer of 29 Broadway, and living at 2 State Street, was nominated.

The Eleventh District Convention was adjourned.

In the Twelfth District Philip Rosenthal, a tutor and a resident of the Fourteenth Assembly District, was nominated.

In the Thirteenth District Frederick B. McNish, a lawyer of 25 Broad Street, was nominated.

In the Fourteenth District Corneil A. Theller, an importer of 219 East Thirty-fourth Street, was nominated.

In the Sixteenth District Lucius A. Waldo, a lawyer of 351 West Twenty-second Street, was named.

In the Seventeenth District the nominee was Martin Saxe, Assistant Corporation Counsel under Mayor Low.

The Eighteenth District Convention was adjourned.

In the Nineteenth District Alfred R. Page, a lawyer living at 250 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, was the nominee.

The convention of the Twentieth District was adjourned.

REPUBLICANS SPECULATE AS TO ODELL'S COURSE

Talk of Pressure to Quit Governorship or Chairmanship.

CORTELYOU VISITS ROOSEVELT

His Washington Trip May Affect Campaign Here—Local Leaders Out with the Governor.

There was talk in Republican circles yesterday to the effect that the chief purpose of the visit of Chairman Cortelyou to Washington to see President Roosevelt was to discuss the New York campaign. After the Chicago Convention, Governor-Chairman Odell served notice upon the President and Chairman Cortelyou that he must be allowed to manage the New York campaign free from any interference on the part of the National Committee, or else he would not undertake the work at all.

That was the time when there was a good deal of talk of the necessity of nominating Elihu Root or some man of equal prominence in order to help out the National ticket. Being none too sure of carrying New York, President Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou were glad to have Gov. Odell take hold on his own terms. Since that time, however, the situation has changed.

All the talk now is not how much the State ticket will help the President, but whether the popularity of the President will be sufficient to pull the State ticket through. There is a strong suspicion among some of the leading Republican politicians of the State that neither the President nor Chairman Cortelyou feels as strongly about the advantage of having Gov. Odell manage the campaign as they did in the beginning, and there is a great deal of talk about the desirability of having the Governor either resign the Governorship or give over the management of the campaign to others.

There are not a few prominent members of the Republican organization who are decidedly of the opinion that for the Governor to hold on to both places means to accentuate the issue of "Odellism." Chairman Cortelyou has heard a lot of this talk, and it was the impression in Republican circles yesterday that he went to Washington to have a heart-to-heart talk with the President.

Even Lieut. Gov. Higgins, the Republican candidate for Governor, it is pointed out, has felt called upon to declare that if he were Governor he would not act as Gov. Odell is doing. It is a well-known fact that not only is Gov. Odell giving practically all of his time to the management of the Republican campaign, but that his secretaries are also doing political work under his direction.

The proposal made by Executive Chairman Halpin, acting under the Governor's instigation at the Monday meeting of district leaders in this city, was that there should be named by the Governor-Chairman a deputy leader for each of the thirty-five Assembly districts in Manhattan and the Bronx. The proposition was regarded by these leaders generally as a reflection on either their ability or their good faith or both, and some of them were so indignant about it that, despite the fact that a resolution was passed binding them all to secrecy as to what had occurred in the meeting, they made all the details of the session public. That the Governor-Chairman and many of the leaders on whom he must rely for results in New York County are at sixes and sevens is generally recognized as a fact around the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

It developed at the meeting Monday that the Governor-Chairman had not been relying on the advice of Thomas Taggart, the district leaders as to conditions in their districts. When some of them arose and told what they thought conditions to be, the Governor-Chairman produced reports which he had received through his secret service which astounded and abashed them.

Executive Chairman William Barnes, who is in a position to know something of what is going on in the organization, was quoted yesterday as stating that Herrick was likely to get a majority of 50,000 in the State, and that he supposed Greater New York would go Democratic by about 150,000. Mr. Barnes, when seen yesterday and asked if he had made such a statement, refused to deny it.

Of course, nobody believed that Mr. Barnes thought the outlook for the Republicans was really as bad as that, but that Mr. Barnes, who is the leader of Albany County, where Judge Herrick resides, has been depressed since Judge Parker's nomination is known to all of his friends, and the general view taken of his interview was that he had given an exaggerated expression to his fears.

J. Sloat Fassett, who has been making a tour through the upper part of the State, was in the city yesterday and was enthusiastic over the outlook for Roosevelt, but the best he could say for the chances of the State ticket was that the friends of Hill and Stanchfield were likely to resent the defection of the friends of Judge Herrick in the last two State elections. That statement was ridiculed in Democratic circles.

Whether or not they have any good foundation for their belief, there were some Platt Republicans who were predicting yesterday that the result of interference in the State campaign on the part of the President acting through Chairman Cortelyou might be seen in a few days.

PARKER'S EMPLOYES TESTIFY.

Affidavit Denying That He Said a Dollar a Day Was a Sufficient Wage.

Three of Judge Parker's fellow-townsmen in Esopus made affidavit yesterday that there was no truth in a newspaper report published in a local newspaper some days ago to the effect that Judge Parker had said in their presence that he regarded a dollar a day as ample pay for unskilled labor, provided a man's work was steady.

These men are Emery Freer, Samuel E. Mott, and Louis Booth of Esopus, all of whom were named as having been present some months ago when Judge Parker was alleged to have made these statements in regard to laborers.

We and each of us, the said Emery Freer, being a Democrat, and the said Samuel E. Mott, and Louis Booth, Republicans, depose and say as to the statements in said article:

First—That we are identical persons named in the article and in whose presence Judge Parker was alleged to have made said statement.

Second—That no such conversation ever took place, either at the store of Emery Freer, or any other place, and that Judge Parker never made the statements attributed to him at Freer's store or any other place, to the knowledge of either of us.

Third—That the statement is false in substance and in fact.

Fourth—That to our knowledge Judge Parker, since he has resided in Esopus, has paid the usual and going rate of wages to all the men employed by him on his place.

In addition the said Emery Freer for himself says that he has frequently, during the absence of Judge Parker, paid the Judge's employes; has time and time again cashed checks given to said employes for wages, and of his knowledge says that Judge Parker has always paid the going rate of wages to all men employed as day farm laborers on his farm, to wit: from $1.50 to $1.75 a day, and that the statement to the contrary published as aforesaid is untrue and absolutely without foundation.

ROOSEVELT SIGNATURE FORGED TO A LETTER

Attempt to Array Organized Labor Against President.

PRINTED IN MINERS' PAPER

Purported to be Addressed to Michael Donnelly—The President Asks That Forgers Be Punished.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — President Roosevelt's signature has been forged to a letter addressed to Michael Donnelly, President of the American Meat Cutters' and Butcher Workmen, published in The Miners' Magazine of Denver, the official organ of the Western Federation of Miners.

The obvious purpose of the forgery is to array organized labor against the Chief Executive in the pending campaign.

As soon as the forgery was brought to the attention of the authorities an investigation was started by legal officers of the Government, and if the guilty persons can be found they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

President Donnelly has been communicated with by Secretary Loeb by direction of the President, and has been requested to inform Mr. Roosevelt if he (Donnelly) ever received a letter bearing the forged signature of the President, and to give all information in his possession regarding it.

The Federal authorities in Colorado also have received instructions to start a searching inquiry. The editors and publishers of The Miners' Magazine will be called upon for information as to how the letter came into their possession, and a demand will be made for the document itself.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 27.—When Senator Fairbanks and his party arrived here they found the Republican leaders much exercised over the publication in The Miners' Magazine, published at Denver by the Western Federation of Miners, of what purported to be a denunciation of labor unions by President Roosevelt, and a denial of its authenticity by the President. The President's contradiction was sent to ex-Senator Lee Mantle in response to a telegram of inquiry from him, and was as follows:

White House, Washington, Sept. 26.

Your telegram received. The letter you refer to, purporting to be addressed by me to Michael Donnelly and printed in The Miners' Magazine of Sept. 22, is, of course, an absurd and impudent forgery. I have written no such letter, nor any letter even resembling it, to Mr. Donnelly nor any one else. I have written Mr. Donnelly requesting to know if he has received any such letter, and requesting him, if so, to at once lay it before the District Attorney of Chicago to find out whether it is possible to discover and punish the forgers.

(Signed) THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The letter in which the President was represented to have made his attack on union labor was addressed to Michael Donnelly of Chicago, President of the Butchers and Meat Cutters' Union. The document is given in full, with President Roosevelt's name attached, but without date, and it is stated that it was written in response to an appeal by Donnelly to him to interfere for the settlement of the late butchers' strike. Following are some extracts from it:

"I stand ready to do as my illustrious predecessor, Grover Cleveland, did, and assert the power of this Nation against all local nullifiers.

"Last Summer I felt impelled to write a letter calling upon my countrymen to put down lynching. But labor union terrorism and crime are as great a National menace as lynch law.

"Let me tell you that the first duty of the officers of the law, whether they be Sheriffs, Constables, municipal officers, Mayors, Governors, or the President himself, is to maintain public order and put down the mob with an iron hand."

After advising Donnelly how to put a stop to the strike, the President is represented as saying:

"In any case be assured I will keep my hands off unless your folly brings you into collision with the laws of the United States, when my hand will go on in a way you will not like. So far as I am concerned you have barked up the wrong tree. I am not to be either wheedled or frightened into meddling with what is none of my business."

JUDGE HERRICK'S RESIGNATION.

Will Tender It, to Take Effect Next Saturday.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.—Judge Herrick said this morning that he intended to file with Presiding Justice Parker of the Appellate Division, Third Department, his resignation as a Supreme Court Justice, to take effect Oct. 1, the day of his notification. He will be busy with law cases until then. As yet he has received no formal notification of the plans of the Notification Committee, but it is expected that the ceremony will take place here at Democratic State Headquarters, which have been little used since the last Gubernatorial campaign.

In reply to a question Judge Herrick this afternoon said he knew of no plans for a meeting between him and Judge Parker in New York this week. He does not intend, he said, to go to New York before the first part of next week. He confined himself to legal work to-day, and received no prominent callers.

The Democratic speaking campaign in this vicinity was opened to-night at Cohoes with a mass meeting, at which the principal address was made by Attorney Charles F. Herrick, son of the candidate for Governor.

OFF TO OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

Thirty-five Winners of Rhodes Scholarships Sail from Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Thirty-five students living in various States of the Union who won the Cecil Rhodes Scholarships for a course of study at Oxford University sailed from this port to-day on the steamship Ivernia, bound for Liverpool.

That so many of the American winners of the scholarships sailed from Boston together is due to the arrangements made by Paul Nixon of Braintree, one of the Massachusetts winners, who wrote some time ago to each of the other scholarship holders of the country, suggesting that they all sail together from Boston.

BIG SEIZURES ORDERED.

Four Dressmakers Must Forfeit Nearly $12,000 Dutiable Merchandise.

Collector Stranahan announced yesterday that he had ordered seizures in four cases which have been under investigation during the past week, in which dressmakers had failed to declare dutiable merchandise in their baggage. The aggregate of the seizures is nearly $12,000 home value.

The first case was that of Joseph Baer and wife of San Francisco. They had goods valued at $1,415.28, which were released under bond. This means that the Government will seize the bond instead of the goods. Two separate seizures were ordered against Miss E. Shanahan of New York. One of them covered two cases of goods valued at $3,473.82, and the other one case valued at $987.68. The fourth seizure was from Mrs. A. McNally of New York and amounted to $4,865.96.

CARROLL PRAISES TICKET.

Calls Herrick a Fighting Candidate and a Past Master in Politics.

John F. Carroll, who returned from Europe yesterday, was at the Democratic Club last night, where a number of his friends gathered to greet him.

"The two tickets—National and State—are great," said Mr. Carroll. "There always is a lull in every campaign. We have had ours. The Republicans now will have theirs, and they will not have time to recover. That was the way of it in 1892.

"The now famous Victoria Hotel conference with Mr. Cleveland as the central figure took place later than this period of the campaign, and it was after that when our State Committee really got to work, and, of course, the other States were waiting for action in New York.

"Judge Parker is a growing candidate, for every friend he makes he will hold for all time. In this respect he is like the late President McKinley. The party in this State, indeed, is fortunate to have such a fighting candidate as Judge Herrick. He is a past master at the game of politics. A pupil in the school of Tilden, he can give any man in the Republican Party cards and spades. Herrick will be our next Governor. New York is hardly debatable ground—it is Democratic territory. The certainty of carrying New York will have its old-time effect of swinging the other doubtful States in line. It is a star ticket."

WHITNEY SILENT ON CONGRESS.

Pleased with Nomination Talk—Praises Democratic State Ticket.

Harry Payne Whitney, who arrived from Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. yesterday, appeared to be much pleased when told that he was being seriously considered for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Thirteenth District to succeed Francis Burton Harrison, Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor.

"It is very nice of my friends," said Mr. Whitney, "to talk of sending me to Washington, but as this is the first I have heard of it I do not feel that I can say anything about it just now. Would I decline if nominated? Now, that is another question I cannot answer just now. The Democrats nominated a splendid ticket at Saratoga, and I believe that they are going to sweep the State."

NO WISCONSIN TICKET YET.

Court Does Not Make Expected Decision Between Republican Factions.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 27.—The Supreme Court did not hand down the decision expected to-day in the La Follette case, and the delay may have a serious effect. If the court should adjourn without making the decision at this session the result would be that the National Committee will not know with which faction to recognize, and the election in Wisconsin necessarily will be postponed until the latest possible moment.

LAD RUN OVER ON PARK ROW.

He Was Stealing a Trolley Ride and Fell Under Wheels.

John Gesaler, fifteen years old, was run over yesterday morning by a car from which he fell while stealing a ride in Park Row opposite the Post Office, and so crushed that his legs will probably have to be amputated at the knees.

The lad was employed in Fulton Street, and, like many others who come over from Brooklyn and work down town, has found it great sport to jump on the southbound cars and dodge conductors as far as the terminal, four short blocks away. Yesterday he was crouching on the running board when he slipped and was caught by the feet, dragged, and mangled by the rear truck of the car. The motorman heard his screams, and jammed on the brakes. The boy was quickly extricated and carried to the sidewalk.

"It was all my fault. I was stealing a ride," he said.

He gave his name to Dr. Stone of the Hudson Street Hospital ambulance, told him that his father and mother were dead, and that he lived with his aunt, Mrs. Johanna Weil, at 23 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn. He uttered no cry, but was no sooner in the ambulance than he fainted.

ELECTION BETTING LIVELIER.

National Odds in Street Unchanged—Small Even Money Bet on New York.

Brokers who look after betting on the election had a busy session yesterday, as a better demand was shown and more numerous inquiries made. The odds on the Presidential campaign remain the same as they were the previous day in the Street, when owing to Judge Parker's letter they were shortened to 4½ to 10 by the Democrats, with 2 to 1 offered by the Republicans.

On the result in New York State, however, Fred Oakes made a wager of $200 even with J. J. Judge that Parker would carry the State, and offers of 10 to 9 on Herrick were made.

The largest wager of the day on the National election was one of $2,500, made by C. H. Smith against $1,000 Parker money, wagered by W. A. Titus. C. H. Smith had $25,000 more to place on Roosevelt at the same figures. Allen, McGraw & Co. placed $1,000 on Roosevelt with A. Sartorius & Co., and J. J. Judge bet $2,000 to $800 with C. R. Hammerslough. C. C. Rowley bet $1,000 to $450 with Lambert Brothers.

Telephone Rates
LORD STANLEY, Post-Master General of Great Britain, in a recent official communication, after stating that under a message rate plan the London telephone system had rapidly grown to about 70,000 exchange telephones, said:
"The proper method of charge for an exchange service is that under which the payments of the subscribers are fixed in proportion to their user. In the United States, where, during the last few years, the telephone exchange system has been largely improved and developed, methods of charge of this kind have been widely adopted, and have proved an effective means of increasing the number of subscribers."
A plan under which subscribers pay "in proportion to their user" was introduced in Manhattan and The Bronx (old New York City) in 1894. There were then less than 10,000 telephones in the city. In the same area there are now more than 133,000.

To-day's great variety of furniture specials.

WHAT do you think we've done to create a strenuous nine-hour period of furniture buying to-day? Why! gone right back to the biggest day of that record-breaking August sale when we doubled the business of August, 1903, and reproduced every special bargain that combined to bring the greatest day's selling in the history of this furniture store. It's a certainty that particular home-furnishers who have to buy pieces to complete the furnishing of their homes for Winter (and there are many of them) will turn hurriedly to Simpson Crawford Co. to-day. They can't help it in view of these prices. Fifth Floor.

Today We Present the Premier Productions Of the World's Greatest Designers of Dress

Gowns from Paris and Vienna

Every gown is a premier—a masterpiece. This superb collection, composing the most artistic exhibition we have ever presented, contains not one costume that is mediocre in character or composition.

American dressmakers, today, are only excelled by the best effort of Paris; and the gown that an American designer could compose, shall not be brought from Paris by us.

We are tremendously proud of the conspicuous successes that have been made by some of the distinguished dressmakers, right here in New York, notably those who co-operated with us in the Exhibition of American Dress, which we presented last Spring.

But there is only one Paris, and the sceptre of its reign in matters of fashion is still borne by no weak hand.

Our representatives have gone abroad year after year for almost two decades. Year after year they have witnessed the fashion displays of the most notable European resorts, and yet these eyes that have seen so much, have this year witnessed scenes among fashion assemblages, that have made them more enthusiastic than ever before.

Probably the greatest fashion event of this present season occurred during the run of the Grand Prix at Vichy. Paris turned out in all its splendor, for this first meeting after the building of the new Casino and Baths by the government. Perhaps never during the twenty centuries or more, that Vichy has been a resort of wealth and fashion, has it seen such a concourse of superbly gowned women. 'Way back in the days of the Cæsars, the aristocrats of Rome went to Vichy for the healing waters of the Springs. Today this procession is never ceasing.

Our representatives were there, and saw all this wealth of fashion, representing the supremest efforts of Parisian couturiers up to that time. A week later they saw the assemblage at Deauville.

Coming back to Paris with a knowledge of what had been done, they worked with these creators of fashion, some whose names had been famous for years, and others whose stars are just arising. From each and every one it was demanded that the gowns made for us should be of premier character. In not one dress did we allow of economies of construction, because they were for exhibition purposes. Each gown was made and finished in as perfect a manner as if it had been designed to be worn by a queen or countess. Each one was to represent the highest art of its designer; and today when you come to see these dresses, analyze them as closely as you will, and see how perfectly each detail is worked out; notice the almost endless effort which seems to have been applied in producing some of the most charming effects.

Today we show no gown that would be out of place in the most dignified assembly. Some are simple and girlish, designed for the debutante; others have the dignified elegance which bespeaks the matron of high social position.

There are gowns that seem to have sprung out of the frames of famous pictures, so true are they to the period they represent; yet they are sufficiently modernized to be in perfect taste for present-day wear.

The new effects in fabrics, in laces, embroiderings and other trimmings, provide an exhibition that will be alike interesting to lovers of fashion and art.

This exhibition occupies special space around the Balcony on the Second Floor, as well as throughout the Costume section.

In addition to the Second floor display, we are also able to invite our Public to view the choice group of Paris model gowns, selected personally by Monsieur Dumas-King, and now on exhibition in our French Dressmaking Salons, on the Fifth floor. All are invited.

Hungarian Concert Today

In the French Dressmaking Salons. Fifth Floor

By special engagement, we present today The Harzi Natzy Hungarian Orchestra, which will entertain visitors to our French Dressmaking Salons, where we are exhibiting the French Model Gowns brought over by Monsieur Dumas-King, together with model dresses of his own composition.

The program will be thoroughly Hungarian, and will continue at intervals during the day, from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.

The New WAISTS and NEGLIGEES From Paris

The Little French Store is bright with the charming new Lingerie, which has just arrived from abroad.

Of chiefest interest today is the superb collection of Waists and Bodices of silk, crepe de Chine, silk mulls and handkerchief linens. Some are in beautiful evening effects, and from that they range all the way down the line of universal service, to dainty, handmade waists of soft linen for every-day wear.

The charm is in their originality of design, as well as in the fact that every stitch and decoration is done by hand.

There is nothing gaudy or elaborate about these waists; while the styles are striking in many instances; everything is dignified and dainty, and in the best taste.

Our direct work in gathering these waists from the hands that produce them, makes them, in many cases, as low in price as American waists.

The collection of Dressing Sacques and Negligees is equally broad and attractive.

You are invited to visit the Little French Store during these exhibition days.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Paris and Wanamaker Millinery

The Fall showing of millinery was first presented a week ago. Today the collection is more complete in many ways, by reason of the fine, new hats that have just been produced by our own workrooms.

While you are viewing the costumes, do not fail to walk through the Millinery Salons, and view the hats now being shown.

Second floor, Tenth street.

SHOES for fine Gowns

For evening wear we are showing a very handsome assortment of new Fall styles in Slippers of many varieties.

The new slippers are designed to show off the beautiful effects of the new stockings. They are made of patent leather, as well as the softer castor and dull kidskins. The heels are high. Lines are designed to show off the curved instep to the best advantage.

Dress Boots also show unusually graceful lines, and are made in many handsome styles, from the thinnest turned soles, to the heavier ones adapted for carriage and street wear.

This is a collection that will appeal to all women who desire the proper finish for handsome toilettes.

Prices for both Shoes and Slippers, $5 and $6 a pair. Fourth avenue.

Just a Word for The CHINA SALE

The month is drawing to a close, and during this last week the China Store is presenting some of the most remarkable offerings of the sale.

The fashion story dominates the day's news, and there is no room for a list of the remarkable offerings that are being made. Sufficient to say that there are most unusual values in Marble Busts, Figures and Pedestals; also in Berlin and Vienna Bronzes.

The collection of Cut Glass is most complete, and the prices are the lowest that the sale has yet presented.

There is an exceptional group of Pouyat and Charles Field Haviland (G. D. A.) Fancy China marked at special prices. Basement.

ENGLISH PRIMATE TALKS ON AMERICAN CHURCH

Urges That Ecclesiastics Here Have Due Regard for the Past.

WOULD DRAW LINE, HOWEVER

At Church Club Dinner Cites the Dress of His Own Bishops as Illustrating His Meaning.

The Archbishop of Canterbury was entertained last evening at a dinner given in the Hotel Astor by the Church Club of New York.

The Primate was welcomed, on behalf of the Church Club, by its President, George McCulloch Miller; for the Diocese of New York by Bishop Potter, for the city by Mayor McClellan, and in the name of higher education and literature by President Butler of Columbia University and Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie.

The dining hall of the New Hotel Astor, thrown open for the first time for an affair of such magnitude, formed a great L. At its elbow was a raised dais. The Archbishop was seated there, with Bishop Potter at his right and President Miller at his left. Others who occupied places at the dais were the Rev. Hyla Holden, domestic Chaplain to the Primate; the Rev. J. H. Ellison, vicar of Windsor; Bishop Worthington of Nebraska, Bishop Brewster of Connecticut, Dr. Mabie, Bishop Beckwith of Alabama, President Butler of Columbia University, Mayor McClellan, Dr. Greer, Bishop Coadjutor of New York, and Bishop Courtney of England.

J. Pierpont Morgan occupied one of the tables nearest the dais. Beside him was Asa Bird Gardiner. Among others present were:

Commoder F. G. Bourne,	The Right Rev. L. L. Kinsolving,
W. L. Brower,	The Rev. D. P. Morgan,
The Rev. Walter E. Bentley,	Dallas B. Pratt,
Francis M. Bacon,	The Rev. Leighton Parks,
R. Fulton Cutting,	The Rev. J. Lewis Parks,
R. Bayard Cutting,	The Rev. J. P. Peters,
W. Bayard Cutting,	The Rev. W. S. Rainsford,
The Rev. George M. Christian,	The Rev. Arthur Sloan,
H. B. Dick,	The Rev. Ernest M. Shires,
Admiral Henry Erben,	William J. Schieffelin,
The Rev. Wm. Grosvenor,	Francis L. Stetson,
The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant,	The Rev. S. Delancey Townsend,
The Rev. W. Montague Geer,	Prof. J. H. Van Amringe,
R. G. Hone,	The Rev. George R. Vandewater,
The Rev. Wm. R. Huntington,	George Zabriskie,
Col. Edward Haight,
The Rev. George C. Houghton,
S. Nicholas Kane,

There were about 400 club members and their guests in attendance, the clergy largely predominating. The tables were beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Above the seat occupied by the Archbishop of Canterbury the American and British flags were intertwined.

President Miller, in extending the welcome of the club, was frequently interrupted by applause. He told of the identity of interests of the Church on this and the other side of the water, and expressed the deep sense of pleasure with which the Primate's friends in America, returned, in so far as they could, the many courtesies and kindnesses with which he had showered churchmen of this country when they were in England.

At the close of his remarks the strains of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" sounded through the dining hall, and the banqueters, rising to their feet as one man, joined in singing.

DR. DAVIDSON'S ADDRESS.

When the Archbishop of Canterbury began his response he was interrupted by an outburst of cheering which lasted for several minutes. He spoke as follows:

"I wish I knew how to find words to express to you how I feel about the warmth of a reception such as this. There is a well-known story about one of the most eloquent of our preachers in England, a dear friend of mine. At the close of one of the most fervent of his sermons, while the congregation was dispersing, a little girl was heard to say to her mother: 'Mamma, what a lot of adjectives that gentleman does use!'

"I feel to-night a sense of envy for the orator upon that occasion, as I think that with verbal as well as adjectival additions to my vocabulary, I might be able to express what I have felt not to-day only, but during the many days that have preceded it about the kind of reception, totally unexpected in character, which has greeted me on this side of the Atlantic. [Applause.]

"To me not the least striking part of the demonstration in which I have been allowed to take part has been the recognition extended by those whose life lies outside the limits of our own communion. [Applause.] It has been marked in many places, and most obviously of all in the magnificent and extraordinary scene which took place last Sunday afternoon in the Capitol of the Nation to which you belong.

"I feel, however, that, thankful as one is for that recognition of our common heritage, there is compatible with it a sense of peculiar satisfaction when we meet as brother-churchmen. Then one can without reserve speak in the fullest possible sense of our being together with one heart and one soul. That is the position in which I find myself and we find ourselves to-night.

"I recognize the timeliness of it all. Of course I am well aware that it is to the office that I hold, rather than to the individual, but with all my heart I reciprocate your good will and pray that the blessing of God may rest upon the great Church on this side of the Atlantic. [Applause.]

"The bond that links us is so close a one that one scarcely speaks of it as a bond at all, but regards it rather as an identity, a like resolve and an endeavor to carry that resolve out. [Applause.]

NEWS BY WAY OF NEW YORK.

"I had an object lesson given to me of that in a very marked way in an hour when I was called to the responsible office with which I am now intrusted. Some of you here may know of the fact. It was in the early days of January, 1903, that a few of my friends and myself were aware that I had been nominated to that great office, and the very first intimation of my nomination which reached me on the dawn of that January day—I was living in the country then—came not from London, not from Winchester, of which I was Bishop, but from New York. [Laughter.]

"A cordial, fraternal telegram of benediction and good-will from some of my dear friends and brethren, Bishops on this side, was the first intimation that came to me; and that impresses me as a striking object lesson as to American promptitude. And the interest taken on this side of the Atlantic in what passes within our Church at home is certainly not the least of the timeliness of heart of which I have had so many examples.

"As one tries to look backward and outward upon the Church in the midst of which I am spending these delightful weeks, one certainly finds that there have been somewhat startling contrasts in its history between one period and another. You welcome me to-night as Archbishop of Canterbury, as the first Archbishop of Canterbury who has ever crossed the Atlantic. But I am not the first Archbishop of Canterbury in connection with whom such a voyage was contemplated.

"Some of you may remember a touching entry in the diary of Archbishop Laud, written when he was in the Tower in the month of March, 1643, before his trial was begun. One day a terrible rumor reached him to the effect that it might be the resolve of the powers to send him as a delinquent to America. [Laughter.] It is a somewhat curious and apt subject for an ingenious historian to conjecture what might have been the result on either side if that resolve had been carried into effect.

"This at least is certain. The Archbishop was not mistaken in supposing that the reception he would have got would have differed in some peculiar respects from that of his successor to-day. [Laughter.]

"I think the reasons for the contrast are not hard to find and are in all seriousness profitable to contemplate. A change has come about because both parties in a great controversy take a very different view now from what they took then. We have learned the meaning of the larger charity that is compatible with the truest, deepest, and most faithful allegiance to that which in sacred things we hold dear.

The Archbishop here referred to a chapel in his own country, a window of which, he said, was placed there by churchmen from America, "descendants not merely of the godless Englishmen who brought religion from England to these shores, but inheritors of the best part of the traditions which were brought across the sea when those emigrants first came." This window, the Archbishop said, was an object lesson constantly before his eyes. He continued:

CHURCH FUNCTION IN AMERICA.

"It would be presumptuous for any man with no more knowledge than I have to generalize rashly about the particular function which our Church can perform in this land to-day. One part, surely, which our Church in the United States must play in the slowly rolling years is to bring into the national life that touch with the past which is so absolutely an essential part of the heritage of the Church to which we belong.

"The assertion and reassertion of the fact of that magnificent heritage without which our Church would not be what it is seems to me to be a not inconsiderable part of the grand service that can be rendered by the Episcopal Church in the United States to the people at large.

"By this I mean that reverent care for the past, that scrupulous adherence where possible to ancient ways not incompatible with the most fervent and buoyant belief in the days that are to come. In England I have sometimes thought that the care for the past among our ecclesiastics, at least, takes a strange form not always uplifting and not always particularly helpful.

"Why do Bishops in England garb themselves so strangely? It isn't with any idea that their garbs are beautiful to look upon or that they are comfortable, but they have simply failed to change them. They retain them owing to an almost petty conservatism. Over here you have set yourselves free from these shackles and the idea of these habiliments strikes you as somewhat strange. As regards our public men, they may be reckoned with the progressive rather than with the stationary objects in modern business.

"I do not wish it to be supposed that I am contrasting the Church of England with the Church in America; that is, that we in England have a care for the past while you in America have care for the future. Both of us, I trust and believe, are doing our utmost to care for both. Your new buoyancy and hopefulness and progress under conditions a little different from ours react in every turn to help us to be more hopeful and expectant. It is absolutely true to say that in not a few ways, theological, ecclesiastical, practical, you are giving us year by year helpful stimulus, and very often an inspiring lead.

"Part of this is due, I doubt not, to the independence of your development—independence in more ways than one—that Independence a record of which is brought home to us all when July comes around."

Bishop Potter, introduced as the next speaker, asked his hearers to stand, and with him drink to the health of Mrs. Davidson.

"The Archbishop of Canterbury," he said, "has not only condescended to pay us a visit, but to bring Mrs. Davidson with him. The toast is particularly fitting, since it was the Church of which he is the head which first recognized the relationship of the Christian home to the Christian life."

When the toast had been pledged the Bishop laughingly referred to the exclusive character of the Church Club, "but," said he, "I am sure that our distinguished guest will find here the purest expression of congregationalism to be gleaned on this side of the ocean.

"If it is exclusive, however, it has more than atoned for this characteristic to-night by the most becoming act in its history—the giving to this great body of your sons, your Grace, the privilege of seeing and hearing you.

The great majority of us here to-night are men in orders, who look up to you as incarnating the spirit and the law of the Church you represent with unshaken devotion. They recognize what the English Episcopate has done for the world. They realize the great ideas and ideals which the Church of England has ever nurtured, and which we need, most of all, in this great Republic.

"The law of life and love throbs in all American hearts to-day for our mother, who implanted it. God bless her! The Church of England is not weaker but stronger because the tie which binds us is spiritual and not legal. Such a bond is dearest of all."

Bishop Potter told a story illustrative of the kindly thoughtfulness of the Primate before he attained his present eminence. He pointed his tale with the recital of the hard time the Bishop of Louisiana once had at Lambeth Palace in gratifying his desire to smoke, and then reminded the Archbishop that when the speaker had visited him at Windsor the invitation to enjoy a cigar had been forthcoming at just the right time.

"An act such as this, beneficent and soothing and recognizing our weaknesses, has endeared his Grace to the Church on both sides of the ocean."

President Miller, at the end of Bishop Potter's address, said that it was customary, when a distinguished guest was to be entertained, to throw open the gates of the city to him.

"We have no gates in New York but Hell Gate," he declared. "So the custom cannot be carried out here, but our Mayor has come to greet our guest here, and to extend to him the heartfelt welcome of our citizens."

"I had supposed," said Mayor McClellan, when the laughter following the introduction had subsided, "that Hell Gate was indeed closed in the face of an occasion like this. There is no need that it should be opened.

"Your Grace, as a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States I am glad to have the opportunity to pay my respects to the Primate of the mother Church. As a Scotchman I am proud to welcome you. As Mayor of the City of New York I welcome you in behalf of our citizens."

In introducing President Butler of Columbia the toastmaster recalled the fact that there had been a time when a yearly report of the university had been rendered to the Primate of England.

"I don't know the nature of the report that Mr. Butler is to make your Grace after a lapse of 150 years," he said, "but there must be an abundance of material."

President Butler said he felt that the university which he served could rightfully claim the privilege of extending a word of welcome to the Archbishop, and reviewed the progress which America was making in higher education.

Archbishop Davidson spent yesterday morning in his room at the Waldorf-Astoria. Yesterday afternoon, with his wife, he visited the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Grant's Tomb, and other places in which he was interested.

This morning he is to deliver the opening address at the convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, which will be convened at 10 o'clock. Later he will inspect Columbia University, where an honorary degree will be conferred upon him.

JEROME CLERK GETS OUT.

Confessed to Shady Work—Jerome Praises Tammany Leader Hayes.

District Attorney Jerome said yesterday that Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes deserved credit for having discovered a money making game that was being played in the office by one of the District Attorney's clerks. This clerk, the District Attorney said, was Matthew F. Lynch, whose resignation had been demanded. Mr. Jerome said that Lynch admitted the truth of the charges made against him—that of accepting money from a saloon keeper for turning an excise case out of court.

The excise case was that against Michael Bamalio, a bartender. Clerk Lynch in looking over the complaint saw that an essential point was lacking and that the court would be compelled to dismiss it if a demurrer was interposed. Thereupon, according to the District Attorney, Lynch and another employe of the District Attorney's office called upon Saloon Keeper McAvoy and informed him that they would turn his bartender loose for $50. This McAvoy paid over to them, and Lynch and his companion then employed a lawyer at a small fee to interpose the demurrer to the excise complaint.

"When Mr. Hayes called to see me about it," said District Attorney Jerome, "he told me that the man who had received the money from McAvoy was appointed from his, Hayes's, district, and that he, Hayes, did not intend to stand for grafting. I had nothing to do with the appointing of Lynch. He was a hold-over under a civil service appointment."

VENEZUELAN'S ROMANCE ENDED WITH SUICIDE

Young von Bauditz Shoots Himself at the Endicott.

FELL IN LOVE ON VISIT HERE

Wealthy South American, of Titled Family, Was Despondent—Woman in Case Leaves the City.

Official inquiry into the death of Don Carlos Frederico von Bauditz, the head of a wealthy and distinguished Venezuelan family, who committed suicide at his apartments at the Hotel Endicott early yesterday morning, has rather more than indicated a shattered romance.

The young man, who was only twenty-six years old, ended his life by putting a bullet through his right temple. Before shooting himself he left a note declaring that he was about to end his life. The name of the woman in the case, Miss Vivian de Lemos, a young woman of French extraction, but regarding whom little beyond that is known, was revealed through letters in the dead man's possession.

While no suspicion attaches to her, Coroner Scholer, who is investigating the case, and the detectives of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station last night were trying to find her because they believe she might be in a position to throw some light on the immediate causes of the suicide. Miss De Lemos left the city a few hours after she learned of Bauditz's death.

Von Bauditz was in business with his brother at Neutrias, Venezuela. He came to this country about four weeks ago, accompanied by Don Felipe Molina, the scion of one of the oldest Spanish families in the South American republic and a couple of years his senior. They spent a few days here, then went to the St. Louis Exposition, and returned here three or four days ago. They were to have sailed for Venezuela on the Red D Line steamer Philadelphia at her next sailing.

Von Bauditz and Miss de Lemos, according to friends of the dead man, first saw each other several weeks ago, when the young Venezuelan was dining at the Café Martin. Miss de Lemos and a friend were dining at an adjoining table. Von Bauditz saw her and at once became infatuated with her. Then he managed to get an introduction to her.

Soon after that von Bauditz and his friend Molina left for St. Louis. On their return East he met Miss de Lemos again at Niagara Falls, where she had gone with a couple of women friends to spend Labor Day.

According to the story which Molina told the Coroner, von Bauditz had believed his affection for the young Frenchwoman reciprocated until last Sunday evening. On that evening von Bauditz and Molina again dined at the Café Martin. While they were at dinner Miss de Lemos entered with a man, and took a seat near them. The young Venezuelan at once grew deathly pale, and his friends had to restrain him from attacking the man who was in the young woman's company. He left the place shortly afterward, and after that, according to Molina, was despondent.

SAD BROWNSVILLE JULIET.

Her Mamma Caught Romeo Climbing to Fire Escape Trysting Place.

Out in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, at the corner of Broadway and Linden Street, a sad-faced bride stood with her face against the window pane of her mother's little flat last night, watching for her Williamsburg Romeo to climb the elevated railroad pillar opposite her home. This Juliet was Stella Hertzman, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the janitor of the building, and she was waiting for Eddie Carroll, who resides at 396 Shepherd Avenue.

"He cometh not," she said, and then learned from her mother that the police of Capt. Miles O'Reilly's precinct were responsible for Eddie's non-appearance.

Monday night, when she appeared on her fire-escape balcony, she saw her Romeo clinging to the steel ladder of the elevated railroad structure opposite her home, with outstretched arms, pleading for her to climb over to him, but her mother had discovered him and had prohibited the climb. Then, when the young Romeo had collected a crowd of men and women by his entreaties, the mother of the girl sent a messenger to the Ralph Avenue Police Station.

Capt. O'Reilly detailed Policeman Perry to drive the young husband down from his perch, while the bride's mother looked after the bride.

Carroll at the police station explained that his reason for climbing on the elevated structure was to see his bride, to whom he had been married on Wednesday last. He said when he brought her home to receive the parental blessing her father had chased him out of the house, while the girl's mother locked her up in a room, telling her proceedings would be commenced to have the marriage annulled. Thereupon, not having a ladder handy, Eddie did the Romeo act on the elevated railroad pillar.

Capt. O'Reilly advised Carroll that the only way to recover a lost bride was by writ of habeas corpus.

SHOT IN BROADWAY OFFICE.

William H. Lyon Wounded in Struggle with Robert L. Wrenn.

Robert L. Wrenn, a druggist, forty years old, of 154 West Sixty-eighth Street, went to the office of John B. Van Horne, a civil engineer, on the ninth floor of 29 Broadway, yesterday afternoon, and asked to see his wife, who is a stenographer there.

He was told by William H. Lyon, a civil engineer in the office, that he could not see Mrs. Wrenn.

Wrenn pulled out a revolver, and in a struggle two shots were fired, one of which hit Lyon in the fleshy part of the neck. Lyon was not seriously hurt, and walked to the Hudson Street Hospital. Wrenn was arrested. The wife hastened away without explaining, and the police with difficulty got anything out of Lyon, who said he did not believe Wrenn wanted to shoot him and that it was an accident.

The woman is described by other tenants of the building as being very pretty.

PRESIDENT FOR A WORLD LIFE.

Tells Art Congress Delegates the Nations Can Help Each Other.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—President Roosevelt received in the East Room of the White House to-day about seventy-five members of the International Congress of Arts and Sciences, headed by the President of the congress, Prof. Simon Newcomb, and Prof. Hugo Munsterberg.

In the course of a brief address to his visitors the President said:

"Perhaps the happiest feature of our modern world life is the steadily increasing recognition of the fact that it must be a world life; that no nation can hope for the fullest development if it confines itself exclusively within its own boundaries; that progress must come from a frank recognition of the fact that each nation can help others and can be helped by them.

"I feel that not only do associations and gatherings such as this mean much for the scientific, the artistic, the intellectual development of all the nations taking part in them, but I feel also that these gatherings all help to prepare the way for the time when the great rules of right and of equity shall prevail among the nations exactly as they now in highly civilized countries prevail among individuals."

ARRESTED ON SISTER'S CHARGE.

J. E. and C. F. Glimm Accused of Misappropriating $88,937 of Father's Estate.

Charged with the larceny of $88,937.35, John E. Glimm, sixty-one years old, of 98 Elliott Avenue, William's Bridge, and his brother, Christian F. Glimm, a commission merchant living at 249 West One Hundred and Eleventh Street, were locked up in Police Headquarters last night on the complaint of their sister, Mrs. Margaret C. Weinholz of 691 East One Hundred and Fortieth Street.

The men were arrested on warrants issued by Magistrate Mayo in the Tombs Court yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Kresel drew up the complaint, in which it is alleged by Mrs. Weinholz that when her father died, in 1888, he left an estate valued at $350,000, which, she alleges, was to be divided equally between her two brothers and herself. Since her father's death, she states, she has only received $12,000 of her portion. The last amount, Mrs. Weinholz says, she received about three years ago, and it was only $1,000.

In her complaint Mrs. Weinholz alleges that the brothers have converted her share of the estate to their own use and figures the amount due her and her sister to be $88,937.35. In April of this year an order was entered in the Surrogates' Court, directing the brothers to pay the trust fund to the City Chamberlain. The brothers, it is alleged, have neglected to follow the order, and Mrs. Weinholz finally took the matter to the District Attorney's office.

John E. Glimm is sixty-one years old and is married. He has four daughters and two sons. His brother, Christian, is fifty-three years old and has one son, Christian F. Glimm, Jr.

BUFFALO BRIBERY INQUIRY.

Grand Jury May Indict Three Aldermen —Others in Danger.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Sept. 27.—Whether this city is to experience a revolution in municipal reform similar to that which overtook St. Louis, may be decided when the Grand Jury reports next Thursday. It is an accepted belief that three Aldermen are under indictment, charged with accepting bribes. There is a well-founded suspicion also that eight other Aldermen or ex-Aldermen are liable to be indicted.

The inquiry now going on is the direct result of an attempt to extort money from John Harrer, sewer contractor. Harrer's bid for the construction of a sewer in Ferry Street was $38,800. It was entered in 1898, but the work was not to be done until 1901. After awarding the contract to Harrer, the Sewer Committee rescinded its action and asked for new bids.

Before doing so, however, two Aldermen, whose names have not been divulged, went to Harrer and told him that for $4,500 the committee would let him have the contract. Otherwise he need not expect it. The conversation was overheard by a member of the Harrer Company.

When Harrer refused to pay the $4,500 new bids were asked for on the ground that Harrer was irresponsible, and the contract was afterward awarded to Dark & Co. for $55,900. Harrer since has been ignored as a city bidder, and he and his secretary have told the Grand Jury that upon another sewer contract they actually paid an Aldermanic committee $2,500.

Another instance of bribery relates to a private sewer to a piano keyboard manufactory. Application was made for the construction of the sewer and the manager of the company was told that it would be built if the committee received $1,000. Two Aldermen entered the business house and this amount, it is said, was paid to them in the presence of two witnesses. Corroborative testimony has been presented to the Grand Jury in both the Harrer and Piano Keyboard Company's cases, five Aldermen being involved in the latter and three in the former transaction.

Action has been taken also by the District Attorney in connection with the charge that high officials of the Police Department have been selling mining stock to concert hall and saloonkeepers. Several witnesses have been called, but it is not related whether any evidence incriminating officials has been given.

Superintendent of Police Bull declares that the mining stock in question, of which he owns a large number of shares, has good value, and that no attempt has been made, to his knowledge, to force any one to buy it.

THE KAISER WILHELM II. BRINGS BIG SHIPLOAD

Vanderbilts, Whitneys, Burdens, and Goelets Among Passengers.

JOHN F. CARROLL BACK HOME

Count von Hatzfeldt, En Route for Japan, Expects Long Conflict—Pennarini Here to Sing Parsifal.

The North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. arrived early yesterday morning, with every suite and every cabin taken. The names of passengers made a small book in size, and among them appeared many names well known in diplomatic, financial, social, and dramatic circles. A great crowd of people welcomed the big liner when she tied up at her Hoboken pier, and when the army of passengers landed the customs officers found the hardest job in the line of baggage examination before them that has fallen to their lot this season.

William K. Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, and Mrs. Borden-Harriman were a conspicuous group among the passengers. This party occupied a table in the dining saloon to themselves, at the head of which sat William K. Vanderbilt.

Count von Hatzfeldt, formerly an attaché of the German Embassy at Tokio, was another of the Kaiser Wilhelm II.'s passengers. The Count left Japan last April, and is returning to that country on private business. When seen on the pier and asked his opinion of the situation in the Far East he said:

"I think that the conflict is going to be a very long one. The fact is no one can predict when it will end. The Japanese are a fine people and a most tenacious race. They have a magnificent set of officers, both naval and military, who are thoroughly capable of dealing with the situation before them. I am personally acquainted with both the Marquis Oyama and Gen. Kuroki, both of whom are brilliant soldiers. However, do not disparage the Russians. They, too, are a tenacious people, and in Gen. Kuropatkin have a great soldier."

John F. Carroll, ex-leader of Tammany Hall, and Maurice Untermyer came in the big Kaiser. Mr. Untermyer returns greatly improved in health. George Burroughs Torrey, the American artist, who was another passenger, has been in Greece, where he painted a portrait of King George. He said that the position of American artists abroad was improving, and that already the French considered the Americans their greatest rivals.

Alois Pennarini, the German opera singer, who is to interpret the title rôle in Col. Savage's English production of "Parsifal," arrived on the Kaiser, and said he would begin rehearsing at once. Although he does not speak English, he will sing the part in that tongue. Miss Maxine Elliott was another passenger on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., as was also Alfred Hertz, who will conduct the orchestra in Col. Savage's production of "Parsifal."

The Prince and Princess Colloredo-Mansfeld of Vienna, who are going to the St. Louis Exposition, were also on board the liner, as were also the Marquis and Marquise Pinar del Rio of Cuba and Baron Louis von Kubinsky. Others on board were Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch and Miss Wilhelmine Busch, who have been summering at their castle on the Rhine; A. J. Drexel, Robert Hoe, Mrs. Marcus Daly, Mr. and Mrs. Claus Spreckels and Miss Spreckels, and Mrs. J. A. Bostwick.

BAY STATE WILL MAKE APOLOGY TO MR. GURNEY

Judge Phelps Instructed to Remit British Diplomat's Fine.

SECRETARY ADEE'S MESSAGE

Attorney General Moody Asks for Investigation—Judge Willing to Make Amends.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—Acting Secretary of State Alvey A. Adee sent a message to Gov. Bates to-day informing him that, according to the British Embassy's statement, Judge Phelps of Lenox was not within his rights in fining Third Secretary Gurney at Lee for overspeeding his automobile. The Massachusetts Executive is asked to take such action in regard to Judge Phelps as may be deemed proper.

Gov. Bates is out of the city, and the message was received by Lieut. Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr., who immediately conferred with Assistant Attorney General Nash. The message was as follows:

British Embassy informs me that Mr. Gurney, Third Secretary that Embassy, charged with driving automobile at excessive speed, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff and taken, after entering protest under threats of force, to the court at Lee, when, in spite of his protest, he was sentenced by H. C. S. Phelps, Special Justice of the Lee Police Court, to pay a fine of $25, and on his declaring that he could not admit the right of the court to sentence him another fine of $25 for contempt of court and to go to prison if he did not pay.

Section 4,063, Revised Statutes of the United States, declares that any writ or process issued out or prosecuted by any person in any State court or Judge or Justice whereby the person of any public Minister of a foreign State is arrested or imprisoned, shall be deemed void.

Section 4,064 declares that any person obtaining or prosecuting such writ or process and every officer concerned in executing it shall be deemed violator of the law of Nations and subject to imprisonment and fine.

I have to request that you take such action as may be proper in this case.

Acting Gov. Guild transmitted Mr. Adee's message to Judge Phelps, and added:

The Assistant Attorney General informs me that if the facts are as above stated you have in your endeavor to enforce the laws of Massachusetts for the security of life upon our highways committed in this particular case a grave breach of international law. May I ask you to telegraph me at once if Mr. Gurney was arrested and fined in spite of protest? Other channels of redress are open in case of the violation of Massachusetts laws by the diplomatic representatives of other nations. Therefore, if fine was imposed and collected, the Commonwealth will apologize.

The fine must be remitted, and I need not suggest to one so respected as you the personal amend that you will, of course, desire to make to Mr. Gurney for the error in method adopted by your court in this unusual case. Kindly forward me affidavit of the evidence of any breach of Massachusetts laws.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 27.—Judge Henry C. Phelps has gone to Boston to confer with the State authorities on his action. After a long telephone conversation with Lieut. Gov. Guild to-day Judge Phelps left for Boston on an evening train and will see the Acting Governor to-morrow.

In Lenox, where Mr. Gurney has spent the Summer, the cottagers feel that the action of the Secretary was hasty. Lenox cottagers were free to say to-day that in their opinion Mr. Gurney lacked tact. In fact, nearly every one discussing the case confessed a feeling in favor of the Lee Justice's action.

Lenox long has been opposed to the automobile, and it has only been this season that the motor cars have been numerous in Lenox. The sentiment against the automobile may have something to do with the censure of Mr. Gurney for appealing to the State Department on the case. Cottagers say that the matter might have been satisfactorily adjusted if Mr. Gurney had taken the advice of the court and engaged counsel.

Judge Phelps said to-day:

"I was dispensing justice according to the laws of the Commonwealth. I don't recognize the right of the Secretary of any foreign Ambassador to break the laws of this State. I don't hesitate to say that I would treat the British Ambassador the same way if he were breaking the laws of this State."

He added, however, that he was willing to apologize if he made a mistake.

"This is a little matter," he said. "The papers have not reported it properly. The Secretary was not obliged to sit in the dock with other prisoners. He did not enter the dock until all other cases were disposed of.

"If I find that I have made a mistake, I will gladly apologize. I did only what I believed to be right."

Special Justice Phelps was appointed about six years ago. He is a manufacturer. His duties at the court at Lee take but little of his time, as Judge Casey regularly sits on the bench. Of late years it has been the custom of State Executives to appoint none but lawyers to such positions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The State Department to-day called on the Department of Justice to take action in the Gurney matter, and the Attorney General, at the request of the State Department, telegraphed United States Attorney Moulton, at Boston, to take the necessary steps to secure Mr. Gurney in all his legal rights, to make a full investigation of the facts, and to report the matter to the department at his earliest convenience.

URGES EFFORT TO STOP WAR.

American Bar Association Thinks This Country Should Act.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—At to-day's session of the American Bar Association the reports of the standing Committees on International Law, on Jurisprudence and Law Reform, and on Commercial Law were read.

The report of the Committee on International Law takes up the Russo-Japanese war. It says:

It is not for your committee to pass judgment upon the merits of this war; but we do submit that the Japanese claim is of a character that affords just grounds for mediation under the second title of The Hague convention. The third article declares that "the signatory powers think it to be useful that one or more powers which have no part in the conflict may offer of their own volition, so far as circumstances may make it appropriate, their friendly offices or their mediation to the States engaged in the conflict." The United States might, as it seems to your committee, very properly avail itself of the provisions of The Hague convention and make an endeavor to put an end to the further shedding of blood in Manchuria.

After the reading of the report a resolution was adopted concurring in the resolution of the National Arbitration conference at Washington in January last.

FOR A SUBWAY HOLIDAY.

Mayor May Ask All Business Houses to Close.

Mayor McClellan will, in all probability, issue a proclamation declaring Oct. 27 the date for the opening of the subway, a public holiday, and asking all business houses to close for at least half a day, that the occasion may be fittingly observed. This is on the authority of Alderman Doull of the committee appointed to arrange for the celebration.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment will act on Friday upon the $50,000 appropriation asked by the Board of Aldermen for the proper commemoration of the opening, and the Aldermanic committee, of which Mr. Doull is a member, will probably meet Monday or Tuesday and formally adopt the programme which has already been outlined.

"There isn't any question about the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment," said Mr. Doull yesterday. "The money for the celebration will be provided. I am unable to give any estimate just now of how much it will cost. The Williamsburg Bridge opening cost $19,800, and was confined to one place. The plan of the subway celebration is on a much larger scale, and if the affair is properly carried out $50,000 will be none too much."

CAR KILLS LITTLE GIRL.

Motorman, Arranging Sign, Did Not See Her.

Motorman Henry Dubois, who is new to the work, started to take an empty car down Lexington Avenue from the Ninety-eighth Street barns late yesterday afternoon to meet the homebound evening rush. He started his car slowly, and then busied himself with adjusting the front gate and arranging the sign, as he did not want a complaint from an Inspector.

As his attention was thus distracted, at Ninety-eighth Street his car ran down little Edna Ross, the daughter of Edward M. Ross of 127 East Ninety-eighth Street, who is employed by a music-publishing firm. The little girl was going across the avenue with a penny to buy a candy apple. The front wheels passed over her legs and pinned her down until a crowd of men lifted the car up.

The little girl was conscious all the time, and when a doctor was working over her, pending the arrival of an ambulance, she said:

"Please make me live until papa and mamma come."

The girl was rushed to the Harlem Hospital, where the doctors tried their best to save the child's life. They found it necessary, though, to amputate both her legs, and she died soon after the operation. Her mother and grandmother saw her while she was alive. Her father could not be reached in time.

FRENCH ADMIRAL A VISITOR.

At Navy Yard and City Hall—One French Hurry Call.

Admiral Rivet, commander of the French American squadron, who arrived here on Monday on the cruiser Dupleix from Cape Breton, paid official visits with his aide to both the Mayor and the navy yard yesterday. At the navy yard he was received by a battalion of marines and a gun salute for his rank. Usually foreign navy officers go to the navy yard on one of the boats from the ship to which they are attached, but Admiral Rivet drove there in a carriage.

He was officially welcomed to the Port of New York by Rear Admiral Rodgers, and with him viewed the new battleship Connecticut. He then made an official call upon Rear Admiral Barker, an old friend, on the Kearsarge, and the battery of that ship fired a salute.

When the Admiral went to the City Hall the Mayor met him in the large reception room. After the formal exchange of courtesies the Mayor and the Admiral chatted together in French.

The Mayor will return the call to-morrow at 3:30. His secretary, John H. O'Brien, has been studying French dialogue ever since the cruiser Troude arrived in the harbor a week ago. He has already expressed a dislike for irregular French verbs.

ARRESTED FOR LAUGHING.

Policeman Resented Guider's Merriment at His Effort to Do His Duty.

James Guider, who says that he is the boxing instructor at the New York Athletic Club and a trainer for James J. Corbett, was arrested at Thirty-third Street and Sixth Avenue yesterday afternoon and locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Station on a charge of disorderly conduct. The first charge made against him by the policeman who arrested him was that he had been guilty of laughing at the policeman in the discharge of his duty.

Sergt. Wilson refused to entertain this charge, so the policeman changed it to one of refusing to move on when ordered to do so and causing a crowd to collect. According to Guider's story he was standing at the corner in front of Trainor's Hotel, where he lives, when Policeman Ahearn ordered a truckman to get over to the other side of the street. He admits that he laughed at the attempts of the policeman to enforce his order.

He declared that he had a right to be standing where he was, because he was in front of his own home. He was bailed out soon.

BAY STATE NAMES CANDIDATES.

Foss, Reciprocity Advocate, Wins a Republican Nomination.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Both parties selected many of their Congressional, County, and legislative candidates for the November election to-day, in caucuses held jointly in twenty-two cities and two towns, where the Luce joint caucus law is in force, and separately by the Democrats throughout the balance of the State. The Republicans will complete their nominations to-morrow.

Eugene N. Foss, the leading reciprocity advocate of the State, won a sharp contest with three other Republican candidates in the Eleventh District, defeating Stephen O'Meara, formerly editor of The Boston Journal, his nearest competitor, by 724 votes. Mr. Foss again will be opposed by Congressman John A. Sullivan, who was renominated by the Democrats without opposition.

In the Tenth District the Republicans nominated J. E. Crawford. In this district Congressman William S. McNary was renominated by the Democrats, defeating Joseph F. O'Connell, his only opponent, by a good margin. In the Ninth District Congressman John A. Kelliher was renominated by the Democrats without opposition. The Republicans nominated Walter S. Sears.

BEQUEST OF $150,000.

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Kelly Leaves That Sum to Chicago University.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—By the will of the late Mrs. Elizabeth G. Kelly the University of Chicago receives $150,000. Other bequests are as follows:

Baptist Religious Society of Town of Tully, Onondaga County, N. Y., $5,000; Margaret Green, Cortland County, N. Y., $2,000; George T. Green, $5,000; Martha Green Brandt, $5,000; Allen Andrew Green, Syracuse, N. Y., $5,000; Rose Green, $5,000; Cortland County Home for Aged Women, Homer, N. Y., $2,000; Columbian Society of Lafayette, N. Y., $1,000.

The remainder of the estate is to be divided equally among the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago; the Syracuse Home for Women and Children, Syracuse, N. Y., and the Women's Christian Association, Syracuse, N. Y.

DR. LORIMER'S WILL FILED.

The will of the Rev. George C. Lorimer, recent pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, was filed for probate in the Surrogates' Office yesterday. The will is in the dead pastor's handwriting, and after providing for the payment of all his debts says: "My mortal remains are to be disposed of in any way agreeable to my heirs, either by cremation or burial, and at as slight expense as consistent and decent."

All the estate of the testator is bequeathed to his wife, Arabella C. Lorimer, who is named as sole executrix. The Rev. Dr. Lorimer died on Sept. 8 at Aix-les-Baines, France. His will is not dated.

VOTE FOR 400 MORE POLICE.

Aldermen Approve Increase of Force—Goodman's Objection Subsides.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday gave Police Commissioner McAdoo his 400 additional patrolmen, despite the protest of Alderman Goodman, who said that he had heard that the move was an ante-election scheme to make votes, and should be held in abeyance until a public hearing should disclose the need of the new men.

The weight of Tammany influence was so great, however, that Mr. Goodman withdrew his opposition to the immediate granting of the request, and later voted for it. The only Alderman who stuck it out in opposing the increase, after the long discussion, was Gen. Daniel E. Sickles.

The question came up on the favorable report of the Committee on Police to appropriate $160,000 for the services of the 400 additional men for the ensuing six months. Alderman McCall urged immediate consideration.

"With the lawlessness which we hear so much of," he said, "it is necessary that additional policemen should be provided without delay. We know that the three-platoon system is a success, and nothing should be done to force the Commissioner to go back to two platoons."

Alderman Meyers thought the Police Commissioner should be asked for further details. He believed that the trouble lay in the number of illegal details. President Haffen said there was need for more patrolmen in the Bronx, and Alderman Morris said at least 400 additional patrolmen were needed above the Harlem River. Then Alderman Goodman sprung his charge that the increase was a political move, and Gen. Sickles voiced his belief that the existing force was mismanaged.

Alderman Dowling took the floor in favor of the increase. Then the public hearing was voted down, and the vote for the increase was taken.

The board referred the request of the New York Automobile Company to be allowed to take on and discharge passengers at Madison Square back to the Committee on Laws and Legislation.

An issue of $25,000 special revenue bonds for repairs of the Yorkville and Jefferson Market Courts was approved.

The request of Bridge Commissioner Best that he be allowed to modify the contract made by his predecessor in office with the Williams Engineering Company, relative to the construction of power houses and elevator towers on the piers of the Blackwell's Island Bridge, was referred to the Finance Committee for a report. Mr. Best wants to settle with the Williams Company for work already done, leaving out the power houses and towers, for $345,000. The contract, including the work specified, called for $385,000.

The board then adjourned out of respect to the memory of ex-Mayor Edson.

SCHWAB TO SUPPLY JAPAN.

Armor Plate Contracts Placed with Bethlehem Company.

Charles M. Schwab secured, so it was learned yesterday, some very valuable contracts for armor plate from the Japanese Government for the Bethlehem Steel and Shipbuilding Company, the successor to the United States Shipbuilding Company. Mr. Schwab is at present on the Pacific Coast, and in his absence official confirmation of the closing of the contracts or of their size and nature was not forthcoming. It is understood, however, that the contracts are the heaviest ever given to an American concern by a foreign Government. The officials are reticent regarding the contracts, because it is feared that Russia might make efforts to intercept the shipments, which would, of course, be confiscated as contraband of war if taken.

Wall Street also heard rumors yesterday that similar contracts had been made by Mr. Schwab with Russia, but this rumor was found to be without foundation. Aside from all other considerations it was pointed out that the Russian Government could buy armor plate much more cheaply in Germany, from which country its transportation to the Russian shipyards would be fraught with much less danger.

GIVES UP HUMAN TYPES.

Legacy of $14,000 Woos Bellevue Interpreter from His Avocation.

Ermingildo Zordan, the French interpreter at Bellevue Hospital, who secured the position six months ago by his offer to do the work for nothing for the privilege of studying human nature at the big institution, told the hospital authorities yesterday that he had received notification by mail of a bequest of $14,000 left to him by the will of an aunt who died recently in Switzerland.

Zordan says that he will soon give up his observation of human type at the Bellevue and return to Europe. He intends, upon his return, to make a tour of Asia Minor. Zordan has a brother on the General Staff of the French army. His aunt's fortune, of 15,000,000f., he says, was divided between himself, his brother, and various French religious institutions.

WOMAN KILLED BY TRUCK.

Stepped Out of Car's Way—Landed Under Horse's Feet.

A woman whose identity the police were unable to establish was run over and killed last night by a horse and truck at Myrtle and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn. The woman attempted to cross the street, but stopped when she saw a car bearing down upon her. When the car passed she stepped from behind it right in front of a horse and truck, driven by Peter Walsh, 26 years old, of 53A Wilson Street. The horse knocked her down, and the wheels of the truck passed over her body.

When picked up the woman was insensible, and she died while being taken to the Cumberland Street Hospital. She appeared to be about thirty years old. In her pocket was found a pawn ticket issued to "F. Lehman."

SQUADRON A POLO TEAM DEFEATS GREAT NECK

Game Attracts Large Crowd to Van Cortlandt Park.

NEILSON AN ACCURATE HITTER

Handicap Enables Troopers to Win by Score of 10 to 7—Visitors Fail to Play Strong Team Game.

Before a large crowd of polo enthusiasts and others who were drawn to Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon, the Squadron A and Great Neck polo teams met in the first match of the squadron's tournament for the Squadron A cups. The game was well contested, and, profiting by their handicap of 6 goals, the Squadron team won by the score of 10 goals to 7. The winners will meet the Rumson polo team at the same place to-morrow in the final match for the trophies.

The comparatively slow play of the Great Neck team was a disappointment to those who had looked for a fast game from the start. Maxwell Stevenson, who has been doing good work this season at Meadow Brook, and James Cooley, one of the Westchester Country Club stars, were on the Great Neck team, yet they could barely do more than hold their own against the Squadron. Douglas and Leavitt J. Hunt played well up to their limit, and Neilson, by his accurate hitting when near the goal posts, contributed materially to the victory of the local troopers.

Honors were even in the first period, Stevenson getting the first goal after a quick run down the field in less than a minute. J. H. Hunt then scored after nearly seven minutes of play.

Great Neck put more vim into its play in the next period, but found the defensive work of the Squadron almost as strong as a stone wall to break through, and despite their best play could only make two goals, Cooley and McClure scoring. To the surprise of the polo experts, the Squadron completely outplayed the visitors in the third period, getting three goals to two for Great Neck.

Great Neck did some of its best work in the final period, but it was too late to change the result of the game, and the Squadron showed no signs of weakening in its team work. Stevenson and Cooley made two goals, while the home team did not score.

The line-up and summary:

STARTED LIFE ANEW AT 79.

Thought Begging in Fifth Avenue Was the Bottom of the Ladder.

John J. Moyersant, who has gray hair, and confesses to seventy-nine years, told Magistrate Flammer yesterday that he had found Philadelphia too slow, and had come to this city, imbued with an ambition to begin life anew, and scoffing at the notion that his years might prove to be in the nature of a handicap.

"For some time," he said, "I have been an inmate of the Old People's Home in Philadelphia, and seventeen years ago the last of my family died. Lately I chafed under the restraint, and decided to get out and hustle."

"But you have no prospects. What do you propose to do here?" asked the Magistrate.

"Anything, your Honor. I am willing to start at the bottom of the ladder."

"You must have discovered the fountain of youth," observed the court.

At this point Detective Sergeants Brennan and Barry said they had watched the old man, and had seen him solicit alms in Fifth Avenue.

"He got 50 cents from a guest in front of the Holland House, and that's all the money he had about him," asserted Sergt. Barry.

"He's doing well for a beginning," remarked the Magistrate.

The prisoner promised that he would go back to Philadelphia, and was allowed to go.

Author of "A Romance of Two Worlds," "Thelma," "The Master Christian," etc.

The English publisher writes:

"The book promises an extraordinarily large sale. Our country orders actually exceed those of any previous work of the author. After having read the book, we believe it is just the kind of story which will be thoroughly appreciated by the general public on both sides of the Atlantic."

The novel is much on the lines of "Thelma."

A PEACE MOVE REPORTED.

Italian Premier May Discuss Mediation with German Chancellor.

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 28.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Geneva states that a visit to be paid by the Italian Premier, Signor Giolitti, to the German Chancellor, Count von Bülow, is connected with the cause of peace in the Far East.

Signor Giolitti, it is added, intends to visit all the European Courts.

ROME, Sept. 27.—Much interest is taken here in the report that Premier Giolitti is to meet Count von Bülow at Homburg.

One of the many reasons that might prompt such a meeting is discussion of mediation in the interest of peace in the Far East.

According to the Giornal d'Italia, the Italian Government, in conjunction with Great Britain, would be willing to approach Russia with a proposition looking toward peace, but it wishes to have assurances that in pursuing such a course it would have the support of Italy's associates in the triple alliance.

The support of France, according to the paper, was asked in the course of a recent interview at Nice between Signor Luzatti, the Italian Minister of the Treasury, and M. Rouvier, the French Minister of Finance.

King of Saxony Ill.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—Although reports from abroad that the King of Saxony is dangerously ill were officially denied yesterday, a Court bulletin issued to-day says the difficulty which the King experiences in breathing increases, with repeated spasm-like periods, that yield reluctantly to remedies.

British Leave Lhasa.

LANG, Tibet, Sept. 27.—The British expedition to Tibet left Lhasa on Sept. 23, and is now marching in the direction of the Chumbi Valley.

In bidding farewell to Brig. Gen. Macdonald, commander of the British military force, the venerable Regent invoked the blessing of Heaven on his head for sparing the monasteries from violation and presented a golden image of Buddha to him.

Prince Shot While Hunting.

DRESDEN, Sept. 27.—While hunting partridges to-day, Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin was shot by Prince Othon of Schoenburg-Waldenburg and was wounded in both knees and one hand.

Luckily, the gun was loaded only with birdshot. Nevertheless, the Duke will be confined to a hospital for several days.

THE LAST HOPE
By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Illustrated, $1.50

THE ATHENÆUM (London) says:
"Looking back on his work one would say that 'The Last Hope' is one of his very best novels. It is not often given to a novelist to lay down the pen while at his highest."

THE GLOBE (New York) says:
"In artistic finish, in dramatic power, in sheer audacity, 'The Last Hope' is not merely the best of all Mr. Merriman's novels. It is the best story based on French history that has appeared in the last five years."

STALWART EASILY WON $15,000 HINDOO STAKES

Whitney Bred Colt Galloped Over Opponents in Last Quarter.

BROOMSTICK WAS SECOND

Right and True and Queen Rose Were Gravesend Winners at Long Odds —Alan-a-Dale's Handicap.

Stalwart stood out as the "luck" of the E. R. Thomas stable at the Gravesend race track yesterday, and rescued the establishment from what was otherwise a disastrous afternoon of speculation; his victory in the fifteen-thousand-dollar Hindoo Stakes just about squaring accounts for the stable losses on Flyback, badly beaten in the handicap for two-year-olds, and Dimple, left at the post for the third race.

The Hindoo Stakes was conspicuously the feature of the day, the race being the most valuable of the late season for three-year-olds, over the trying course of a mile and about three-quarters, the start of the race being at the short six furlongs post at the head of the back stretch, and the distance taking the horses twice past the judges' stand. Four horses went to the post, that number, however, including Stalwart, rated now about the best of his age, in spite of the fact that he was weeded out of the W. C. Whitney stable a year ago, and Broomstick, holder of the world's record for a mile and a quarter. Both of these horses had up full weight, while Stalwart's stable companion, St. Valentine, ran with 118 pounds and Ormonde's Right made up the field, carrying in fact 108 pounds, which included two pounds overweight. Throughout the betting the Thomas entry, Stalwart and St. Valentine, ruled favorites, at about even money, though for a great part of the time the entry was at odds on, while Ormonde's Right, in view of his light weight, was a heavily backed second choice at a price averaging about 8 to 5, Broomstick being the outsider.

The race was all that might have been desired for a mile and a half, and then it developed into a procession. Stalwart, last until the turn for the stretch was begun, then going to the front. The start was made with St. Valentine the first to show, Ormonde's Right taking second place at the lifting of the barrier, while Broomstick was last, but in the first few yards Stalwart was taken back to wait, and Broomstick went on and settled into third place just behind Ormonde's Right. Past the stand for the first time and around the circular track to the far turn St. Valentine held his place as pacemaker, Broomstick moving up on the back stretch, and as the turn on the far side of the track was made taking second place from Ormonde's Right, and a little later moving up and taking the lead from St. Valentine. The moment that Broomstick passed him St. Valentine dropped back beaten, and as he went back Stalwart moved forward, and just as the last turn was made joined Broomstick in front. From that time the race was ended practically, for Broomstick was driven to the whip the instant that Stalwart went up to him, while the Thomas colt simply galloped away from him. All through the stretch Stalwart was hard held, and finished first in a canter, four lengths away from Broomstick, which, ridden out and under the whip for a part of the distance down the stretch, beat the light-weighted Ormonde's Right by a length for the place.

In the handicap for two-year-olds, Czaraphine led all the distance and won ridden out by a half length from Derry, which under bad riding ran a most excellent race. In the last race of the day Alan-a-Dale, the top weight and favorite at odds on, won with great ease after Jack Martin made the pace into the last quarter. In all of the remaining races the favorites were beaten. Summary:

VANDERBILT HORSES WIN.

Reginald and Mrs. Vanderbilt Drive in Readville Show.

READVILLE, Mass., Sept. 27.—The New England Breeders' meeting opened at the track to-day with a good attendance of society people from Boston and other cities. The events were all contested by amateurs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt won most of the honors in the horse show ring, his horses taking no less than four firsts and two second prizes. He handled the lines behind all of his horses with the exception of Class 29, in which Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt drove the brown gelding Herald, and was awarded the blue ribbon. In the event for pairs Mr. Vanderbilt showed Amazement and Astonishment.

NEW TROTTING RECORDS.

Established in Second Day's Races of the Grand Circuit.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—The second day of the Oakley Park Grand Circuit Meeting had a good crowd in attendance. The track was in fine condition, and several records were broken. In the Horse Review Futurity Stake for foals of 1901, purse $7,000, Alta Axworth, after finishing sixth to Princess Athel in the first heat, and second to Grace Bond in the second heat, won the race in three straight heats, making a world's record for the best five heats ever trotted by three-year-olds, as well as a world's record for the fastest fifth heat ever trotted by three-year-olds.

E. E. Smathers's John M. established a new record in the 2:05 pace, winning the second heat in 2:03¾. This breaks his own record of 2:04¼, and is the fastest mile paced in a race this season. Summary:

BROOKLYN CLUB FINED $100.

For Playing Against Team with Ineligible Men—Cases Held Over.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 27.—The National Baseball Commission, consisting of August Herrmann, President; Ban Johnson, President of the American League, and H. C. Pulliam, President of the National League, met here to-day and passed on contested and disputed cases in the drafting list. John E. Bruce, Secretary, reported a long list that had been put over from the meeting of Sept. 1 for further evidence. The most notable case was Manager Hanlon's drafting for Brooklyn of the Baltimore team. Others who had drafted men were asked to show receipts. The commission also took up cases where more than one club had drafted the same players.

President Johnson inquired why an alleged agreement for a post-season series between the National and American League pennant winners was not observed.

Brooklyn was fined $100 for playing an exhibition game with the Youngstown (Ohio) Club on Aug. 26.

The charge against the New York National Club for playing with Hoboken while having been ineligible, Sept. 18, was referred for further evidence.

The claim of the New York American Club for Mulligan and Vincent was referred for further evidence.

Golfers Give E. C. Converse a Cup.

A silver loving cup was presented to E. G. Converse, President of the Fairfield County Golf Club, near Greenwich, Conn., by the members of the club at a dinner on Monday evening. Nearly eighty members were present at the entertainment, and there was plenty of fun and speechmaking, the latter entirely informal. Charles A. Moore as toastmaster made the presentation, Julian Curtiss gave a brief history of the club, and other addresses were made by Senator Clark of Montana, Col. Robert S. Baker, William T. Bouchelle, Simeon Ford, and George P. Sheldon.

NEW YORKS WON BY CHICAGO'S POOR PLAYS

With Exception of One Inning Ames Held Western Men Safe.

AMERICANS GAINED ON BOSTON

Greater New Yorks Made Lively Finish and Beat Detroit in Eleventh Inning.

Western teams had the best record in the games played yesterday in the National and American Leagues, the victories standing five to three. The New York Nationals, through a combination of errors and wild pitching, had no difficulty in disposing of the Chicagos, while in the meeting with St. Louis the Brooklyns sustained their ninety-second defeat. Boston gave the champions a two to one beating, and Philadelphia just escaped a shut-out. In the American League the Greater New Yorks made a lively finish and beat Detroit in the eleventh inning. Boston lost to Cleveland, thus making a difference of only four points for the lead between the Bostons and Griffith's men. Summary follows:

Chicago's Errors Give Victory to New York by 5 to 2.

Delightful Autumn weather greeted the New York and Chicago teams at the Polo Grounds yesterday, but neither this nor the fact that the Western team, which has been for the greater part of the season the runner-up for the championship, would wind up the season's series with McGraw's men on this trip, attracted nearly the attendance of other games in this city between the two nines, the total number of "rooters" who saw the contest being officially placed at 3,800. New York won, making the one hundred and fourth victory, which eclipses Pittsburg's record of 1902.

The playing was of a very ordinary description, without a single redeeming feature. In the last inning the spectacle was presented of Dahlen hitting a rather long ball to shortstop and jogging toward first base, although he might have beaten the ball, and in another instance Casey was allowed to second base unmolested. Both pitchers were batted rather freely, but Ames had the better of Lundgren, because with men on bases he usually succeeded in preventing runs. Twelve Chicagoans were left on bases and eight struck out, including Capt. Chance. Ames was hit hard in only one inning, the sixth, when two doubles, a single, a wild pitch, and an out resulted in two runs, one of which was earned.

In addition to the absence of Bresnahan, who is now at his home in Toledo, and will not play any more this year, Gilbert had a day off, and his place was taken by Dunn. All interest was lost in the game after the New Yorks had made four runs in the first inning, only one of which was earned. A base on balls, a force out, a wild throw by O'Neill and Barrett's single to left pass him were responsible for all the runs but Donlin's. Tinker's fumble and two singles gave the home team its fifth tally. The score:

ST. LOUIS, 4; BROOKLYN, 2.

For eight innings at Washington Park yesterday it looked as if the Brooklyns were to again be shut out, but in the ninth Hanlon's nine managed to bring two men over the plate. The St. Louis men tallied four runs during the nine innings off Scanlon and some loose fielding. The new men on the St. Louis team—Murch, Hill, and Butler—all played well. The score:

BOSTON, 2; PITTSBURG, 1.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Boston won to-day's game through Wilhelm's clever pitching and fast and heady plays at critical moments. Lynch was also effective except in the seventh inning. Abbaticchio, Lauterborn, and Ritchey made the feature plays. Score:

THE PRESIDENT'S PEACE CONFERENCE.

There are some indications that the President's zeal with reference to the calling of a new peace conference at The Hague has caused him to overlook certain preliminary proceedings which would save his proposition from severe criticism. We assumed when his announcement was made to the delegates of the Interparliamentary Union of his intention to issue the invitation that he had taken the usual precaution to consult informally with at least the chief Powers as to their views of the desirableness and practicability of the proposal. It was an equally natural assumption that he would be guided in a great degree by the advice of the Secretary of State in such a matter. The tone of the dispatches from London and Berlin and the definite statements in the dispatches from Washington, we fear, leave little doubt that the announcement of the President was not preceded by inquiries of other Governments, and make it at least possible that it was not submitted to the calm judgment of the head of the Department of State.

Indeed it is reported from the National capital that preliminary inquiries will be made some six weeks hence, and specifically that the President will not await the conclusion of peace between Russia and Japan. If this report be correct it is not easy to see how the plan, so promising if cautiously and practically conducted and so important in its purpose, can have any immediate and substantial results. It is hardly within the limits of possibility that either Japan or Russia could accept an invitation to a new Peace Conference while still engaged in a strenuous struggle, and a Hague Conference without the presence of Russia, whose ruler first proposed it, would be almost inconceivable; if it could take place it would offer little hope of accomplishing anything. When the first conference adjourned the subjects which it left unacted on and which it referred to a future meeting included, besides other important matters, the regulation of the rights and duties of neutrals, the immunity of private property on the high seas, and the limitation of military and naval budgets. It would be futile to the point of the ludicrous to take up these matters again without the presence of the two Powers who in actual conflict are deciding them for themselves according to their several interests.

There seems to be a feeling in the capitals of Europe that at the proper time and in the proper way a conference to continue the work begun in 1899 can be made extremely useful, and we can fully appreciate the eagerness of the President to hasten as much as possible so fortunate an enterprise, but it is to be feared that precipitate action in the matter may hinder rather than help. As the case stands it is his good intentions that claim most attention.

JUDGE HERRICK'S POLITICAL ACTIVITY.

Mr. MARCUS T. HUN, the Supreme Court reporter of this State, has performed a public service in putting forth a statement of facts within his knowledge and recollection as to the career of Judge HERRICK in politics. In the absence of authoritative contradiction, the stories about Mr. HERRICK'S continuing activities as a boss or machine manager in Albany after his election to the Supreme bench have been widely believed to be true. Mr. HERRICK'S own denial of the charge has been published. Mr. HUN now comes forward with his testimony in exculpation.

For twenty years Mr. HUN avers that he has, "without being a member of either political party," had a very considerable acquaintance with the details of the administration of the public offices in Albany. He has been familiar with the political story of the Democracy in that city. D CADY HERRICK succeeded DANIEL MANNING in the Democratic leadership in Albany County, and held the post until he was elected to the Supreme bench in 1892. Mr. HUN shall now speak in his own words:

Since that time there has been, by the opponents of the former Herrick supporters, vehement and continuous clamor and complaint at Justice HERRICK'S alleged activity and interest in party politics. I cannot recall, in the entire period of Mr. Justice HERRICK'S judicial career, any instance of his appearing in an attitude of partisan prejudice or activity, and I cannot but believe that it has been the persistence rather than any substantial foundation in fact of this criticism which has led many people to believe that Mr. Justice HERRICK has conducted himself in this respect with unseemly or unsuitable ardor.

If Judge HERRICK was guilty of unseemly conduct in continuing to be an active political manager after going upon the bench that fact is one the voters of the State are entitled to know, in order that they may rightly understand the character of the candidate they are asked to support. If, on the other hand, this charge against Judge HERRICK is unfounded, if he did not exhibit "unseemly or unsuitable ardor" in politics while serving as a Judge, the voters are certainly entitled to know it, since the contrary has been insistently asserted. Mr. HUN'S testimony is straightforward and clear. It must be held to acquit if evidence in rebuttal is not produced.

MR. CANNON ON FREE SILVER.

The Hon. JOSEPH G. CANNON, Speaker of the House of Representatives, in the course of his remarks notifying Mr. ROOSEVELT of his nomination said that the Democratic platform "is as silent as the grave touching the gold standard" and inquired if it ever could have occurred to Judge PARKER that "if his vote and support for his party's candidate in 1896 and 1900 had been decisive that we would now have the silver standard."

One would infer from Mr. CANNON'S remarks quoted above, as well as from his speeches within the past few weeks, that he was one of those who bravely stood against the effort to remonetize silver and force the Government to coin silver bullion to an unlimited extent for the benefit of bullion owners that came so near succeeding in 1877 and 1878. It would not be suspected from his utterances now that JOSEPH G. CANNON was among the most rabid of free-silver coinage advocates, and that he voted against striking from the free-coinage bill a clause that specifically declared that "any owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at any United States mint or assay office to be coined into such dollars for his benefit, upon the same terms and conditions as gold bullion is deposited for coinage under existing laws."

The free-coinage bill that passed the House Nov. 5, 1877, at the called session of the Forty-seventh Congress, and which became known as the Bland-Allison Free Silver bill, contained the clause above quoted when it left the House. It was passed under suspension of the rules without any debate, by a vote of 163 to 34. Mr. CANNON is recorded in the affirmative. J. WARREN KEIFER of Ohio, who subsequently was Speaker, and WILLIAM MCKINLEY of Ohio are found recorded in the affirmative. But Mr. CANNON went much further in his desire to secure the free and unlimited coinage of silver than most of his Republican colleagues, as will be seen by examination of the record.

As already stated, the bill was rushed through the House without debate, and under suspension of the rules. The more enthusiastic advocates of the measure under the "leave to print" inserted speeches in The Congressional Record, and among these was Mr. CANNON, whose speech appears in the Appendix as having been delivered Feb. 21, 1878, one of the days on which the amendments of the Senate were considered. What Mr. CANNON believed and supported with his vote and voice regarding free and unlimited coinage of silver at a time when the greenbacks were below par in gold, and when the Treasury was struggling to collect gold coin with which to resume gold payments, is best explained in his own words. A few extracts will show Mr. CANNON'S advanced attitude on the silver question at that time. He said in opening his remarks:

I voted for the so-called Bland Silver bill. * * * The Senate, by way of amendment, has stricken out the free-coinage provision which enabled the holder of silver bullion to deposit the same at the mints and receive therefor silver dollars, less the actual cost of coinage. * * * I prefer the original bill, as passed by the House, for the reason that I think the amount of money, gold and silver, both or either, should be regulated, like the amount of wheat and corn, by the law governing demand and supply, and such would be the case if you allow free coinage, for then the holder of any gold or silver, in whatever shape it may be, can have it coined into dollars, and instead of prohibiting free coinage, as the Senate amendments do, I am satisfied it would be wise legislation not only to allow free coinage, but also to allow the holders of silver bullion to deposit the same in the Treasury and receive from the Government of the United States coin notes, dollar for dollar, upon the basis of the weight and fineness of the dollar of 412½ grains of silver, and make such notes receivable for all Government dues.

Mr. CANNON would have had customs duties paid in silver, which the Bland bill made full legal tender for all obligations. What Mr. CANNON thought of the resumption of specie payments on Jan. 1, 1879, as directed by the act of Congress, is exemplified by his vote in the House to wipe that act from the statute book, which vote was given at the same session at which the Bland Free Silver Coinage act was passed. Another excerpt from Mr. CANNON'S speech on free silver will surprise many of his admirers of the present day. Said Mr. CANNON:

Again, the Senate takes away free coinage for silver and leaves free coinage for gold. Now, silver is just as much the money of the Constitution as gold, and should have just the same treatment in every respect as gold. And when you discriminate against one of the precious metals in favor of the other, by restricting the use of one, as contemplated by the Senate amendment as to silver, you that far fetter the use of money in measuring the values and making the exchanges of the commodities of the country and fail just that far to give the necessary relief and assistance to the business of the country that wise legislation should and would give.

No utterance of WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900 had a stronger flavor for free and unlimited coinage of silver. Mr. CANNON even went further than Mr. BRYAN, for the latter did not propose to pay the holder of silver bullion one hundred cents in gold for 55 or 60 cents' worth of that bullion. Whatever profit came in the way of seigniorage was to accrue to the Government under Mr. BRYAN'S plan, while Mr. CANNON wanted the bullion holder to have all the profit.

The bill, with amendments of the Senate, was discussed at great length in that body. The House bill simply provided for free coinage of the silver dollar, made it full legal tender, and gave the holder of bullion all the profits of coinage. The Senate struck out the last provision and substituted one providing for the purchase and coinage of a certain number of ounces each month and also for the appointment of a commission to confer with representatives of other nations "for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bi-metallic money." When the bill as amended reached the House a vote was had on the amendment to strike out the clause giving the profits of coinage to holders of silver bullion. The motion to concur in the action of the Senate was carried by 203 yeas, 72 nays. Only three Republicans voted in the negative, Mr. CANNON being one of the three. The bill was returned to the House with objections of the President to its approval, and after reconsideration it was passed by the House over the veto, the vote standing 166 to 73. Mr. CANNON voted in the affirmative. The bill was also passed over the veto by the Senate—yeas, 46; nays, 19.

Mr. CANNON'S wonderment regarding Judge PARKER'S present attitude and the vote of that gentleman in the Presidential elections of 1896 and 1900 will astonish those who have not forgotten "Uncle JOE'S" zeal and enthusiasm in following the silver standard in the contests when free coinage was successful in Congress and which resulted in inflicting upon the currency evils from which the country is hardly yet delivered.

UNION APATHY AMONG MINERS.

It is pretty well understood that the recent contentions in the anthracite region over certain small matters, such as the payment of check weighmen and the like, which it was feared might precipitate a strike, were expedients to revive interest in the miners' union and induce some thousands of delinquent and indifferent members to pay their arrears of dues. It does not seem to have had as much result as was expected. The leaders are now threatening them with the open shop as the result of their relaxation of vigilance and the decay of union loyalty. It would seem as if the open shop had come already if so large a proportion of the alleged membership of the United Mine Workers in this section is carried on the rolls without paying dues or discharging any of the duties of membership.

To dragoon their apathetic following into line, the District Presidents are quite capable of starting a strike if an issue can be found in which the men could be induced to feel an active interest. This is a view of the duty of a union leader which would scarcely bear the test of critical examination. It is safe to say, however, that a large proportion of the strikes called have no other object than to collect arrears of dues from delinquent members.

SMOKE IN PHILADELPHIA.

The new ordinance for the suppression of the bituminous coal smoke nuisance in Philadelphia is a model of unintelligible and self-defeating legislation. It establishes certain nice distinctions according to a color scale, and permits the evolution of smoke of No. 1 grade under certain conditions and of No. 2 grade under other conditions. Having done this it declares in Section 6 that "the provisions of this ordinance shall not apply as to color of smoke between the hours of 4 A. M. and 7 A. M." What scale does apply between those hours we are left to infer, but are not told.

Such an ordinance is about as practicable of enforcement as was the order of Brig. Gen. WOODBS when commandant at Norfolk, that, as there were too many dogs in the city, every fourth dog should be killed. Whether any particular dog was the "fourth dog" or one of the other three of a quartet, was left indeterminate. If the Philadelphia authorities want to suppress the local smoke nuisance there is a simple way of doing so. All that is necessary is to enact and enforce with ordinary human intelligence an ordinance providing that it shall be unlawful for a consumer of coal to create or maintain a nuisance, and that if found to be doing so he will be arrested and become liable to a fine in whatever amount the ordinance-enacting body may consider adequately deterrent. To establish a standard based upon "one thickness of gray glass of sufficient capacity to cut off 60 per cent. of the light from a flame having a lighting power of sixteen candles" and get No. 1 from two thicknesses of such glass and No. 2 from four thicknesses is very much like nonsense.

ANNEXATION BY CANADA.

Mr. CARNEGIE is nothing if not amusing. Highly characteristic is his notion of how the political union of Canada and the United States, which he is understood to favor very cordially, will be brought about. He says:

Whenever Canada makes a change I think it will be her destiny to annex the United States as Scotland did England. After this is accomplished the motherland will be glad to unite with her then united children.

Canada cherishes large ambitions, but we were not aware that to annex the United States was one of them. However, Mr. CARNEGIE may have better sources of information than most people. If such annexation was effected, it is quite likely that Great Britain would be very glad indeed to pool her issues with those of the new confederacy. As to the method of annexation there would seem to be room for doubts. The Scotch annexation of England is an event concerning which a Scotchman is likely to hold views not wholly in accord with those of the typical Englishman. It might be brought about by electing Sir WILFRID LAURIER President of both countries, but it is too late to arrange for that in November of this year. Three years hence we may be in better shape to consider it.

A MASSACHUSETTS NULLIFIER.

Something ought to be done to, or about, that singularly "Special" Justice in the Berkshires who "did not recognise international law in his court." Something further, since the Governor of Massachusetts has already undone his act, and suggested that a personal apology from him, in addition to the remission of the fine he had imposed upon a diplomatic representative of a foreign power, would be a seemly thing. The seemliest thing would be the ousting of Special Justice PHELPS to adorn the magistracy of Massachusetts.

It was an amazing blunder that the Special Justice made. It seems incredible and it is discreditable to the boasted free school system of Massachusetts, that the magistrate should not have known that the acts of a Secretary of a foreign legation did not come within his jurisdiction. Even if he did not know that, he should have known the Constitution of the United States, including that article of it which sets forth that:

This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof * * * shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

This was enough to put a magistrate upon inquiry when a culprit arraigned before him pleaded his privilege as a reason for refusing any other plea. "Instead of which" the Berkshire Dogberry, in addition to fining him for the offense of which he was accused, went the malicious and inexcusable length of fining him further for contempt of court in standing upon his clear legal rights. This is the worst part of the case, and would fully justify the prosecution of the magistrate and the exaction of the fine and imprisonment to which he has rendered himself liable. It clearly behooves Special Justice PHELPS, in his own interest, to make at once such reparation as the injured diplomatist may find sufficient.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Discussing in The Medical Record "The Use and Abuse of Athletics," Dr. R. E. COUGHLIN reaches the conclusion—not particularly instructive, because everybody knew it before—that the assumption of his headline is true; or, as he puts it, that "although the evidence for and against athletics is contradictory, the whole subject may be summed up by stating that athletics are beneficial when properly and judiciously applied and very injurious when the precautions, above mentioned, are ignored or carelessly regarded." The precautions alluded to are chiefly against the special development of one part of the body, since that is almost invariably at the expense of others, and every built-up or hypertrophied muscle, including the heart, has a strong tendency to degeneration when training ceases. Dr. COUGHLIN presents the evidence for and against athletics, as the doctor sees it, with an evident determination to see the whole question, but it is clear enough to see that his verdict as judge is against the defense. Of "exercise," naturally, he is an advocate, but when it takes the form of a competitive contest of any kind he finds that following it comes a train of physical, mental, and moral evils more or less serious as the energy exerted is more or less violent. He especially emphasizes the fact that the relation between big muscles and good health, instead of being close, as common opinion has it, is a distant one, if it exists at all. The athlete "trained to the minute" for a desperate struggle of strength or endurance is, he declares, in a dangerously abnormal condition, with nerves all on edge, and the struggle itself often involves losses of vital power that are never made up. According to Dr. COUGHLIN comparatively few athletes marry, while of those that do only a small percentage have children, and a large percentage sooner or later make their appearance in the divorce courts. In other words, athletics are good while kept within proper limits—limits, by the way, differing for every individual and practically beyond accurate ascertainment—and bad when extended beyond those limits, as is the almost irresistible tendency when the element of competition enters into play. So we are no further advanced than before, except, possibly, for a somewhat clearer appreciation of the harmful consequences of overexertion. It doesn't seem very helpful, however, to learn that exercise should always end with the appearance of fatigue. Too many of us must work after we are tired to pay much attention to that familiar signal.

—Another complication is added to the already sufficiently complex problem of the cigar stamps by the sudden reminder that not only are the "trust," the "independents," and the American public interested in the outcome of the controversy, but little Cuba, too, is directly concerned, and to a degree that may prompt her to make trouble of one sort or another for all the rest if her wishes are not considered. It is for her advantage to have her estimable tobacco made up into cigars before it is exported from the island, for that means the expenditure there of a lot of money for skilled labor, in addition to the money paid to the laborers on the estates, and naturally she has a warm affection for the big pink stamp which hitherto has been decisive evidence that—well, that any given cigar box bearing it had once been filled with cigars made in Cuba. It raised a probability in most cases sufficient for the customer that the cigars he saw in the box were of that origin, and that, even when the facts and the probability were out of level, was good for the reputation of Cuban cigars in the abstract. So Cuba will take sides with the "trust" against the "independents," and, if the big pink stamp is abolished, perhaps the rejoicing of its enemies will be turned to grief by the invention by Cuba of a stamp or brand of her own, even more conspicuous than the one now in use, to be placed on every box of cigars that is sent from her shores. That would tell quite as much as does our own receipt for taxes paid, though the danger of counterfeiting it might not be as great. Incidentally, why is it that the various cigar manufacturers and dealers assume that something more than their own words and marks is necessary to convince customers that they are getting what they want and pay for? In no other trade the name of which occurs to us at the moment is any particular regard paid to the presence or absence of a Governmental assurance that things are what they seem to the purchaser and are declared to be by the vendor. Are the buyers of cigars a particularly skeptical class, or are the sellers thereof held to be particularly untrustworthy?

—Nothing in our extensive correspondence puzzles us quite so much as the constant receipt of letters from people who, while they begin with vehement assurances that they are not "Christian Scientists" or believers in "Christian Science," proceed and end with assurances equally vehement that Eddyism is the culmination of human knowledge and Eddyites exemplars of all the virtues. We have said that we are puzzled by these letters; perhaps perfect frankness would compel us to say that we try to be puzzled by them, and only succeed in wondering why anybody should think that anybody else could have his opinion or hers affected by communications of this particular kind. But let that pass. The object of all these correspondents just now is to deny that the "scientists" are dangerous to their neighbors through their habit of ignoring infectious diseases. Every one of them makes the same reply to this charge—the reply that "mother" not long ago commanded her dupes to obey the sanitary laws of the communities in which they live, especially in the matter of vaccination. And by this we are expected to be convinced! Mrs. EDDY did, indeed, counsel against conflict with the constituted authorities, and no doubt her followers have a general tendency to obey her commands, since none of them enjoys any except their own peculiar kind of martyrdom, but how absurd it is to suppose, or even to claim, that persons who deny the very existence of disease are going, in any except cases obviously of the utmost seriousness, to convict themselves of the grossest inconsistency by calling in doctors or Health Board officials and announcing to them the existence in their families of diphtheria, scarlet fever, or consumption! They will not openly or actively antagonise the enforcement of sanitary laws, but certainly they will lend no assistance to their enforcement, and the precautions taken by others they scorn on what they call "principle." We assure our puzzling correspondents, therefore, that they are wasting time, paper, and postage stamps in writing to us the letters they do.

—So admirable do the character and programme of the new Russian Minister of the Interior seem to be that for once there is an apparent need for modifying and qualifying the assertion that the consequences of political assassinations are always bad, politically as well as otherwise. According to all accepted reasoning, the death of DE PLEHVE was sure to result in the selection of a successor harsher and more reactionary than himself, but it has not resulted so, if present indications count. The Terrorists are likely to assert that the quality of the new man is a justification of their policy, and it is not well, in Russia or anywhere else, that they should have such justification. Of course, it is not a real one, but the fallacy of it is not yet quite plain.

The Sufficiency of Two Meals a Day.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interest you have shown in the publication of the views expressed by Dr. Rabagliati and of the review of his book by Dr. Bayles, prompts me to call your attention to the passages from the Bible, Exodus, Chapter xvi., showing that for forty years the people had thrived on but two meals a day:

"Toward evening ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread," &c.

The student of the Bible finds therein many hygienic laws. Many of these ancient laws have been and now are being proved by independent and scientific researches to be suitable to our modern life.

WILLIAM JACOBSON, M. D.

New York, Sept. 26, 1904.

FROM ENGLAND IN MOTORBOAT.

Prize Now Said to be Increased to £20,000—Three Entries.

From The London Telegraph.

S. F. Edge is delighted to hear that M. Charley offers a prize of £2,000 for the first motor boat to cross the Atlantic, because in March next he will be sending one across to New York, and it will be an added attraction to the voyage if a handsome award is to be competed for. A representative of The Daily Telegraph saw Mr. Edge on the subject recently. "It falls in admirably with my plans," he said. "I have for some time had under construction for a wealthy American a cruising motor boat, and one of the terms of the contract is that she shall cross the Atlantic, to be delivered at New York, on her own keel. I expect she will be ready in March, so that I ought to stand a good chance of securing that prize. I hear that some one is talking of putting up a £20,000 prize for a transatlantic trip. Of course, I have no rooted objections to the amount of the prize being increased," said Mr. Edge, with a smile, "but I should like to have the terms of the contest definitely fixed, so that we may know under what conditions we are working."

"What is the size of the boat you are building?"

"She will be sixty-five feet long and will carry six passengers and a crew of two men. That seems a small crew, but then in a petrol boat everything ought to be automatic, and once the engine is started the crew ought practically to have hardly anything to do. We have been instructed to do the best we can, regardless of price, and the boat will therefore be very luxurious. She will have 300 horse power engines. In reality she will have more, because there will be two engines on each side of 150 horse power apiece, and a centre one of 40 horse power. But the small engine is for use in cruising at slow pace and coming alongside, where the big power could not be handily and economically used. The 40 horse power engine may be used with the others when the boat is traveling at speed, but we do not look to it for much assistance. We expect to be able to do a comfortable twenty miles an hour, so that we ought to be able to cross in about six to seven days."

"For how long a journey can you carry petrol?"

"She will have tanks holding enough petrol for ten days' 'steaming'—should not one say 'exploding'?—at twenty miles an hour."

So that is satisfactory. It would be awkward to run out of fuel in midocean, for as yet there are very few petrol depots in the Atlantic.

Meanwhile, M. Noe Boyer—whose Christian name should be of good omen—has requested M. Charley to reserve No. 1 in the contest for his 100 horse power boat, Canauto Boyer. And Mr. S. B. Bowman of New York offers £4,000 to M. Charley if he will cross the Atlantic himself in a motor boat. M. Charley has taken up the challenge, and announces that before long he hopes to launch a sixty-five-foot boat, in which to make the journey. Who will be the next entrant for the Cross-Atlantic Cup?

Strong in Retreat.

From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"The Japs are better fighters."

"Yes."

"And they are better equipped."

"Yes."

"And they have more confidence."

"Yes."

"But don't you think the Russians will win in the long run?"

"Well, that seems to be their specialty."

The Suburbanite.

From The Chicago News.

Oldboy—Come on; aren't you going to take the 9:20 for the city?

Subbuberly—No; I'm going to wait for the 10:30. It's running time in three minutes less.

The More Effective Way.

From The Washington Star.

The modern campaign has followed in the footsteps of business and is depending on the newspapers instead of on street advertising.

Safe and Sane.

From The Chicago Tribune.

"Young man, do you know anything about law?"

"Yes, sir. Just enough to keep out of it."

A CONSTITUTION IN ITSELF.

Mme. De Staël's Words Applied to Judge Parker's Character.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If Mme. de Staël were addressing Alton B. Parker instead of the Emperor of Russia, she could not have chosen better and more appropriate words—"Your character is a constitution for your country and your conscience is its guarantee."

As the campaign advances it becomes more and more obvious that the one great issue is Theodore Roosevelt. It is an issue which includes all others, for Roosevelt is the Republican Party and the Republican Party is Roosevelt.

His every action, his every word, tells the whole story. Of course, "the wisest of men have their follies, the best have their failings, and the most temperate now and then have their excesses," but Mr. Roosevelt has more follies, more failings, and more excesses than any man, to my knowledge, who ever inhabited the White House. Virtues has he, it is true, and many of them; so had Alexander and Napoleon. He has done some very good things—a black hen will lay a white egg. He is an honest man, a brave man, a fearless man, a courageous man—in short, a strong man, mentally, morally, and physically.

If a great war were pending and if we were in need of a military leader—a leader who could be depended upon to take prompt, vigorous, brilliant action, one might be willing to propose the name of Theodore Roosevelt. But if one were asked to name a man who could be depended upon in any emergency to take calm, deliberate, temperate, conservative, thoughtful action, a man who was to fill the highest office in the gift of any people, a man who would have about 200,000 offices to fill, a man who was to make the Judges who interpret our Constitution and nullify the acts of Congress, a man of scholarly accomplishments and of a well-balanced, judicial temperament, a man of dignity, accompanied with just that degree of force that constitutes an ideal Executive, a man who thinks much and talks but little, I would propose the name of Alton B. Parker.

Theodore Roosevelt stands for war. Judge Parker stands for peace. The days of war have passed. The pen is mightier than the sword. Mind has supplanted muscle. There is no danger of this country ever again becoming involved in war with a "safe and sane man" in the White House. We do not want a man there who, at any moment may break out with an "Oh! for the empire of Cyrus, the riches of Croesus, and the glory of Alexander."

When reading the numerous extracts from the speeches of Mr. Roosevelt which were recently published I could not resist the temptation to name him the "Great Modern Don Quixote." A kite is kept aloft by its own lightness; the lighter it is the higher it will fly. I believe that the specific gravity of the President is such that there are no limitations to his flight, and that if he is given four years more in which to satisfy his vaulting ambitions there will be practically no limit to his aspirations. At any rate, his election would be sure to disturb and unsettle business, and therefore I am for Judge Parker. EUGENE V. BREWSTER.

SPIRITLESS OFFICE TOILERS.

What Might Happen If the Educated Horse Went to Work.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to make a few remarks about your kind comments on my contribution as to "Poor Office Pay."

That office work can be done by many and in a satisfactory way, and that consequently wages must go down, is true, but the same has been said of labor before workmen formed unions. There was a time when thousands of mechanics poured into this country from Austria, Germany, Scandinavia, Poland, &c.—all willing to work for low wages. But intelligent workmen foresaw the danger, and tried to make the foreigner join unions. Since that time capital seems to be convinced that labor cannot be obtained at low wages, though it can be done by thousands, and in a satisfactory way.

But my heart breaks when I hear the foolish, selfish, and childish talk of my office assistants. They are satisfied with being employed by Mr. So and So, the prosperous business man, who pays more than $50,000 a year for clerical assistance only; they talk race horses, Wall Street tips, smoke cigarettes, invent new kinds of jigs, and draw $9 or $10 per week, with advancement. Do not talk "future" to them. They don't want to be disturbed, as they will get $2 more within a few years.

It is, however, with great pleasure that I have read of the intelligent German horse Hans, which can multiply, add, deduct, and possibly can study bookkeeping. It is not to be hoped for my dear confrères that this kind of animal will be imported here. No doubt it could even beat them in decreasing salaries, and at the same time could be trained on the race track. P.

MUSICAL POSTAL CARDS.

New Development of Prevailing Craze for Coming Season.

From The London Mail.

A striking novelty in picture post-cards is about to be placed on the market by a French syndicate.

To an ordinary pictorial card is affixed a very thin transparent gelatine disk, on which is impressed a gramophone musical record. A hole is pierced through the centre of the disk, and the post-card can be placed on an ordinary "talking machine" and played in the usual way.

The musical post-card opens up an entirely new field for the craze. Photographs of great singers and composers will be accompanied by extracts from their works, pictures of national flags by the anthems of the different countries, and so on in endless variety. Candidates for political honors, instead of sending merely their photographs to constituents, will be able to accompany them with the phonographic records of an election address.

The additional cost as compared with ordinary cards is very slight. The disk, being perfectly transparent, does not in any way interfere with the picture beneath.

As a novel advertising medium the new cards are certain to be popular. French champagne firms are already having pictorial cards printed which will literally sing the praises of their wares.

His Varied Suits.

From The Pittsburg Post.

McFlub—He pressed his suit, donned it; called on his girl, pressed his suit, won and married her; and now he has applied for a divorce.

Sleeth—And the lawyers are pressing his suit now, eh?

Mistaken in the Hero.

From The Pittsburg Post.

"Our hero tore up the street!" the novel began.

"Ah, a fast sprinter," we opined.

Later, however, it developed that he was merely a contractor.

Weather Usually "Unseasonable."

From The Washington Star.

It is very difficult to get the weather of any season to live up to the poetry that is written about it.

Gulligan—Naw, but Casey's face is.

HOW ONE COUSIN SEES US.

"Colossal Rustics" Our "Uncultured Choice of Leaders."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The quotation in one of your editorials in yesterday's TIMES of Kipling's remarks about certain Englishmen who are only snoring while they think they are thinking suggests an explanation of the condition of the editor of The London Morning Post during the early morning hours of Aug. 18. I picked up a copy of that paper dated Aug. 18 in a hotel in Paris this Summer. Balfour had just read his address as President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. I inclose an extract from an editorial found in the copy.

It is surely better for a cultured nation, self-centred in an ancient civilization, to be governed by one who has earned the title of "a scholar and a gentleman"—the phrase defines the nature of British scholarship at its best—than by one of those colossal rustics who have shaped the destinies of the United States, where, partly as a consequence of an uncivilized people's uncultured choice of leaders, a materialism as narrow and intense as that expressed in Feuerbach's "man is what he eats," has invaded every province of public life.

PALMER C. RICKETTS.

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 26, 1904.

JUDGE PARKER'S LETTER.

Uplifting and Ennobling.

From The Albany Argus. (Dem.)

It will make many votes for Judge Parker, but that is a minor matter, comparatively. The chief thing is that it will make better citizens, better patriots, better Americans, and better students of our institutions and ideals, of all who read it. It is indeed an uplifting and ennobling contribution to the literature of American politics.

Importance of Tariff Reform.

From The Rochester Union. (Dem.)

The issue of tariff reform, and the related issues of reciprocity, are discussed in a manner which shows that Judge Parker has made them subjects of the most careful thought, and that he regards them as, next to the issue of adherence to the Constitution, the most important of this campaign.

The Appeal to the People.

From The Baltimore Herald, (Ind.)

Judge Parker puts these queries to the American people: Are they for economy or extravagance? For punishing political crime or protecting it? For equal opportunity or for special privilege? For law or individual caprice? For the rule of the people or the sway of benevolent despotism? These are issues enough, important and sincerely put forward.

Calm, Judicial Spirit.

From The Manchester (N. H.) Union, (Dem.)

The calm, judicial spirit of the man breathes in every sentence of his letter, and yet there is no lack of wholesome virility in any paragraph. Judge Parker has delivered a message to his country rather than to his party, but for that very reason it will strengthen the party mightily with all thinking, sincerely patriotic men.

If the People Are Wise.

From The Hartford Times, (Dem.)

If the people are wise the answer they will give in November will be an approval of the views expressed by Judge Parker and a grant of authority to him to apply them in the administration of the Government during the next four years.

No Extravagance or Error.

From The Springfield Republican, (Ind.)

There is no extravagance or error in the summary of the issues which are joined—economy or extravagance in administration? equal opportunity or special privilege? government of law or individual caprice? the rule of the people or a beneficent despotism? The election of the Democratic candidate may not secure all of the more desirable of these alternative conditions, but that it will do much to destroy the force of the contrary tendencies and turn the Nation back toward the ideals of the founders there can be no question.

Positive, Candid, and Courageous.

From The Washington Post, (Ind.)

It is positive, direct, candid, and courageous. No deliverance that has marked the progress of the canvass has commanded more prompt and interested attention than will be accorded to this virile letter, and if activity does not displace indifference, if excitement does not supplant the unusual calmness of the scene, no part of the responsibility will be chargeable to the Democratic candidate.

Democratic in the Broad Sense.

From The Buffalo Courier, (Dem.)

His views are Democratic in the broad sense. Fair-minded Republicans who are Americans before anything else, cannot help saying amen to many of his patriotic sentiments; many thousands of Republicans will agree thoroughly with his opinions on revision of the tariff and that reciprocity policy to which the Republican Party has been pledged, although it has broken its faith.

Calm, Deliberate Judgment.

From Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, (Dem.)

There are many evidences that this is a thinking, not a ranting, campaign, and if ever a candidate appealed to the calm and deliberate judgment of a thinking people—a people confronted with issues of the gravest National importance, to be decided by their votes—Judge Parker has done so in the letter in which he formally accepts the Democratic nomination for President.

Sober and Conservative Views.

From The Baltimore News, (Ind.)

Take it for all in all, the Parker letter represents a sober and careful man, the representative of sober and conservative views—a man who, if elected President, may be counted on to do his duty as he sees it, uninfluenced either by clamor or by the desire for applause or admiration.

Places the Responsibility.

From The Rochester Herald, (Dem.)

In condemning existing conditions which he considers wrong, he places the responsibility for them where it belongs, upon the Republican Party, but he launches forth in no intemperate invective against Mr. Roosevelt and his Administration. The arraignment is sharp, concise, and forceful, but never abusive and never intolerant, except when the writer expresses his ingrained intolerance of direct and deliberate violation of law or executive usurpation of power by the President. At such times the judicial mind of the writer shines forth with plenty of light, if without heat.

Vigorous and Clear, Sound and Strong.

From The Utica Observer, (Dem.)

The document is characterized by vigor and clearness. It is not a pretentious document, but it is sound and strong. No high flights of eloquence are attempted; but a perusal of the document leaves a clear picture of Judge Parker's attitude toward every subject touched upon. His long judicial training stands forth in every paragraph. It is an exceedingly able letter, from whatever viewpoint may be chosen.

Forethought.

From Leslie's Weekly.

Smith—I want to get a gross of beef, wine, and iron, two dozen of cod liver oil, a case of rheumatism cure, three gross of—

Wholesale Druggist—Are you going to start a drug store, Sir?

Smith—No; I'm going to start for a two weeks' vacation at a health resort.

THE SECRET.

Did you not hate old Winter's croak,
How could you love the Summer so?
Did you not reel beneath the yoke,
How very tiring rest would grow.

If all the pains of earth were dead,
Joy would entail its own defeat,
If Death were robbed of all its dread,
Life would be robbed of all its sweet.

Thank God for all you get in Life,
The big and little, sweet and sour.
Peace is the child of stirring Strife
And Pain the mother of all Power.

STEPHEN CHALMERS.

PRESIDENT'S LONG TALK WITH REV. MR. WAGNER

Begun at Dinner It Lasts Far Into the Night.

EVANGELIST SEES WASHINGTON

Considers the National Capital an Ideal Place in Which to Lead the Simple Life.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The author of "The Simple Life" and the author of "The Strenuous Life" parted reluctantly this morning on the White House steps. The Rev. Charles Wagner, the French evangelist, had spent last night as the guest of President Roosevelt, and the two had enjoyed a talk that began at dinner and continued long after midnight. The pastor told much of his life and of his experiences among the people to whom he has dedicated his labors.

This morning the Rev. Mr. Wagner, in company with Dr. Wallace Radcliffe of the New York Avenue Church, started out to see the sights of Washington. They visited the Capitol, and went through every nook and corner of the great building. The Rev. Mr. Wagner was unrestrained in his expressions of pleasure in the architecture of the great building. The two men then went to the Library of Congress, where the famous frescoes and mural decorations and the rare and costly treasures in the collections of books and prints were admired.

In the course of the drive around the city the evangelist continually manifested his appreciation of the streets and parks and the various public improvements.

"There could be no place," he said at one time, "where the simple life could be more possible than here. It must be a constant delight to live in Washington. You have such wide and clean streets. There is always room enough—something not always enjoyed in city life. Your parks are so green and roomy. The distances are so soft and picturesque. It is all soothing and restful.

"The noise and hurly-burly of the densely crowded large cities render callous and dull to the ordinary sensibilities of life those who live there to pursue the quest of gain simply for gain's sake. They lose sight of the true goal of right human endeavor and become mired in the slough of mere material acquisition. You have here in Washington an atmosphere of intellect and culture, and I see everywhere the evidences of gentle living and comfort."

He went with Dr. Radcliffe to the New York Avenue Church and stood for several minutes by the pew which Abraham Lincoln occupied when he was President.

"There was a great man—the hero spirit of the age," commented the evangelist.

The Rev. Mr. Wagner left for Philadelphia early in the afternoon to be the guest there of John Wanamaker. He will return to Washington in November, and President Roosevelt assured him that he would take pleasure in being present when he spoke here.

ADMIRES THE PRESIDENT.

Rev. Mr. Wagner Tells of His Visit to the White Hou..

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The Rev. Charles Wagner gave an enthusiastic account of the hospitality which he received at the White House to his fellow-guests this evening at a dinner tendered in his honor by John Wanamaker at his suburban home, Lindenhurst.

Mr. Wagner said later that he had found a great many points of sympathy between President Roosevelt and himself. The President in manners and in social converse, as well as in his views of men and things, was quite his ideal of what the Chief of a great modern republic should be.

"Mr. Roosevelt and his family," he said, "were charming in their unaffected hospitality. The household of the President of the United States impressed me with its pervading air of simplicity and sincerity. There is in your American Executive's methods a directness and candor which excite both my wonder and admiration. I could not but see some of this while at the White House. But of course what I chiefly saw was the social side of the President's daily life.

"That, too, prompts me to superlative characterization. It is not an easy thing for a man in that position to preserve even the innate simplicity of reason and motive with which he is blest. I could not have asked of President Roosevelt greater friendliness and delicacy than he evinced toward me.

"Mrs. Roosevelt is interesting and charming in a very high degree, and the children of the White House I take to be good examples of what is best in young America.

"My impression of your President is that he is a strong, manly man, sturdy in both intellect and morals, a man of deep feeling and powerful conviction, eminently earnest and sincere. I was much delighted with what I saw in him, I hope, without vanity, and that is that he thoroughly understood my books. You know there is nothing more pleasing to an author than to find such a community of spirit between himself and any to whom his message may be welcome."

Mr. Wagner said that the message which he would bring in his lectures to the American people was the same in essence as that in his books, only of course it would be more condensed in form. The controlling theme would be the value of simple and sincere living.

Mr. and Mrs. Wanamaker's other guests at the dinner were the Rev. Charles A. Dickey, Dr. Adam H. Fetterolf, Isaac H. Clothier, Lewis H. Redner, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Roberts, Col. Henry Cecil Clay of Georgia, the Rev. Russell Conwell, the Rev. Dr. Lloyd W. Temkins, the Rev. Dr. Stephen A. Dana, Mr. Howard, Mr. Trumbull, Barclay H. Warburton, Mrs. Clay, Mrs. Coenig, and Thomas B. Wanamaker.

Mr. Wagner leaves Philadelphia to-morrow for New York.

THE NEWS OF NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 27.—Mrs. J. Stewart Barney and Mrs. Charles A. Childs gave afternoon teas, and Mrs. William T. Bull a children's party this evening, and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, Mrs. George S. Scott, and Mrs. John J. Mason entertained at dinners to-night.

DIDN'T STAN' FO' NO BOSSIN',

So Colored Pastor's Wife Anna Wanted Separation at City Hall.

Linking arms, they walked right through the corridors of the City Hall to the door of the Mayor's office, where Police Sergt. Kelly was on guard, yesterday. Kelly remarked to Sergt. Kennell that the man was a blacker negro than the woman, and Kennell replied that the woman looked the younger because she was attired in a bright pink gown, while the man wore a black frock coat and black trousers.

"Ah want ter see de Mayah," explained the man. "Ah am de Rev. Dr. Cooper ob No'th Carolinv, an' dis yere lady is ma wife. She won't obey me no mattah what I say, so Ah want ter git a sep'ration from her."

"Ah ain't a-goin' ter let no man boss me," chimed in the woman. "I'se been a good wife to de Doctah, but I don't stan' fo' no bossin'."

"Can't I git a sep'ration on dem groun's?" asked the parson.

"I don't know," replied Sergt. Kelly, "but Mayor McClellan don't run a divorce court."

"Ah don't want no divoce," explained the man from North Carolina. "Dis yere lady is ma wife and nobody ken come between us, but if she'll 'gree to 'boy me, ah'll not even ask for a sep'ration."

"Won't you obey him?" inquired the Sergeant, addressing Mrs. Cooper.

"Guess Ah wont," she replied. "It 'pears to be all right fo' a lady to promise de Lawd's command in de holy bonds of acrimony, but when it comes to bossin', Ah must admit ma temper won't allow nuffin' like dat. Ife he wants ter git sep'rated, he kin, but Ah don't want to."

"Wal-l-l-l," drawled the parson, "ef Anna'll try to harmonize herself wif dat word 'obey,' we'll git erlong together. So, fo' de present we'll reconsider sep'ratin'."

And, linking arms, they went away as quietly as they had come.

BERNARD SHAW TURNED BRITON

"How He Lied to Her Husband" a Charming Satire on Candida.

Her lover.....Arnold Daly
Her husband.....Dodson Mitchell
Herself.....Selene Johnson

Scene—Her house in New York.
Period—The present day.

The symbol of all the delectable literary sins of Bernard Shaw, as we once pointed out, is the shillalah of Donnybrook Fair—he is always turning aside from the plain path of his art to rap chance heads by the wayside. But in his latest play, the farce "How He Lied to Her Husband," which Arnold Daly is presenting at the Berkeley Lyceum, it is evident that Mr. Shaw resorts to the deft weapon of his countrymen only when attacking his bête noir of the Briton's illogic in general, and his particular incomprehension of Bernard Shaw. Having at last found in this Greater New York, which spiritually if not geographically is a sort of greater Ireland, an audience that, humanly speaking, comprehends him, he has executed a deliciously characteristic Shaw movement by the flank, and has set vigorously about assaulting it too. But his weapon is no longer the shillalah. Perforce he has changed it for that which alone has proved availing against his countrymen, the clumsy club of the burly Briton.

The intention of the play is characteristically Shawlike; but its strokes of humor are as English as those of a farce by H. J. Byron or Madison Morton. Men have dared to comprehend one Eugene Marchbanks? Caricature 'em in the person of Hen-nery Apjohn; make him lie like "gentlemen" about the "honor" of his Candidas, and tumble him over stools on to the floor, till he raises a farcical lump on the back of his head. Women have been audacious enough to talk about Candida? Caricature 'em as Mrs. Aurora Bumpus, make 'em speak the language of Aurora, N. York, and when Marchbanks-Apjohn in his poetic rage is about to break a fan, make her shriek that it is her fan and that it cost a dollar. As for epigram, this will do: "How dare you swear in my presence! One would think you were my husband!"

Even that poor old windbag James Morrell, whom Shaw never gave half a chance, is transmogrified into a man, who, turning a farcical somersault from the conventional pose of the injured husband, is offended because Apjohn-Marchbanks pretends never to have loved his Aurora-Candida—he boasts that she has danced with three Presidents, and is so delighted to learn that the poems were indeed written to her that he offers to have them printed with broad margins and bound de luxe.

It is not that one regards "Candida" as any more sacred than Mr. Shaw regards it —or holds any work of art above a neat burlesque. Travesties of "Hamlet" and "Edipus" are all the better for the greatness of the mark they aim at; and those plays are rendered dearer rather than less dear by pointed and skillful fooling, much less would one resent a true and incisive satire upon "Candida"—mad New York. Heaven knows there is room for the lash!

If Mr. Shaw had used the shillalah instead of the stuffed club and slapstick we could freely bless him, and our own lucky stars. The trouble with "How He Lied to Her Husband" is that it does not anywhere impinge either on "Candida" or its audiences. It is as slodgy a suet pudding for intellectual indigestion as the British Public doled out to "Candida" when it was lately played in London.

That there is the fruitful seed of an idea in the little new play at the Berkeley Lyceum is to be freely granted. It is very human for a husband to be flattered by the attention paid his handsome wife, and especially after he has been assured of her loyalty to him. In the hands of a skilful farceur it might be the source of much joy. But why rattle the seed in the bladder of knockabout farce?

It is also to be reported that the "comediettina" proves the source of much innocent laughter. But the mainspring of the fun is its topical timeliness rather than any pertinence of wit or philosophy. The piece needs is a little more horseplay and a little more wit to make it worthy of the old days at Weber & Fields's.

To prove the truth of all this it is only necessary to contrast it with that deliciously impossible and farcical satire on Napoleon and the English, "The Man of Destiny," which Mr. Daly has revived to go with the new piece. This is quite as intentionally theatrical, quite as impossible—and altogether delicious.

"TAPS" IS CHANGED.

Sergeant-Major Now Shoots Lieutenant to Meet a Public Demand.

The criticism of the play "Taps" printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES contained an assertion that the Sergeant Major of the play was so imbued with military discipline that, instead of shooting the Lieutenant who had deceived the former's daughter, he shot the girl herself. A man who saw the play after the criticism was printed now objects to the assertion. He says that the Sergeant Major shoots the Lieutenant. He is right, and the critic was, too. The play has been changed.

The theatre managers made the change on Saturday night in response to the demands of many who had seen the play and objected to its lack of a moral, as they put it.

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

M. Cazelles, whose French company is to begin a season at the American Theatre a week from next Monday, was at the Custom House all day yesterday going over the contents of the cases of costumes and properties with the United States Inspectors. "Le Bossu," a drama by Paul Feval, will be the opening attraction. The steamship La Savoie will bring thirty-six members of M. Cazelle's company.

POPE SENDS MESSAGE TO EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

Archbishop Farley Celebrant at Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

BOYS SING GREGORIAN MUSIC

Three Special Indulgences Granted by Pius X. to Catholics Who Assist at Attendant Services.

With the celebration of a solemn pontifical mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday morning, the third American Eucharistic Congress began its three days' session under the auspices of Archbishop Farley. Throughout the diocese the sacrament is exposed while the congress is in session and Pope Pius X. has granted three special indulgences to Roman Catholics assisting at attendant services.

Gregorian music was sung at the pontifical mass by a selected choir of men and boys from the theological and charitable organizations of the church, under the leadership of Prof. Ungerer. The interpretation was German. That of to-day will be of the French and Belgian, and to-morrow the chant will be according to the Italian interpretation. It was the first time that the Gregorian chant had been sung entirely at any service in St. Patrick's. The programme of the music follows:

Proper of mass.....Gregorian
Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus.....S. Hittterer
Offertory, "O Salutaris".....J. C. Ungerer
Postlude—Toccata, Fugue.....J. S. Bach

During the mass, which was celebrated by Archbishop Farley, Mgr. Lavelle read the Pope's message, which translated is as follows:

"Since nothing can be nearer our heart than the desire to see the honor and adoration due to the sacrament of divine love extended and increased more and more every day, we are ever ready to use our authority to promote whatever tends to foster this devotion. Wherefore we indeed have rejoiced to learn of the proposed eucharistic congress to be held the coming month in the City of New York, under the auspices of its illustrious Archbishop, our venerable brother, John M. Farley, who has invoked our paternal interest in this important event. Most willingly and most gladly do we approve of this excellent means of eliciting a public manifestation of the living faith and profound piety which must needs draw down from our Lord blessings in abundance.

"Furthermore, to all who are interested in the congress, as a pledge of divine favor we impart the apostolic benediction and at the same time lay open to them the treasures of the Church. Confiding, therefore, in the mercy of Almighty God and in the authority of His blessed Apostles, Peter and Paul, we graciously in the Lord grant a plenary indulgence to all the faithful who take part in the congress, provided they go to confession and receive holy communion worthily, and on any day during the congress devoutly visit a church, praying before the blessed sacrament for the liberty and exaltation of the Catholic Church and of the apostolic see, the extirpation of heresies, the conversion of sinners, and the concord of all Christian powers; to the faithful of the city as well as of the ecclesiastical province of New York who may be prevented from attending the congress, but who will present themselves with it in spirit and be interested in its proceedings, we concede a partial indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines provided they visit a church on any day during the congress, praying before the blessed sacrament according to the intentions mentioned above; finally, a partial indulgence of 300 days may be gained by all who assist at the congress as well as by all the faithful of the city and ecclesiastical province of New York who at least contrite of heart visit a church on any day of the congress, praying before the blessed sacrament according to the intentions already indicated. These indulgences, plenary and partial, are applicable to the souls in purgatory.

"Anything to the contrary notwithstanding. These presents having force for this year only."

Vicar General Mooney, who delivered the sermon, said, in part:

"The twentieth century feels that it has the material well in hand and indulges in the hope, almost certainty, that its secrets will be revealed before another century dawns. It is putting forth gigantic efforts to unravel the mysteries of the world around it and finds its satisfaction in these efforts. Will it succeed or fail in its labors? No one can tell. One thing can be told, however, whether success or failure crosses its labors, it will not be happy.

"Happiness is of the spirit, not of the body and its earthly environment. This is the truth we have to make known to the twentieth century. We are part of it. Our faith within its bosom will affect us, and we shall affect it profoundly. It pretends indifference to our existence as Catholics, but nothing is more certain than the fact that it must take account of the faith which we profess.

"The world is all for material success to-day; but when it discovers that 'not by bread alone doth man live, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God,' it will turn to better things and long for the eucharist, the bread of eternal life. It is the glory of the Church that in all ages she has had the guardianship of Jesus present."

In the afternoon session, held in Cathedral College Hall, Father James Dougherty of St. Gabriel's Church aroused the members of the congress to enthusiastic approval when he called attention to events in France, saying:

"My understanding is that this is a representative congress, and in view of the priests and the nuns of France I would wish that the French Government should through us learn that in the land of absolute religious liberty we protest against her action."

When the applause was over the President of the congress, Bishop Maes, said that, as the congress was not fully representative, in that many were still to arrive, the matter might be delayed until their coming. Continuing, he said that his heart was in such a declaration to France from the Catholics of a Government of true religious liberty.

A message of thanks was sent to the Pope for his message. The Rev. R. Neagle of Malden, Mass., read a paper on "Attendance at Mass," and the Rev. John J. Frawley of Brooklyn spoke on pastoral visitation and open churches. Archbishop Elder, who is eighty-six years old, also spoke.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

LYMAN-MUNSON.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—The first of the notable Autumn weddings here took place at the Madison Avenue Reformed Church this evening when Miss Harriet Munson, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Munson, was married to Robert Hunt Lyman of New York, the Rev. Dr. Edward P. Johnson of the First Reformed Church officiating.

The bridesmaids were Miss Amy Treadwell Munson, a sister of the bride; Miss Alice La Dow, and Miss Eleanor Bennett of Albany; Miss Marion Celora Todd of Holyoke, Mass., and Miss Elizabeth Wardourn of Baltimore. Ervin B. Hawkins was best man, and the ushers were Louis De Foe of New York, Noel Sisson Bennett, Lemuel W. Gorham, and William H. Van Dyke of Albany, and Edward G. Munson, 2nd, Paul B. Munson, and Samuel Lyman Munson, Jr., three brothers of the bride.

Mr. Lyman is a Yale man, and one of the editors of The New York World. During the ceremony "Brave Mother Yale" was played in honor of his Alma Mater. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman left for Old Point Comfort, Va., and they will make their home at 204 West Seventieth Street, New York.

TALK OF THE DAY.

It seemed like a new and possibly truthful story when it was dropped into a political bunch at the Hoffman House which was discussing the division of the good things that were to come when Parker and Herrick are both elected.

"You fellows remind me of a Sunday school story I once heard," gurgled "Billy" Leary. "It ran something like this. There was a good Sunday school miss who had been telling her class of the joys of heaven and the rewards of a virtuous life. 'And,' she concluded, 'if you are good children here on earth, you may sometime wear a golden crown.' Then the youngster of the class got in his work. 'Huh,' he said, sneeringly, 'that's nothin', for my pa's got one on his tooth now. You fellows had better stick to the crowns that Tammany has been able to give you, for there are none for you in the political hereafter if I can read the signs right."

"Enemies are as certain in the life of a successful politician as are other troubles," said Senator Fassett, now a candidate for Congress in the Elmira District, "and they are part of a politician's assets. I suppose I have fewer of them just now than I have had at any time since I reached manhood. That is, however, due to the fact that I have been out of politics for ten years. If I stayed out for twenty years I don't suppose I would have an enemy. They would all be dead. But if I gave up politics I should lose most of the fun there is in life for me. So there you are."

***

"If I wanted to go hunting, I'll admit I would go to Roosevelt for advice," shouted the Democrat, who was engaged in a heated argument in the Manhattan café yesterday morning with a Republican acquaintance; "but if I wanted sound advice on a business proposition, it would be Judge Parker I would seek, and you can't make me believe there's a sensible Republican who would not make the same choice as between the two men. And that's why I am for Parker for President this trip."

***

"I was down on Park Place on a little business with one of the firms that deal in fireworks," said J. B. McIntosh, the Denver banker, "and casually congratulated the head of the house on the business he was to have as a result of the political campaign.

"'Thank you for your good wishes,' was the laughing reply; 'but you haven't heard of any of the men in our line who have been making extravagant contributions to the campaign funds of either party on the strength of the powder that is to be burned this year, have you? Let me assure you that from the present outlook we shall sell more firecrackers and skyrockets, Roman candles, and nigger chasers to the people of the South for their Christmas celebrations than we shall to both of the great political parties for their out of door hurrahs this year. From a pyrotechnical standpoint, I'm afraid this campaign is going to be a failure.'"

"Ned" Gilmore, one of the managers of the Academy of Music, was telling of the sensation he and a friend created a score of years ago or so when, on the day of the parade of the Coaching Club, they had driven a four-in-hand team of mules hitched to a road coach down Fifth Avenue from the Park to the old Brunswick Hotel, and ventured the opinion that this was the first and only time that mules were used with all the trappings that belonged to a fashionable turn-out.

"Now, don't go and bet on that," remarked a Georgian who was of the party, "for you would be sure to lose. Major Henson, Sah, a resident of our State, has driven a team of mules for years to his private carriage, a regular brougham, Sah, and they may be seen most any day on the streets of Macon, with Major Hanson, President of the Central of Georgia, Sah, handling the reins himself. Besides, Sah, your four-in-hand mule team is not the only one of its kind, Sah, for the Eaton brothers out in Peoria, Ill., had a team that they drove to a tally ho with as much style as the City of Chicago could afford. New York is not the whole thing, I assure you, Sah, and when it comes to style the rest of the country has to be heard from. Why, they actually admire the mule in the great West and the still greater South, Sah!"

"A sure sign that the season in the country is ended," said the observant man at the Buckingham yesterday, as his gaze wandered for an instant from the procession of altar boys, priests, and prelates wending its brilliant way to the cathedral, to a string of closely blanketed horses that were being ridden or led by grooms up the avenue to the stables of their owner on some one of the side streets near Central Park. "Those seven horses make a total of twenty-three that I have seen pass here within the hour this morning. It is the rear guard of society on its way back from the Summer capital at Newport."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are arranging for a stay in the Adirondacks at Sagamore Lodge. They were in New York yesterday. There will be a large house party, and among the guests will be Willing Spencer of Philadelphia.

***

Mrs. Ogden Goelet will remain in town until the arrival of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, from England. Her future plans are not yet decided.

***

The wedding of Miss Judith C. Adams, daughter of the late Charles H. Adams, and Edmund C. Converse, Jr., will take place at All Souls' Church on Nov. 9.

***

Among those who have returned to town are Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Olyphant and Miss Amy Olyphant. They have closed their New London cottage for the season.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Eben Wright of Boston are visiting Mrs. Pell, Mrs. Wright's mother, at her place on the Hudson.

***

Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin has rented her residence and taken an apartment at the Madison Square for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Thomas have taken apartments at the St. Regis, and it is rumored that Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will have apartments also at the same hotel.

***

The wedding of Miss Quackenbos, eldest daughter of Prof. and Mrs. John D. Quackenbos, and Ralph B. Coit will take place at the Church of the Incarnation Oct. 25.

***

Mrs. Richard Gambrill is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster at Lenox.

***

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt did not accompany her husband on his present visit to this country. He is over for a flying trip. Yesterday, after landing, he took luncheon at Sherry's with his son, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, who arrived yesterday from Europe, have gone to Hyde Park-on-the-Hudson.

***

Mrs. William P. Douglas arrived in New York, after a Summer at Bar Harbor. Mrs. Douglas and Miss Douglas will be at Tuxedo this Autumn.

***

The marriage of Arthur Fortunatus Cosby of this city to Miss Virginia Rolette Dousman will be celebrated at Villa Louis, Prairie du Chien, Wis., next Saturday, at 5 o'clock. The wedding will take place on the grounds at Villa Louis, the old Dousman homestead, the wedding party returning to the house for the reception. The Bishop of La Crosse will officiate. The bride will be given away by her brother and attended by her sister, Miss Juliet Dousman, as maid of honor. The bridesmaids are all from St. Paul and include the Misses Clara and Ruth Hill, Miss Ferguson, Miss Furness, Miss Finch, and Miss Judith Dousman. The bridegroom will be attended by his brother, Frank C. Cosby of Boston, as best man, and among the ushers will be Capt. R. D. Sturgis, United States Army; Robert Decatur Stewart and Homer Clark of St. Paul, N. P. Dodge, Jr., of Omaha, Neb., and Farnham Yardly and R. W. G. Welling of New York.

Major Adams Dies from Injuries.

GUARDSMEN SCENT BOW BETWEEN TWO GENERALS

Say That Orders from Roe and Henry Conflict.

DON'T KNOW WHICH TO OBEY

Adjt. Gen. Henry's Order, They Think, Asks Officers to Ignore Order from His Superior.

What some National Guard officers regard as an excellent basis for war, if not in itself an actual declaration of war, between Major Gen. Charles F. Roe, who commands the Guard, and Adjt. Gen. Nelson H. Henry, has been made by two orders—one from each officer. The first—Gen. Roe's—orders the officers of the Guard to submit suggestions for a new military code. Gen. Henry's order, as some of the officers construe it, directs the officers to pay no attention to Gen. Roe's order.

These officers think that Gen. Roe would be amply justified in preferring charges against his subordinate. Meanwhile they are desirous of knowing just how they stand, for they don't want to disobey orders.

On Nov. 10 last Gen. Henry, by direction of the Governor, issued an order appointing a board of officers, of which Gen. Roe was President. This board was directed to consider the general militia law of the United States and any proposed amendments to the military code of the State. Other officers on the board besides Gen. Roe were Col. Frederick Phisterer, Col. Daniel Appleton, Col. W. W. Ladd, Judge Advocate; Col. W. H. Chapin, Col. E. E. Britton, Lieut. Col. N. B. Thurston, and Col. J. H. Lloyd.

In accordance with its instructions the board went to work, but found that the old code was so extensively amended that it caused the greatest confusion. The board in consequence had a new code printed in the rough. This was submitted to the commanding officers of the different organizations throughout the Guard for their views upon it before it was finally submitted to the Governor through the Adjutant General. With the copies of the proposed code Gen. Roe sent out General Order 13, which includes this paragraph:

Officers are invited to forward to these headquarters suggestions as to amendments of the military code through the channel for commanding officers to express an opinion thereon, and finally for the information of the board, convened to amend the code. To organizations have been transmitted copies of a provisional military code in part prepared by a sub-committee of the board, for the convenience of the board and as a working basis; it must be understood that the whole of this work is tentative and has not been acted upon by the board. Suggestions should reach these headquarters not later than Oct. 31 next.

Adjt. Gen. Phisterer signed this order. Officers at once began to prepare suggestions, but on Monday last, on reporting at the armories for headquarters business, they received the following communication sent by Gen. Henry from Albany:

I have the honor to call your attention to the second paragraph of General Order 13, Headquarters National Guard, Sept. 17, 1904, and the fact that copies of a provisional military code have been transmitted to you. In order that there shall be no misunderstanding with reference to the status of the provisional military code, I desire to inform you that this document was conceived, prepared, and issued without the knowledge or advisement of this office. I request, in view of the above facts, that officers refrain from all expressions of opinion regarding the same until the subject and document have received most thorough and careful consideration.

One Major said yesterday:

"Gen. Henry has in my opinion committed a grave blunder in requesting officers to ignore an order from the General commanding the National Guard. If Gen. Henry's action is not disrespect to a superior officer, then I don't know what it is, and if discipline in the Guard is to be maintained he should be called to account for it."

Gen. Henry was out of the city yesterday. Gen. Roe declined absolutely to discuss the matter in any form.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Daniel F. Minahan.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 27.—Daniel F. Minahan, died last night at his home here at the age of fifty-seven years. He was born in Limerick, Ireland, coming to this country in his infancy. He was educated in St. Vincent's College, New York. As an engineer and contractor he was employed by the Dutchess and Columbia Railroad, the Waterbury and Watertown Railroad, and the Connecticut and Western Railroad. He constructed the waterworks system of Lebanon, Penn; the sewer system at Alliance, Ohio; the City Hall and Court House at Springfield, and also twenty-two miles of the Springfield and Jackson narrow-gauge road. He also executed extensive public works at Hamilton, Lima, and Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. Minahan served in the civil war in the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and also of Harmony Council, O. U. A. M., of Orange. He was a member of the congregation of St. John's Church, Orange. A widow and ten children survive him. His brother, Thomas B. Minahan, of New York, is President of the National organization of the Federation of Catholic Societies.

George Starr Hickok.

George Starr Hickok, who for nearly half a century had been connected with the National Park Bank, and had been its cashier during the last sixteen years, died yesterday morning at his residence, 752 St. Nicholas Avenue, in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

Mr. Hickok's association with the bank covered, within a few months, the entire existence and history of that institution, from the time when, as a State bank, it commenced business, at the corner of Beekman Street and Theatre Alley. He entered its service as a junior clerk, and continued in various positions until he was appointed cashier, in 1888, succeeding E. K. Wright, who then became Vice President.

Feeling that his duties as cashier were greater than he could well attend to, Mr. Hickok tendered his resignation from that office last January, and was succeeded by Edwin J. Baldwin, the assistant cashier. Mr. Hickok had been in failing health for over a year.

He was a member of the Congregational Club, the Sons of the American Revolution, and the Chamber of Commerce.

Anthony Schulte.

Anthony Schulte, who owned two cigar stores in Park Row and six more in other parts of the city, died suddenly at the Hotel Belleclaire, Broadway and Seventy-seventh Street, yesterday morning. He was born in Detroit in 1858, and attended public school in that city until he was fourteen years old, when he entered the employ of one of the largest cigarmakers in Key West and proceeded to learn the business from the bottom. In 1882 he came to this city and opened his first cigar store in French's Hotel, now the site of the Pulitzer Building. Mr. Schulte was a member of the New York Athletic Club and the Arion Club. He leaves a wife and four daughters. Mr. Schulte lived at 38 West Ninety-sixth Street, but he had closed his home and taken temporary apartments, where he died, while making arrangements for a trip to Arizona, on which he would have started within a few days.

BOBOLINK BOBBLES NO MORE.

At Least, Not for Josten, Whom It Waked for Eight Years.

Dire sorrow has come into the life of Peter Josten of 186 Avenue A, for the law, as represented by Magistrate Flammer in the Yorkville Court yesterday has taken from him his beloved alarm clock bobolink.

For eight years Josten has had a pet bobolink, which he trained to wake him every morning at 7 o'clock. Before he discovered the bobolink alarm, he had a 95-cent clock that exploded when it liked, and refused to be comforted except with a hammer. On one occasion he had lost his job through its going off too late, and on a more memorable occasion when it had gone off too soon a man had come to pay a debt of $100 and found him gone to work. The man never came back.

But the alarm clock bobolink, Josten explained, was a blessing to the worn-out city toilers. Every morning at 7 he was awakened with the dulcet boboling of the bobolink in his ears. For eight years his waking dreams had been pastoral lyrics until a policeman came along and heard the bobolink boboling in a cage with some other bobolinks that Josten had been trying to train as alarm clocks. The policeman reported to the Game Warden, and now—

"Take the other three birds, Judge," pleaded Josten, "but give me back my pet bobolink!"

Magistrate Flammer, while sympathetic, said that the laws were not made in Parnassus. He held Josten for Special Sessions under $100 bail, and sent the bobolinks to the State Game Protective Association.

THE CAT WAS UP THE FLUE.

Miss Moran's Cat, and May Have Been a Tortoise Shell, But ——.

A sharp ring at the telephone in the office of the Hudson County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Jersey City, called August Deterle to the instrument yesterday.

"What's wanted?" he asked.

"The cat's up the flue. Please send some one around right away," was the answer.

"Cat's up a flue," echoed Deterle; great place for a cat. Who are you, pray, and where are you?"

"I am Miss Mary Moran of 110 Sussex Street. Please hurry. I'm afraid the cat will be choked to death with soot."

A policeman who was sent to the house was shown to the fireplace, and had no difficulty in locating the cat. Then he tried to get it down. He first employed moral suasion, but pussy was deaf to all coaxings. Then he thrust his arm up the flue and succeeded in grabbing the cat by the tail. This enabled the animal to double on him. But with hand badly scratched, the unfaltering guardian of the law succeeded in dragging her from her hiding place.

The cat was covered with soot, most of which it shook off on the carpet, much to Miss Moran's regret. The policeman thought that the cat might once have been a tortoise shell, but he wasn't sure.

IN THE SHOPS.

Not in seventeen years has there been so decided a change in the fashions as will be seen in an opening sale of imported gowns to-day. There are many Directoire effects, long fronts, fitted girdles, high, full sleeves, many of these set out with reeds, the material full from the shoulder seam to a point below the elbow, where the sleeve, if it is long, is close fitting. The bust is somewhat higher to the bodice, and there are charming bertha effects. Much lace is used, and the handwork is seen in combination with the lace and appliqués, rather than in solid embroidery, which belongs more to the finer tub gowns of Summer. There are many beautiful colors and color combinations, and the light tones are deeper than hitherto. Dark bodices with lighter skirts also make for change.

***

Black and white is always good, and it is seldom that the combination is missing in an exhibition of handsome gowns. One of these is of black velvet, with a petticoat front of white chiffon and Irish lace. The bodice is charming, cut out a little below the throat at the back and only a little lower in the front—a charming style for the woman who can wear it, but more trying than a full decolletage. At the back is the Directoire train from the waist, leaving exposed the broad petticoat front of chiffon and lace. The ruching is outlined with morning glories embroidered in tones of lavender, the sleeves are finished similarly, and a little chou of black velvet on the corsage has a rhinestone buckle of old-time effect in the centre.

***

A gown of deep bronze-pink silk has a charmingly embroidered petticoat of cream lace, the embroidery in French designs, narrow pale blue ribbon, applied in festoon effects, joining clusters of chiffon-embroidered flowers in pinks and blues and delicate French colors. Lines of the silk are set in fancifully across the lace petticoat. At the sides the silk is carried back to the train in slight panniers, the upper part in corded tucks. More of these cords finish the tops of the sleeves. The lines of the gown, with the graceful slope of the train, are charming.

***

There is a petticoat front of repoussé lace in a mustard-colored frock of chiffon velvet which is charming. This gown has the pointed Directoire bodice, and set at the side of the front, where it fastens, are two big turquois buttons. Finishing the decolletage is a fold of pale-blue velvet.

***

An outdoor fur suit has the skirt of white cloth, with deep tucks and broad bands of snow-white fur. There is a short, round jacket of the white fur, open at the front to show a blouse vest in tapestry effects.

***

There is a short black astrakhan jacket—a round straight jacket—to a black suit. The skirt is long and set around the lower edge with two narrow bands of the astrakhan.

***

Baby krimmer is the fur which is made up with cloth into another suit. The bell-shaped skirt is of the krimmer, with an overdress of the cloth falling over the fur in loose panels. There is a short, straight little jacket of the krimmer, the facing of this at the front very pretty shirred silk to match. Open, the jacket shows the full soft front of the cloth. There are green velvet collar and cuffs to the jacket, these embroidered with gold. If little, short, straight fur jackets like this are to be found this Winter, they will be the most sensible thing that can be worn in furs for general use for the average woman. They are serviceable, have a certain jaunty style, and will not need to be remade every season.

***

What is called a "Josephine" gown is of pale pink and lace. It is princess in effect, with a lace jacket reaching several inches below the waist, and there are many full ruffles of the lace around the lower edge of the skirt.

***

A striking gown is of white and black chiffon and lace. The bodice is of white with jetted black set around it in deep festoons, while there are straps and rosettes of black satin ribbons over the shoulders. The upper part of the skirt is of the white chiffon, with long, fancy points or panels of lace and point d'esprit running down into the lower part of the skirt, which is of the black chiffon, finished with innumerable narrow, satin-edge ribbons.

***

A simply made gray gown has a charming trimming of white lace in a fernlike leaf design, set with cut-steel beads. This outlines the lower edge of the skirt and jacket.

$20,000 FOR HIGH SCHOOL.

Cornelius S. Stryker Makes Bequest for Gravesend Building and Library.

A will giving to the Board of Education of the City of New York $10,000 for the erection of a high school in Gravesend, and an additional $10,000 for the establishment of a free library in the same school, was filed in the office of the Surrogate of Kings County yesterday afternoon.

The will was made by Cornelius S. Stryker, a member of an old Dutch family that has lived in the ancient township of Gravesend for more than two centuries. The date of the will was Oct. 24, 1901, and the maker, a farmer, died last week.

Mr. Stryker directed that his funeral be conducted very simply and the no eulogy be pronounced upon him.

The Treadwell Is the Best.

Copper costs the Boston and Montana 7½ cents a pound to produce. It costs the Anaconda 11½ cents and the average of all the Amalgamated companies 9½ cents. The Greene Consolidated say they are trying to get their cost down to 8 cents.

Copper is produced on the Verde Copper Belt at three and a half cents a pound—less than half what it costs to produce it anywhere else in the world.

The George A. Treadwell Mining Company has by far the largest property of any company operating on the Verde Copper Belt—several times as large as that of its near neighbor, the famous United Verde—and the TREADWELL property is as rich as the richest. As soon as the big smelting plant of the TREADWELL COMPANY which it is now erecting is completed it will be one of the largest copper producers in the country, and will be able to produce copper cheaper than any other copper producer, except its own neighbor, the United Verde, with whom it shares the richness and all the advantages of the richest copper district in the world.

Other copper producers have great and valuable properties. Other copper stocks are good investments, but

THE TREADWELL IS THE BEST.

BANKERS AND BROKERS.

Incomes should be safeguarded in the soundest investments, but it does not necessarily follow that the high-priced security is always the soundest investment. There are bonds of many street railways, lighting and coal companies, selling upon or approaching a full 5% income yield, having security as great as those of many of the bonds of railroads, (selling upon a 4% basis) with the distinct advantage in the former case of better opportunity for increasing market value.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Easy, 1 1-4@2 Per Cent.

The News and Prices a Little Less Favorable, but No Decided Change in Either—Crop Conditions Not Controlling.

Yesterday's financial news was not bad, but it was a little mixed, even if favorable interpretation be placed upon it. The weather and crop reports left nothing reasonably to be desired, but the produce market turned stronger, and the stock market moved with that entire independence of a primary factor which has been characteristic of this year. Railway earnings showed less preponderance of good statements than on Monday. Southern Railway and Central of Georgia made good reports, but Atchison made an August statement in singular contrast with its annual report. President Ripley makes a call for new capital to meet demands of increasing traffic, but the August net shows a decrease of $237,852. However, August was better than July, and September and following months are expected to be better yet, while a scattered month or two's decrease is not inconsistent with a larger growth from year to year. Sterling was decidedly stronger, but as the money market was impassive it seemed an incident of steamer day rather than any controlling indication regarding the relations of international money markets. The announcement of the sale of the entire $9,000,000 Panhandle bonds by two leading houses, and which were offered only last week, bears almost equally upon the money, security, and commodity markets. It is difficult to deny the inference of ample funds to take up good offerings, thus breaking that dead-lock which so long kept railways from making purchases necessary to the prosperity of the industrial department.

There is nothing depressing about this summary, and prices were not depressed, but the buoyancy seemed less spontaneous in tone, and more restricted in extent, although the volume was a little larger. Union Pacific and the Steel preferred were the leaders, and both were strong upon familiar considerations which rob their rise of the interest of novelty. There was unaccustomed activity in Ontario and Western, with reports of harmony and bids for its dividend. The pronounced activity in Union Pacific convertibles continued, with a rise of ⅝ upon sales of 1,561. Oregon Short Lines rose ⅝ to a new maximum, upon sales of 171. In both these bonds the buying was said to be by those who are always willing to exchange a dollar for larger value, and who seldom part with dollars upon other terms. Northern Securities belongs to this group, and it is a coincidence that it also reached the year's maximum in anticipation of some favorable sequel to the suit to prevent liquidation upon the plan under the Supreme Court's decree. The Government is practically a third party to these proceedings, and it is obscure how the favorable indication of the price movement is to be realized. Metropolitan Securities was strong despite rumors of a call to pay dividends upon Metropolitan Railway, which naturally was strong also. Brooklyn Rapid Transit belongs to this combination, and it was also strong, presumably upon announcement of the approaching opening of the railways across the Williamsburg Bridge. Unless the riders across the bridge to Manhattan are to be supposed to walk upon their arrival, there would seem to be an equal argument in favor of Metropolitan and Brooklyn, as each feeds the other, and their connection is hardly less a factor in the traction situation than the opening of the Interborough in the same week. Quite possibly Metropolitan will gain more than it will lose by new currents in travel, which no one can forecast with entire accuracy.

Here to Settle Chicago Traction Row.

J. J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust Company of Chicago, arrived in this city yesterday and held a series of long conferences regarding the plan for a settlement of the Chicago traction situation. Those whom he saw included R. R. Govin of H. B. Hollins & Co., James Blair, and members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. It was stated at the end of the day that while progress toward a solution of the difficulties had been made, no plan even in a general way had been considered. It may be some weeks before one will be ready for publication.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Harriman Stocks Strong — Interesting Movement in Metropolitan Securities —Steel's Advance Continues.

Harriman issues, including Northern Securities, were active and strong features in yesterday's market. Union Pacific and the bonds of that system were all in considerable demand, and the coincident strength of Northern Securities was pointed to as confirming the reports that a way would be evolved by which the Northern Securities dividends can be distributed. The report has been current for a long time. Union sold up to 102¼ and closed at 101½, with a net gain of an even point. In many quarters still higher prices are being predicted for the stock. In Southern Pacific much less strength was shown. In fact, it lost most of its early gain and showed only a small net advance. It was said that the books of the specialists in the stock showed many more selling than buying orders, from which it was inferred that many recent buyers were inclined to get out of the stock. The character of the orders with the specialists are often taken as a fairly good indication of the probable course of a stock.

***

No Halt in Steel's Advance.

The conspicuous strength displayed by Steel preferred was reflected in the rest of the list by more or less substantial advances in a number of issues, but few held their own as well as Steel, which was the leader not only in strength, but in activity as well. It sold up to 70¾, and closed at 70½, with a net gain of 1¼ points. It was said that there was no important buying of the stock yesterday and that the advance was due principally to short covering by traders, but if such was the character of the buying the price was certainly well maintained. There seemed little desire on the part of recent purchasers to take profits on their holdings. Some attention was given to John W. Gates's bullish remarks on the steel situation and the market generally. His firm was among the most active buyers of stocks.

***

Afternoon Reaction.

In the late dealings some of the traders who had bought stocks early were selling to take their profits, and this caused a general easing off from the day's best prices. In some stocks the market was said to be quite sensitive to this selling. Disappointment on the part of some that the public continued to ignore the inducements which the market was offering was given in some quarters as the reason for the selling which caused the afternoon reaction. The decline was general, but in none of the active stocks was it sufficient to eliminate all the morning's gains.

***

Metropolitan Rises After Sharp Drop.

Considerable interest was taken in the selling of Metropolitan securities by Provost Brothers, who are credited with being well informed on the market position of the local traction interests. It is recalled that they were particularly prominent in the accumulation of Third Avenue stock at the time that property was acquired by the Metropolitan interests. The selling by Provost and others drove the stock down sharply in the early trading, but that some at least of the selling was for short account was indicated by the way the stock turned around and rose 5 points from the low of the day, closing with a net gain of 2 points. One version of the decline was that it was engineered by the controlling interest in the property in order to shake out a number of holders whose company was not desired.

***

London Buys Northern Securities.

London sent over high prices for a number of stocks and followed them up by buying a considerable amount of stock on balance, including some Northern Securities. Before the opening here the latter stock was quoted in London at the equivalent of 106, an advance of 1½ points over Monday's price. London had had the tip to buy Northern Securities for several days, and it was apparently anxious to get the stock yesterday. It was believed, however, that much of the London demand originated on this side.

COTTON OIL EARNINGS.

Sufficient to Meet All Charges and Preferred Dividend, but Payment on Common in Doubt.

In well-informed quarters the belief was expressed yesterday that the earnings of the American Cotton Oil Company for the year ended Aug. 31 last were not sufficient to insure the declaration of the usual dividend on the company's common stock. Thus far no formal action on the subject has been taken by the Directors, and, in fact, the question of a dividend will in usual course not come before them until their November meeting, but it is officially admitted that the earnings of the company fell off during the past year, owing to the general conditions which unfavorably affected nearly all industrial companies. Assurance is given that the earnings have been sufficient to meet all charges, including those for maintenance and for the payment of the regular preferred dividend, but it is believed that the surplus applicable to common dividends will be small. For several years the common has received dividends at the rate of 4 per cent. a year.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

Thirty shares of National City Bank stock sold on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 279 and twenty shares at 277½.

Topeka, Kan., dispatches state that the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company's shops at Goodland, which have been closed down since Aug. 1, have been reopened.

According to Sharon, Penn., dispatches the open hearth department of the Carnegie Steel Company at South Sharon will resume operations next Saturday after a long shutdown.

Exports of general merchandise at the Port of New York for the week decreased $3,081,515 as compared with the previous week, but decreased $405,796 as compared with the corersponding week last year.

Improving Dining Car Service.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has made several important improvements in its dining car service, wiping out a small yearly profit and creating a not too large deficit, in order to give a very much better service. The system now has twenty-five dining cars in daily use. Within the past few months the wages of the stewards have been increased. A traveling chef has been employed, whose sole duty it is to inspect the kitchens and instruct the cooks in their work.

STEEL EARNINGS IMPROVING.

Expected That September Quarter Will Nearly Equal July Quarter's Record.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation was held yesterday, and while no official information was given out, it was learned that the earnings for the quarter which will end Sept. 30 will be very much better than had been expected when the quarter began. At that time it was estimated that they would not exceed $14,000,000, but there is good reason to believe that they will be about $18,000,000. This would be only slightly less than the earnings for the July quarter, which were $19,250,000.

The decrease in steel exports during August will, it is said, be more than made good during October, and it is stated that the export figures for the last quarter should show better results than those of any other quarter of the current year.

There was a rumor in the Street that the difficulty between the corporation and its employes at Youngstown, Ohio, and Girard, Penn., would be settled because of political pressure brought to bear on the various interests, and that Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and Senator Dick of Ohio were making efforts to secure a conference between the men and the company. Officials of the corperation refused to discuss the rumors.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Money was in stronger demand in the market to-day, and the supplies were large. Discounts were a shade easier.

Trading on the Stock Exchange opened cheerful and moderately active. Contango rates generally were light. Consols were quietly steady and closed firm. Home rails quietly steady and undergrounds were in request, in view of the early electrification of the systems.

Americans opened steady and with a firmer tendency on the favorable crop reports, hardened later on Continental support, and closed steady.

Grand Trunk rose sharply on bear covering in anticipation of the revenue statement.

Japanese were firm. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 97.

Closing prices:

Discount rates: Short bills, 2½ per cent.; three months' bills, 3 per cent.

Payments to Atlantic Coast Syndicate.

Regarding the report of a payment of dividends by J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers of the Atlantic Coast Line underwriting syndicate, to the members of the syndicate, a statement was made public yesterday that the syndicate members had received back from J. P. Morgan & Co. 60 per cent. of their subscription, paid in four installments of 15 per cent. each. With 40 per cent. still paid in, it was said, the disbursements made by the managers can hardly be regarded in the nature of a dividend, but it is expected that the members of the syndicate will receive back the entire amount paid in, together with some profit on the transaction. The syndicate agreement expires Feb. 25, 1905.

Big Land Company Incorporated.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 27.—The Sierra Madre Land Company of Stamford, with a capital of $15,000,000, applied for incorporation papers at the office of the Secretary of State to-day, a fee of $3,500 being paid. This is the largest corporation formed in this State under the general law, other companies of very large capitalization having been formed under special acts of the Legislature. The incorporators are Clarence C. Chase, Norton Chase, John H. Martin, and Egbert J. Gates, all of Stamford.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

The activity displayed in the trading in unlisted securities yesterday was on a very large scale, and resulted in a material betterment of quotations. New high records for the year were recorded in Northern Securities and Greene Consolidated Copper. Mackay Companies stocks were moderately active and strong, but Havana Tobacco issues were weak, and showed abrupt declines due to the trouble now being experienced about stamps on cigar boxes.

***

NORTHERN SECURITIES was the feature of the session, with the very large total of 26,000 shares traded in. Of this amount about 12,000 shares were bought for London account, which is taken to indicate that some way has been found to distribute a cash dividend. The first sale was made at an advance of ½, and thereafter the price rose steadily and rapidly to a new high record for the year of 106¾. The final sale was within an eighth of the best for the day.

***

GREENE CONSOLIDATED COPPER took second place in activity and strength after Northern Securities, and advanced to the new record for the current year of 18¾. The buying was said to be for inside interests due to the recent opening of the richest and largest bodies of ores yet encountered on the property and for short interests in the stock.

***

ONTARIO AND WESTERN.—Bunnell, Buchanan & Co. bid 1 per cent. for the dividends for the next six months on 500 shares of this stock, but no one seemed inclined to sell.

***

The principal transactions in 100-share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Three Apartment Houses to be Built on Large Plot at Riverside Drive and Ninety-third Street—Car Stable Blocks May Be Sold in Near Future—Day's Dealings by Brokers.

The Realty Mortgage Company, a corporation controlled by A. L. Mordecai & Son, has purchased from Robert A. Chesebrough the southeast corner of Ninety-third Street and Riverside Drive, a plot of eleven and a half lots, fronting 217 feet on Ninety-third Street by about 145 feet on Riverside Drive by 144 feet on the easterly line. The Realty Mortgage Company has resold this property to the West Side Construction Company, of which Jacob Axelrod is President, for improvement, with three high-class apartment houses. On the plot on the south side of Ninety-third Street, 117 feet east of Riverside Drive, 100 feet front by 144 feet deep, there will be erected two six-story elevator apartment houses, with three suites on a floor. On the Riverside Drive corner, 117 feet on Ninety-third Street by about 145 feet deep, a nine-story elevator apartment house will be built, with accommodations for five families on a floor.

To Sell Car Stable Blocks.

The announcement that a committee composed of H. H. Vreeland, John D. Crimmins, and Paul D. Cravath has been chosen to supervise the sale of some of the realty holdings of the New York City Street Railway Company is taken to mean that the company is now considering seriously the plan to dispose of some of its properties—particularly the old car barns on the west side of Madison Avenue, between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Streets. If satisfactory arrangement can be made for the storage of cars elsewhere on less valuable ground it is also probable that the committee will decide to sell the block bounded by Fourth and Lexington Avenues, Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets. That the company would abandon these properties has been understood for several years, and numerous offers for them have been made by real estate operators and syndicates, but the fact that they were still needed by the company, thus making it impossible to guarantee possession on any exact date, has effectually prevented any sale being made. The old Third Avenue Railroad power house at the Bowery and Bayard Street is another property which will be put on the market.

Operators Sell 142d Street Plot.

Schmeidler & Bachrach have sold the plot 100 by 99.11 on the north side of One Hundred and Forty-second Street, 200 feet east of Eighth Avenue, to S. Parnass and George Dillon, who will erect thereon two six-story flats.

Bernhard Freund has bought from Eduardo H. Gato 304, 306, and 308 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, three five-story flats on plot 75 by 99.11, 75 feet west of Eighth Avenue.

The firm of Lionel Froelich sold 174 West One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, 25 by 100, vacant, for Cornelius H. Carling to a client.

St. Nicholas Avenue Purchase.

H. C. Senior & Co. have sold for James Seward Burtis the five-story flat 418 St. Nicholas Avenue, near One Hundred and Thirtieth Street, 26.9 by 90 by 100, to a Mr. Wecksler for investment.

Warren & Skillin have sold for Henry Lilly to Charles Wynne the five-story triple apartment house 496 West One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, adjoining the corner of Amsterdam Avenue.

A. J. Levy & Co. have sold for Lena Gerlitz to Louis Meryash the five-story flat 73 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, 20.6 by 100.11.

Taylor & Douglass have sold to James Ferguson for Philip Smith the plot 50 by 100 feet on the north side of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, 125 feet east of St. Ann's Avenue.

Weisberger & Kaufman have sold for John J. Dillon to Benedict Brothers 7 West One Hundred and Third Street, a five-story flat, 27 by 100.

Buyers of Houses Recently Sold.

August P. Montant is the buyer of the dwelling 31 West Fiftieth Street, the sale of which by Charles J. Wittenberg, through the Greene & Taylor Company, was reported yesterday.

Eugene Vallens is the buyer of the dwelling 15 West Ninety-fifth Street, sold recently by Mrs. A. S. Peck.

Upper East Side Building Operations.

Meryash & London have sold to Rod, Greenberg & Berliner six lots on One Hundredth Street, between First and Second Avenues, 150 by 100.11. The buyers will erect four six-story flats on the property.

Jacob Rosenbaum and M. Ellenbogen & Co. have sold for Ravitch Brothers the plot, 150 by 100.11, on the south side of Ninety-ninth Street, 150 feet east of Madison Avenue. The buyer, a builder, will erect four six-story flats on the pappertty.

Samuel Orgenstein has secured a building loan of $112,000 from the Realty Mortgage Company on the property, 126 by 94, at the northwest corner of Pleasant Avenue and One Hundred and Sixteenth Street.

Jacob Rosenbaum and M. Ellenbogen & Co. have sold for Joseph Goldfarb 222 and 224 East Ninety-sixth Street, two five-story flats on plot 44 by 100.8.

David Henry has sold for Louis Keller 2,426 Second Avenue, a three-story dwelling on lot, 20 by 80; also, for Frank R. Houghton, 1,052 Intervale Avenue, a three-story, three-family house on lot 21 by 100. The adjoining house, No. 1,050, was sold by the same broker about a week ago.

Resale in the Dyckman Tract.

Max Marx has resold to Benjamin Eichberg and Simon Sichel the plot of about fifteen lots at the northeast corner of Sherman Avenue and Hawthorne Street, 300 by 100 by 200 by 50 by 100 by 110.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY.—MAI A. BAUDOUINE (formerly Mai A. Chatterton,) plaintiff, against GERALDINE BROADBELT and others, defendants.

Pursuant to the judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 26th day of September, 1904, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 161 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 25th day of October, 1904, at 12 o'clock noon, the premises described in said judgment as follows:

All that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City and County and State of New York, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Seventh Street, distant one hundred and seventy-seven (177) feet westerly from the northwesterly corner of Seventh Street and Avenue C; running thence westerly, along the northerly side of Seventh Street, twenty-five (25) feet and nine (9) inches; thence northerly, parallel with Avenue C, and part of the way through the centre of a party wall, ninety-seven (97) feet and six (6) inches, to the centre line of the block; thence easterly, along said centre line, twenty-five (25) feet and nine (9) inches, and thence southerly, and parallel with Avenue C, ninety-seven (97) feet and six (6) inches, to the point or place of beginning, together with all the right, title, and interest of the parties to this action in and to the party wall of the building erected on the premises next adjoining on the east, and being the same premises conveyed to John Geiger by deed of Henry J. Mapes and wife and Nathaniel J. Burchell and wife, dated the 21st day of October, 1865, and recorded in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York on the 7th day of November, 1865, in Liber 943 of Conveyances, Page 498; said lot being located in Section 2, Block No. 440, on the Tax Map of the City of New York, and is known by the street Number 217½ Seventh Street.

Dated New York, August 31st, 1904.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Decision That Collector Must Not Place Value on Goods.

Other Customs Rulings Issued by General Appraisers—List of Protests Overruled.

A decision was handed down by the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustaining a protest by Joseph Harazy of New York. It was written by General Appraiser Hay, and the facts are as follows: An item on the invoice in question was 606 dozen of small pearl crosses, the value of which was advanced by the local Appraiser from 80f. to 150f. a dozen. This advance was sustained by the Board of General Appraisers, and under the law a penalty of 1 per cent. of the total appraised value of the merchandise for each 1 per cent. of advance was assessed. Later it was found that the package contained 200 dozen in excess of the 606 dozen invoiced, and the Collector assessed the penalty against them, too. This action Mr. Hay finds to be illegal, as the 200 dozen had not been entered, so that the appraisal value could not exceed the entered value. He also holds that the Collector has no authority at all to place a value on an article, that being the function of the Appraiser.

In a decision by Judge Byron S. Waite the board overrules a protest by S. Mandelbaum & Co. of New York against the assessment as confectionery at 60 per cent. of small square lozenges of French manufacture known as "Reglisse Florent." The importer claimed that they were dutiable at 25 per cent. as medicinal preparations.

General Appraiser Lunt writes a decision overruling a protest by Edward Hill's Son & Co. against the assessment at 25 per cent. as an acid of an article invoiced as oleine. The importers claimed that it was free as crude soap stock.

A protest by Conron & Co. of New York against the assessment at 25 per cent. as a chemical compound of a mixture of sesame and peanut oils is overruled in a decision written by General Appraiser McClelland. The importers claimed that it should be free, as each of the constituent oils was free of duty.

Protests overruled yesterday were by C. D. Bunker & Co. and Maldonado & Co., San Francisco; the Joseph Lazarus Company, Cincinnati; Hochmeister & Co., Emilio Loughi & Co., the Star Brass Works, and Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; Caroline E. Clarke, Marquette, Mich.; the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Company, Charles H. Wyman & Co., and the Academy of Science of St. Louis, St. Louis, and Seeman Brothers, Adolph Straus & Co., the Eugene Dietzgen Company, Stanley Doggett, Morimura Brothers, B. Illfelder & Co., J. E. Quaintance, and others, Horstmann, Von Hein & Co., (2,) A. Double and others, A. Riegelman, Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, D. S. Hesse & Brother, J. H. Thorp & Co., and Bernhard, Ullmann & Co., New York. Protests sustained were by the American Express Company, George Zucker, Jed Frye & Co., the Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld, Germany; Amerman & Patterson, Ungerer & Co., and Fritzsche Brothers, New York; A. V. Hamburg, Newark, N. J., and P. McGettrick, Burlington, Vt. Protests partially sustained were by B. Illfelder & Co., (2,) Adolph Fricke, Seichow & Richter, Duff & Benton, and others, and James Mawlia, New York; C. H. Wyman & Co., St. Louis, and B. Illfelder & Co., (2,) and George Borgfeldt & Co., (2,) Newport News, Va.

YARNS UP 2 CENTS.

Spinners May Close Mills Until They Get Better Prices.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 27.—Pursuant to a recent call by leading cotton mill men, acting independently of any organization, about fifty spinners, representing a total of 447,404 spindles engaged in the manufacture of hard yarns in North and South Carolina, met here to-day and agreed upon an average increase of about 2 cents over present prices.

It was the unanimous opinion of the manufacturers present that their interests would be best served by confining themselves entirely to one selling house—that is, that no mill would sell through more than one house, and it was agreed further to indorse the idea that the selling house be requested to enter into an agreement with the mill that they would not speculate with the product of the mill which would be sold through their house. After the meeting R. S. Reinhardt, President of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, said:

"We want to get together and agree upon prices at which we will sell our yarns. Then if we can't get the prices we ask we want to arrange to shut down our mills until we can get them. Half of our mills are closed now, and if prices do not improve the other half had as well be closed."

Union Iron Works to be Enlarged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—Various rumors regarding the future of the Union Iron Works were to-day set at rest by C. M. Schwab, who said that the plant would be enlarged and made the finest in the United States, if not in the world. Mr. Schwab and his party will leave for the East to-morrow over the Canadian Pacific Railway.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Out of Town.

TROY, N. Y.—Edward Jones of Troy, a member of the Edward Jones Company, against which creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy about two months ago, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. The liabilities are about $10,000. The schedules do not disclose any assets.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

ELIZABETH F. WALLACE.—Elizabeth F. Wallace, dealer in meat at Peekskill, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, with liabilities of $4,439 and assets of $111, consisting of stock, $20; fixtures, $12; accounts, $75, and cash, $4.

G. FRANKLIN BAILEY.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Alfred Lauterbach receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of G. Franklin Bailey, publisher of Newspaperdom at 150 Nassau Street, on the application of Lyman C. Hershey, President of the Chemical Engraving Company.

UNIQUE BAZAARS.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Unique Bazaars, corporation, with an office at 320 Broadway, this city, and a five and ten cent store at 23 Market Street, Newark, show liabilities of $5,179 and assets of $3,825, cash received from the sale of the stock and fixtures of the business by the receiver.

LEISHIN & DORF.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Charles J. Hirsch receiver of the assets of Leishin & Dorf, cloak manufacturers at 154 Grand Street. It was stated that the stock and fixtures were removed by a City Marshal, and it is believed that there are accounts outstanding to the amount of $5,000.

CHARLES A. AND MARY S. CLEGG.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Harry Balfe receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of Charles A. Clegg, hotelkeeper of Haines Falls, and his wife, Mary S. Clegg. They own the Sunset Park Inn at Haines Falls, one of the largest hotels in the Catskills, which was erected two years ago at a cost of $50,000. It is stated that the real estate is in the name of Mrs. Clegg, but all improvements were made by Mr. Clegg at his own expense. Besides the hotel there are several cottages in the Park. The bond of the receiver in the case of Mr. Clegg is $7,500, and in the case of Mrs. Clegg $5,000.

LOUISE M. WICKES.—Louise M. Wickes, who formerly kept a boarding house at 48 West Twenty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $11,646 and nominal assets of $4,104, in outstanding accounts due her by boarders. She also has 500 shares of stock of the National Safety Third Rail Company and 500 of the Oro Verve Mining and Milling Company, value unknown. She owes $203 to four servants for wages. Among the creditors are George Wickes, $6,150, secured by household furniture, valued at $300; Henry W. Tyler of East Haddam, Conn., $1,000, secured by a $3,000 life insurance policy, and S. H. Stone, $1,833 for rent.

A. V. BENOIT, (CORPORATION.)—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against A. V. Benoit, a corporation, dealer in artists' materials at 10 West Thirty-third Street, by the following creditors: Henry V. Bell, $350; Edward R. Thieler, $134, and Adolphe H. Benoit, $2,000. It was alleged that the corporation is insolvent, made payments to creditors to prefer them, allowed several judgments to be taken against it, and admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed ex-Congressman Montague Lessler receiver of the assets, which were estimated in the application at $5,000. The corporation had no rating at Bradstreet's. It was incorporated on Aug. 12, 1902, with a capital stock of $150,000, and succeeded to the business of A. V. Benoit, who established it in 1861. He died in October, 1900. When the company was formed, Mrs. Julia Benoit, his widow, became President; Adolphe H. Benoit, a son, Vice President and General Manager, and Maurice V. Benoit, another son, Treasurer. The inventory of Jan. 1, 1903, claimed assets of $76,837 and liabilities of $24,070. The corporation, Adolphe H. Benoit, Maurice V. Benoit, and Ferdinand E. Benoit, each confessed judgment yesterday for $2,978 in favor of Cowing, White & Vail, on a note and for legal services.

REGENTS' EXAMINATION UPSET BY ARRESTS

Two Young Men Arrested for Personating Real Applicants.

SAY THEY'RE COLUMBIA MEN

One Seen Accepting Money for the Fraud, It Is Said—Syndicate in the Business.

Considerable excitement was caused among the 900 students who were taking the State Regents' examination in the Grand Central Palace yesterday morning when two detectives from District Attorney Jerome's office appeared and seized two of the students. As they dragged the young men out to the corridor the 100 young women students who were there became greatly alarmed, and many of them left their desks and tried to get out of the building, not knowing exactly what had happened. The hundred monitors, however, soon restored order.

The two men were taken to the Elizabeth Street Police Station, and later arraigned in the Centre Street Police Court. They described themselves as Isador Finkel, twenty-three years old, of 23 Irving Place, and Louis H. Lobar, nineteen years old, of 27 Avenue A. They said that they were students at Columbia University. They were charged with violating that section of the university law which makes it a misdemeanor for one person to personate another in a Regents' examination.

Charles F. Wheelock, chief of the examiners of the State Department of Education, was in court to prosecute the men. He had been in charge of the examination when the arrests were made. He said that more arrests were to follow. He added that he had received considerable information about frauds perpetrated by young college students who were taking the examinations under the names of others, and that the scheme had reached alarming proportions, causing much trouble to the University Inspectors.

"We asked the authorities here in New York to aid us in running down the frauds," said Mr. Wheelock, "and the result is apparent in these arrests. County Detective Reardon of Mr. Jerome's staff is entitled to considerable credit for the aid he has rendered us. It appears that advertisements were inserted in the newspapers by persons who volunteered to coach students for the Regents' examinations. In answer to one of these advertisements Benjamin R. Scher, a law student, residing at 76 East One Hundred and First Street, was introduced to some of the men under arrest, Lobar. Lobar told Scher that it would cost him $100 to pass the Regents' examination, and explained that coaching was not necessary providing Scher could raise the $100. Scher said he could raise that amount, and Lobar then said that as he was a Columbia student he was fully capable of passing the examination, and would enter under the name of Scher. After Scher had agreed to pay over the money he communicated with the District Attorney, and Detective Reardon was detailed on the case.

"Reardon arranged with Scher to have Scher pay over to Lobar $50 in marked bills. Last night $20 was paid on account, and to-day, while hiding on Third Avenue, Reardon saw Scher pay over the other $30. It was agreed that after Lobar had passed the Regents' examination under the name of Scher the latter was to pay to Lobar an additional $50. After leaving Scher on Third Avenue Lobar went directly to the Grand Central Palace and proceeded to take the examination. Detective Reardon, who had been shadowing him saw him in communication with Finkel. Suspecting that Finkel was another of the students who was working the examination game, he was placed under arrest, too, and he has made a confession admitting his guilt.

Lobar was first seen taking the examination under a brand-new name, the name of George W. Lynam of 33 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City. Detective Reardon watched him until he had completed his examination papers and then saw him go to another part of the room and present a card with Scher's name on it. He then proceeded to take the examination in the name of Scher.

"Other arrests will follow. I cannot state at present just who else will be arrested, but you may depend upon it that there will be other arrests. Men who employed these students to take up the examinations will also be taken into custody. As far as we can learn there is a syndicate of young men engaged in this business."

At the request of Assistant District Attorney Wenchan the prisoners were remanded for examination until 2 o'clock this afternoon. At Columbia last night it was said that it was impossible to tell whether the men were students there or not, as this year's lists were not prepared.

SLEUTH GOES TO THE WOODS.

McAdoo Sends Detective Bureau Men to King's Bridge—Other Transfers.

Police Commissioner McAdoo announced yesterday that he had made several more transfers of detective Sergeants.

Detective Sergt. Charles Connolly is transferred from the Detective Bureau to the King's Bridge Station; Detective Sergt. Charles S. Manning is transferred from the Detective Bureau to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, and Detective Sergt. Jeremiah W. Mahoney goes from the Detective Bureau to the West Twentieth Street Station. Detective Sergt. John F. Reich is transferred from the King's Bridge Station to the Detective Bureau. An exchange of places is made between Detective Sergts. Alphonse J. Rheaume and Alexander Chandler of the Eldridge Street and "Tenderloin" Stations, respectively.

The Commissioner said also that he had ordered the transfer of three of the six plain clothes men who were under Capt. Aloncle at the Charles Street Station to patrol duty in other precincts. They will not go with Capt. Aloncle to the Newtown Station, but Capt. O'Brien, who goes to the Charles Street Station from Newtown, will take his plain clothes men with him. Capt. O'Brien took command at the Charles Street Station at noon yesterday.

BOGUS TELEPHONE INSPECTORS.

Company Warns Subscribers Against Thieves in West Side Apartments.

For the second time the New York Telephone Company has issued a general warning to its subscribers against allowing any man access to residences or apartments for the purpose of inspecting the telephones unless the inspector can show a numbered badge as proof of his connection with the telephone company.

Thieves who have enough knowledge of telephone business to talk intelligently regarding it have been making a systematic canvass of upper west side apartments, gaining entrance by posing as telephone men and then filling their pockets with such articles of value as they are able to conceal about their person. Within the last week over twenty apartments on the upper west side have been robbed in this manner.

GERMANS REVOLT FROM THE PLASTERERS' UNION

Charging Unfair Treatment, 500 Men Form New Body.

CAN'T GET THE BEST JOBS

Seceders Say These Have Been Given to English-Speaking Workmen—May Sign Arbitration Agreement.

Another revolt has taken place in the Plasterers' Society, the German element yesterday leaving the society in a body on account of alleged unfair treatment by the union. The Germans, who number 500, were organized into a separate union under the auspices of the International Plasterers' Union.

The ornamental plasterers, who seceded from the Plasterers' Society last week and went to work under the arbitration agreement, sent representatives to the meeting of the Germans, and advised the new union to sign the arbitration agreement and go to work. Their arguments were so far effective that the Germans appointed a committee to see the Employing Plasterers' Association and find what modifications in the arbitration agreement the employers are willing to make.

President Thompson of the Employing Plasterers' Association attended a meeting of the German plasterers last week and promised that the arbitration agreement would be amended if they returned to work under its provisions. The committee, after seeing the employers, will report back at a meeting of the new union on Saturday night, at which it is expected, the Germans will decide to return to work.

In case this decision is reached, the capitulation of the Plasterers' Society is regarded as practically certain. For several years the Germans have been complaining that they have not been treated fairly by the union. The proceedings at the meetings are conducted in English, and the Germans say they have no voice in its counsels. They also complain that the union, though the Germans are the most skilled, pre-empts the best jobs for the English-speaking members, leaving the worst jobs to be divided among the Germans. If the latter go back to work now, they can materially better their positions in the trade.

The Building Trades Alliance held a long meeting yesterday, but apparently did nothing. An independent strike of journeymen stonecutters, bringing out about 1,500 men, was ordered in seventeen yards in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Jersey City to compel the employers to give jurisdiction over the machine work to the Journeymen Stone Cutters' Union. The union is in the Alliance, but the men it is striking against are not in the Building Trades Employers' Association, and the stonecutters were never brought under the arbitration agreement.

COLLEGE DIVIDENDS TIED UP.

Fourteen of Them Hold Northern Securities Stock, J. J. Hill Says.

In denying reports of a settlement in the Northern Securities Company litigation, James J. Hill said yesterday that fourteen schools and colleges in various parts of the country were stockholders of the Northern Securities Company, and that the attention of the court would shortly be called to that fact with the idea of doing something to provide a distribution of back dividends in order not to cripple these educational institutions.

Incidentally Mr. Hill reiterated his belief in a corn crop of not more than 2,000,000,000 bushels, no matter what the crop experts might say. The gossip about Northern Securities was largely based on the visit which E. H. Harriman paid to the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday. He did not see Mr. Morgan, but he saw one of the partners. It was afterward stated that the visit had had no particular significance, and that Mr. Harriman was in the habit of calling at the office several times a week.

To Review Power House Assessment.

Justice Gildersleeve yesterday granted the application of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company for a writ of certiorari to review the assessment of the Tax Commissioners for the present year upon its power house, which occupies the premises between Ninety-fifth and Ninety-sixth Streets, First Avenue and the East River. The property was assessed at $5,000,000, and the railway company alleges that it is valued at not more than $3,500,000.

PARKER WOULD HAVE JEROME ON THE STUMP

Candidate Holds Long Confab with District Attorney.

FRANCIS B. HARRISON'S JOB

He Will Do the Bulk of the Speaking Against "Odellism"—To Open His Campaign Saturday.

Judge Parker began his conferences of yesterday with David B. Hill and finished with William Travers Jerome. The conference with Mr. Jerome, which was believed to be the most important of the day, did not come to an end until nearly midnight.

Judge Parker met Mr. Jerome at the Union Club. The candidate was accompanied there by Howard Taylor, one of the founders of the Parker Constitutional Club of this city. It is known that the question of Mr. Jerome's appearance on the stump in behalf of the National and State tickets was taken up. While no decision was reached, it was learned that the National leaders have reason to be hopeful of inducing Mr. Jerome to take a prominent part in the fight. It would surprise no one if Judge Parker and the District Attorney should have another conference either here or at Esopus to discuss the matter further.

The party leaders are aware that they must take Mr. Jerome as he is or not at all. He has all along refused to be bound by any promise not to attack certain leaders and methods, and that's where negotiations have always halted so far.

It was said yesterday that to Congressman Harrison, nominee for Lieutenant Governor and running mate of Justice Herrick, has been assigned the task of leading the attack on "Odellism." Congressman Harrison, with Walter H. Bunn, his campaign manager, called at the Seville Hotel to see Judge PJarker yesterday and outlined his plans. It is the plan of the Harrison people to have their candidate make his own campaign; that is, to be independent of both the National and State Committees. This, it is understood, has met with the approval of the party managers, and dates will be made for him in every section of the State.

Mr. Harrison will go to Albany at the end of the week and be present at the notification of Judge Herrick. He will then go to Millbrook, the home of Daniel S. Lamont, where there is to be a flag raising. He will therefore inaugurate his campaign Saturday by the Millbrook speech.

—Prof. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, President of the University of California, who became acquainted with Judge Parker while he was still a member of the Faculty of Cornell University, called at the hotel yesterday and spent some time with the candidate. President Wheeler recently endorsed President Roosevelt's views on the Philippines, and is as close, if not closer to the President than any one on the Pacific Coast.

A chance meeting with George F. Peabody resulted in the visit of Prof. Wheeler to Judge Parker. Prof. Wheeler said:

"I rather thought that I qualified myself permanently for the political shelf when I voted for Palmer and Buckner in 1896. I am not in politics now, nor did it occur to me that my call upon Judge Parker as an old acquaintance would be taken to mean anything political."

Perry Belmont, following his call upon Judge Parker, announced that he would go on the stump.

Ex-Gov. C. S. Thomas of Colorado saw the candidate. He was enthusiastic over conditions in his State.

Senator McCarren was in conference with Judge Parker for an hour, during which time Gov. Edwin Warfield of Maryland and Senator-elect Isidor Rayner called.

The calls of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, and Lewis Nixon, ex-leader, were within a few minutes of each other. Mr. Murphy arrived at the hotel at 2 o'clock, and remained thirty minutes. When he came down he said he had had a very pleasant talk with Judge Parker, but had nothing further to say.

Another caller was E. C. Benedict, the close friend of Grover Cleveland. He said the Democrats of Connecticut were becoming more optimistic every day.

Judge Parker will probably return to Esopus this afternoon. Among other callers received by him yesterday were:

Col. Guffey of Pennsylvania, National Committeeman True L. Norris of New Hampshire, Maurice M. Minton of the Press Bureau at National Headquarters, ex-Commodore L. Cass Ledyard, Samuel J. Tilden, relative of Gov. Samuel J. Tilden; C. M. Preston, ex-Congressman Jefferson M. Levy, De Lancey Nicoll, and Don Farnsworth of Illinois.

Ex-Senator Hill did not return to Albany last night, but, after his morning conference with Judge Parker, saw a number of State leaders in his rooms at the Hoffman House, made a trip down town, and in the afternoon visited National Headquarters, where he saw Chairman Taggart, Vice Chairman Nicoll, and Mr. Belmont. In the evening he dined at the Hoffman House with Senator McCarren and Eugene D. Wood of Albany.

MANHATTAN CLUB RECEPTION.

Besides Judge Parker, Davis and Herrick May Be Here.

At the Manhattan Club last night it was announced that the reception to Judge Parker will take place next Wednesday night. The reception, which originally had been planned as a club affair, has been broadened to mean a general public reception to the candidate.

In addition to inviting all the club members, invitations will be sent to the members of the National Committee, the State Committee, the Parker Constitution Club, the Democratic Club, and several other Democratic organizations. A communication was sent to ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, Vice Presidential candidate, yesterday, asking him to be present, and it is also hoped to get Justice Herrick here.

CZAR'S PORTRAITS MUTILATED.

Torn Down and Stamped Upon by Vandals at the World's Fair.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 28.—The portraits of Czar Nicholas of Russia in the Palace of Varied Industries at the World's Fair were pulled from the wall and mutilated during last night.

When the exhibit was opened this morning the paintings, most of which are in oils and very valuable, were seen scattered about the floor. They were torn and there were marks showing that the features of the Emperor had been stamped upon. One portrait, a large, handsome panel done in colored silk, had been ripped from its supports and subjected to the greatest indignity.

No other objects had been damaged and nothing had been stolen.

The matter was reported to Chief Hulbert and also to President Francis. Detectives were immediately put to work on the case, and every effort is being made by both the exhibitors and the World's Fair authorities to discover the guilty person or persons.

Intense indignation is manifested not only by the Russians in charge of the exhibit, but by the exposition authorities and by visitors to the fair.

STAGE SHOT HURT ACTOR.

Mr. Buhler Stopped Incipient Panic Before Getting Doctor.

Richard Buhler, stage hero, proved himself the possessor of the real brand of heroism last night when, painfully wounded by the accidental discharge of a pistol in the duel scene of "Rupert of Hentzau," he forgot his sufferings and quieted an incipient panic.

Mr. Buhler has been leading man of the Brooklyn Columbia Theatre stock company for three seasons. Last night he was playing the part of Rudolph Rosserdye. At the end of the third act, when struggling with Rupert for the possession of the letter from the Princess Flavia, the pistol, for which his antagonist was fighting, was discharged while pressed against his body. Of course it was loaded with a blank cartridge, but the wadding at such close range made a wound and the flash set his clothing ablaze.

Immediately an alarmist in one of the stage boxes yelled "Fire!"

Mr. Buhler was in much pain, but when he saw men and women dashing for the aisles, in what threatened to become unthinking panic, he made his way to the footlights.

"Don't get excited!" he warned. "There's no fire here. Everything is all right except for a trifling hurt I have sustained. I want a doctor."

The panic subsided. Dr. Legrand, a woman physician who lives near the theatre, was called in. The curtain was rung down and Buhler returned to his dressing room, where his wound was attended to, his part being taken by an understudy.

POOR, BUT OWNS AN AUTO.

Mrs. J. C. Stuart Objects to Making Good for Damage to a Wagon.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 28.—By the snapping of the brake of her auto car on Greenwich Avenue Wednesday morning, Mrs. James C. Stuart, wife of a New York, Baltimore, and Pittsburg contractor, who is residing in the N. Smith cottage on Otter Rock Drive, Belle Haven, this Summer lost control of the machine, and it bumped into the hind wheel of Philip Finnegan's runabout, in which he rides while superintending the work on borough roads. The rim of the runabout came off, and the auto went for some distance before it could be stopped.

Accompanied by Constable Mitchell, Finnegan went to Mrs. Stuart and told her he expected her to pay for the damage done, and also for hire of a new rig while the wheel was being repaired. She refused to pay for hiring a rig, the expense of which she was told would amount to $1, until advised to do so by Judge Burnes, before whom she was taken in his office.

"Is Mr. Finnegan a poor man?" Mrs. Stuart asked the Judge.

"Yes, depending upon his daily wages," was the answer.

"Well, I'm poor, too," said Mrs. Stuart. "My husband has to work, else we wouldn't have an automobile. Everybody thinks because people own an automobile that they are rich and have everything they want and money to give away. I don't have everything I want. Hasn't he got another wagon he can use?"

The reply was in the negative, and she then consented to pay.

THOUGHT BIG BILL A COUPON.

Accused Maid's Fiance Wasn't Used to $1,000 Certificates.

YONKERS, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Abbey S. Ullman of 19 Ludlow Street, from whom two one-thousand-dollar bills were stolen a few days ago, found one of them sewn into the sleeves of a wrapper belonging to Julia Stavzenski, her maid. Yesterday Mrs. Ullman found the other. Julia had given it to her betrothed, Julius Rolaskovaski, and Julius, not believing that one small piece of paper could represent so much real money, had come to the conclusion that it was a new brand of cigarette coupon.

When the first bill was found the maid was placed under arrest. She steadfastly refused to tell what had become of the second. It was known that she was to marry Rolaskovaski, and there was no difficulty in finding the young man at 68 Croton Terrace.

"Julia gave me some kind of a coupon the other day," he readily admitted, "and I showed it to my brother. We had never seen anything like it before, and I put it away with a lot of other coupons I had got at a cigar store. I'll go and get it."

The bill was found just as Julius said it would be. He was held as a witness.

MAINE COUPLE WED SECRETLY.

Miss Chambers Slips Away to Marry Student in Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—W. C. McLeod of Monticello, Me., a senior at the Baltimore College of Surgery, and Miss Grace Chambers, a daughter of A. G. Chambers of Bangor, Me., a lumber dealer, were secretly married here yesterday by the Rev. E. V. Regester at the parsonage of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bride is supposed by her parents to be attending Emerson College, at Boston. She made the trip from that place to Baltimore to be married. Her parents were told of the marriage in a letter sent them last night, and the couple are now awaiting parental blessings.

Not in fifty years will another Exposition equal to that now at St. Louis be seen in this country. The way to reach it is by the West Shore or New York Central. See our ticket agents.—Adv.

MASSACHUSETTS SEEKS THE RECALL OF GURNEY

Governor Resents British Diplomat's Violation of Speed Law.

JUSTICE PHELPS APOLOGIZES

Embassy Secretary's Fine Also Remitted—What the State Department Has Decided to Do.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 28.—Gov. Bates returned to the State House to-day and held a conference with Assistant United States District Attorney Nash and Justice Phelps, as a result of which an apology made by Justice Phelps has been forwarded to Washington and the fine paid by the Third Assistant Secretary of the British Embassy has been returned to him.

At the same time is is understood that the Governor of Massachusetts, while acknowledging the violation of the statute to safeguard international courtesy, is determined to maintain the dignity of the Commonwealth, and to this end, accompanying the apology from Justice Phelps was a suggestion from the Governor to the United States authorities that the British Government be requested to recall Mr. Gurney on the ground that in speeding his automobile faster than local laws permit he failed to comport himself with the dignity befitting his office.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Secretary Moody was advised to-night by a dispatch from the United States District Attorney at Boston that the papers in the case of Third Secretary Gurney had been forwarded to-day by mail.

It is not known whether the Massachusetts authorities have asked the recall of the Secretary, but in case Gov. Bates has made any such request it will get no further than the State Department, which will act on its prerogative in deciding whether there has been a breach of international courtesy or not.

It was decided at the State Department to-day that if the record in the case showed that Mr. Gurney displayed a defiance of the law and acted in an objectionable manner in asserting his right of immunity from arrest it would be delicately suggested to the British Ambassador that Mr. Gurney was an unwelcome guest in this country inasmuch as he had deported himself in a manner unbecoming a guest.

If, however, it should appear that the Secretary was simply injudicious and not defiant in his manner and language, no recommendation whatever would be made and the papers would simply be sent to the British Embassy as a matter of information for the Ambassador.

There is a well-defined expectation in official circles that in either alternative the British Foreign Office in the course of a few weeks will give Gurney a vacation and that he will leave the United States. Even if the most lenient view of the case proves to be true and the Secretary did not commit any violent or distinctly unlawful act, what he did was a blunder, and he will have to pay the penalty that almost invariably attends the injudicious conduct of a diplomat.

NO SYMPATHY FOR GURNEY.

British Official Circles Annoyed at His Claim for Exemption.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Westminster Gazette yesterday afternoon accurately summed up the official opinion of the incident resulting from the fining by Justice Phelps of Lee, Mass., of Hugh Gurney, Third Secretary of the British Embassy at Washington, for violating the speed law relating to automobiles and for contempt of court. It says:

"It seems desirable that gentlemen connected with the legations should keep on the safe side of local law when they use motor cars, but if perchance they transgress, the simplest, quietest plan is perhaps to waive their privilege and pay the fine."

No little annoyance is exhibited in official quarters here at the claim made by Mr. Gurney for diplomatic exemption, with the consequent publicity over a trifling affair. It is recalled, however, that when the son of Henry White, Secretary of the American Embassy in London, and Spencer Eddy, in 1899, when he was Third Secretary of the embassy, were summoned here for riding bicycles on a footpath, similar exemption was claimed and reference was then made to the Statute of 1708, whereby any British official acting as Judge Phelps did toward a diplomat became amenable not only to serve penalties but even to flogging.

The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial this morning, says that Gurney was bound to stand upon his diplomatic rights in order to avoid creating a precedent, but now that amends have been made it is to be hoped if he inadvertently contravened a law, he will tender an apology for his unconscious offense.

NEW BEDFORD GETS $250,000.

Mrs. Sarah Potter of Boston Leaves $1,000,000 to Public Institutions.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—Public bequests aggregating over $1,000,000, the largest being a gift of $250,000 to the City of New Bedford, are contained in the will of Mrs. Sarah Potter of this city, which was filed for probate this afternoon.

Mrs. Potter died on Friday at her Summer home at Beverly. To the Boston Medical Library is bequeathed $150,000; to the Kindergarten for the Blind, at Jamaica Plain, $100,000, and $50,000 to each of the following: Harvard University, Boston Home for Incurables, Hospital Cottages for Children, at Baldwinsville, Mass.; Free Hospital for Women at Brookline, and the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

There are numerous other public bequests in the document, including three of $20,000 each, ten of $10,000 each, and eleven of $5,000, all to New England charitable institutions. In addition to the $250,000 to the City of New Bedford, where Mrs. Potter was born, the income of which is to be expended in purchasing books for the Public Library, St. Luke's Hospital in New Bedford gets $30,000, and the Association for the Relief of Aged $25,000.

Where Is Joseph Robinson?

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 28.—Mrs. John Robinson of New York City to-day called at Police Headquarters and requested assistance in her search for her son, Joseph Robinson, whom she has neither seen nor heard from since he was married in St. Louis nine years ago. He is now about thirty-five years old.

YOUNGSTER IN PERIL ALOFT.

Boy on Roof's Edge Made the Crowd Below Shiver.

Four-year-old Otto Fruh of 1,236 Second Avenue climbed out on the roof of the tenement at that number early last evening as the crowds were going home, and then tumbled ten feet to the roof of the corner house, 304 East Sixty-fifth Street. When he found that he was unable to climb back and was unable to open the scuttle on the roof of the Sixty-fifth Street house, he went to the edge of the roof, hung over, and began to cry for help.

A score of persons saw him, stopped and shouted for him to go back, but the boy only cried the more. Several men rushed into a near-by house and secured blankets, which they tied together in order to catch the boy if he fell.

In the meantime the mother, hearing the cries, ran to the street. When she learned what was up she became frantic and cried to him to go back. The little fellow recognized his mother in the crowd, but failed to follow her warnings.

Policeman Rahfeld rushed up the stairs, and when he reached the top floor discovered that there was no stairway leading to the roof. He secured a table, and, placing it under the scuttle, lifted himself to the roof. The policeman then ran to the edge and pulled the boy away from his perilous position.

Rahfeld then carried the boy to the street and placed him in the arms of the mother, who had fainted several times. The policeman was loudly cheered for his act.

BLEW TRAIN FROM TRACK.

Kansas Cyclone Spared Passenger Coach but Smashed Freight Cars.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. FRANCIS, Kan., Sept. 28.—Shortly before midnight last night a cyclone swooped down on a Burlington Road combination train while it was going twenty-five miles an hour. The cars were blown from the track, the freight cars being smashed into kindling wood, and the crowded passenger coach being deposited gently in the ditch twenty feet away without even jarring the passengers, and without even a window being cracked.

The locomotive remained on the track, the cyclone cutting the train in two parts. The freight from the wrecked cars was scattered over the prairie and the cars themselves were so badly injured as to be past repairing.

BRITAIN'S GIFT TO YALE.

University's Foreign Mission Gets $40,000—Money Has a History.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 28.—Yale has received $40,000 from the British Government for the Yale foreign mission in Changsha, China. The money represents the amount paid by the Chinese Government as indemnity for the murder of two English missionaries in Houman, two years ago.

The missionary society to which the murdered missionaries belonged refused as a matter of principle to accept a cash gift as payment for the murder. The Chinese Government, declined to take back the money. The British Government, to whom the sum had been paid over, declined to use it for Government purposes, but offered it to a number of English missionary societies, all of whom declined it.

The amount will be devoted by the Yale Missionary Society to its building fund in connection with the proposed mission college in China.

SCHWAB BIG BUYER OF STEEL.

Gets Nearly $1,500,000 of Preferred—Bond Rumor in San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Before Charles M. Schwab left here to-day for Portland, Ore., he caused some excitement in the local stock, market by buying up nearly $1,500,000 of United States Steel preferred.

This purchase was made through the local office of the New York brokerage firm of E. F. Hutton & Co. In all 20,000 shares were purchased, and the buying advanced the market from $71.50 to $72.50. Richard E. Mulcahy, manager of the local office of the brokerage firm, would not say for whom the stock was purchased, beyond admitting that it was for Eastern clients.

There is a rumor here that United States Steel preferred is to be made convertible into 5 per cent. bonds, and it is supposed this has something to do with the heavy trading.

CHICAGO HAS SCHOOL STRIKE.

Youngsters Mistake Brunette Teacher for a Colored Woman.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Fifty boy pickets stationed about the McAllister public school here prevented pupils from entering to-day. None of the pickets is more than fifteen years old. Outside the picket cordon a crowd of 700 boys and girls hooted and yelled at the teachers looking from the school windows. Every young striker wore a badge to show that he or she belonged to a "union," and many of the youngsters carried clubs. The picketing was the result of a "strike" which was caused by a mistaken belief of the children that an assistant kindergarten teacher was colored.

After a detail of six policemen had been sent to the school to preserve order, the "strike" was "settled," a committee appointed by the youthful "strikers" having learned that the teacher objected to was merely a brunette. About 80 per cent. of the children went back to their classes. Truant officers began a search for the absentees.

GOV. PEABODY TO STUMP OHIO.

Colorado Executive Accepts Republican Committee's Invitation.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Sept. 28.—Gov. Peabody has been invited to take the stump for the Republican ticket in the State of Ohio. He has accepted the invitation, and leaves this afternoon, to be absent for the next two or three weeks.

The invitation was issued by the Republican State Central Committee of Ohio owing to the labor troubles in Colorado and the prominence attained by the Governor.

T. N. M'CAULEY MISSING, GARVAN SCORES COUNSEL

Says Mercantile Man Hid at Home of Lawyer.

JUSTICE FORFEITS BOND

Attorneys Deny Assistant District Attorney's Imputation—He Says Fugitive Raised $136,000 Before Departure.

Thomas N. McCauley, ex-President of the International Mercantile Agency, the one-time rival of the Dun and Bradstreet agencies, which is now in the hands of a receiver, failed to appear when his case was called for trial before Justice Wyatt yesterday on the charge preferred by a Canadian stockholder through the District Attorney's office.

After a lively scene, in which Assistant District Attorney Garvan urged the court to hold Frederick B. House, George B. Schurman, and Arthur G. Baldwin, counsel for McCauley, responsible for the disappearance of their client, Justice Wyatt declared the $5,000 bond on which the man had been released to be forfeited. Later the police were asked to look out for McCauley and his description was sent broadcast throughout the country.

Justice Wyatt had no sooner taken his seat than Mr. Garvan jumped to his feet.

"Your Honor," he said, "I wish to call your attention to the fact that Thomas N. McCauley is not in the court room. I have reason to believe that he has skipped his bond of $5,000. I would like to have you forfeit his bond and hold his counsel responsible for his escape."

"I know no reason why the defendant should not be in court," said Mr. House of counsel for the absent man. "I assure you that his counsel do not know why he should run away. We know nothing of his flight, if he has gone."

"I wish you would recall the acceptance of the $5,000 bond in this case," interrupted Mr. Garvan. "This defendant is charged with stealing nearly $750,000. When I asked that a larger bail be required these three men, of counsel for McCauley, assured you of their personal integrity and urged that because of that assurance you should accept the sum named. You did so, and now I want these men held responsible. I am informed that, as far back as last Thursday, when the case was called and adjourned until to-day, they knew the defendant had gone. I understand further that within two weeks McCauley has raised $136,000 by mortgaging his property in Chicago."

"I am not inclined to blame counsel," said Justice Wyatt.

"I understand further," Mr. Garvan said, "that while McCauley was preparing for his flight he was hidden in disguise in the home of one of his counsel."

"Which one," demanded the three attorneys, rising as one man.

"Mr. Baldwin," answered Mr. Garvan.

"That is absolutely false," said the lawyer, who was accused. "Mr. McCauley never set foot in my house so far as I remember."

"Where did you get your information?" asked Mr. House.

"I must decline to answer."

"I will declare the bond forfeited," ordered Justice Wyatt, "but if McCauley is produced in court this time to-morrow I will revoke the forfeiture."

The $5,000 bond ordered forfeited was furnished by Joseph D. Carroll of the Fiss, Doerr & Carroll Company, 147 East Twenty-fourth Street.

McCauley lived until a week or so ago at the Hotel Majestic. Nothing is known by the District Attorney's office of his movements since he gave up his apartments there.

ONE DOZEN GRASS WIDOWS.

Twelve Husbands in Baltimore Court Are Asked for Overdue Alimony.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—Twelve grass widows to whom marriage has been a failure visited Judge Dennis, in the Circuit Court, to-day for the purpose of compelling their recreant husbands to pay them overdue alimony. It required two long benches in the courtroom to accommodate them. All sorts of feminine costumes adorned the melancholy dozen. Some wore elaborate gowns, while others were arrayed in garments that had the appearance of having seen better days.

The courtroom had the appearance of a Quaker meeting house, for the bailiffs seated the women on one side and put the gloomy defendants on the other side. Many a withering glance was cast across the room toward the gay deceivers, who had sworn to love, honor, and cherish the twelve grass widows.

ACCUSES CONSUL GOODNOW.

Lawyer of Shanghai Makes Charges Against Our Representative.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Third Assistant Secretary of State H. H. D. Peirce has completed his report on the charges against Consul General John Goodnow at Shanghai. The verdict is in favor of the Consul General.

This, however, is not the end of the case. After Mr. Peirce had begun to prepare his report graver charges were made, which will now have to be examined and passed upon.

These charges are embodied in a memorial to be presented to the President by George F. Curtis, an attorney of Shanghai. They relate chiefly to the collection of fees.
